IT'S HAPPENING

Trinity College carillonneur

Daniel Kerry Kehoe, carillonneur of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., will play the sixth recital in the 82nd annual series of Summer Carillon Recitals on St. Stephen's Episcopal Church's 57-bell carillon on Sunday, July 30. Featured will be original music for carillon, transcriptions of classics, a group of hymn arrangements, popular songs and other familiar selections.

The hour-long recital is free of charge and will take place rain or shine. In case of rain, listen from parked cars. Printed programs will be distributed on Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnics. After the recital there will be an open tower demonstration for all who wish to climb the 45 steps to the carillon keyboard.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083 weekdays, between 9 a.m. noon, or the carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

Old Ship birthday picnic

Since Hingham's Old Ship Meeting House on Main Street in Hingham soon will launch a celebration of its 325th anniversary, it is only fitting that this National Historic site was part of Hingham's Fourth of July Parade.

Thus, a float bearing a replica of the familiar gothic structure will herald the beginning of the celebration – a picnic on July 29, 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., on the lawn of the church. Included will be a timber-raising, samples of period food and children's games, tours of Old Ship and the Hingham Cemetery, a tribute by the Hingham Militia and a few brief speeches.

THE BUILDING #19 BACK-TO-COLLEGE CHEAT SHEET

There may not be any 'shortcuts to knowledge', but here at Building #19, there is an 'Express Lane to Savings'!

Here's a few pointers that will help you Freshmen Bargain hunters look like Phi Beta Kappas in the checkout line:

1. YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT (OR WHO!) YOU'LL SEE...

Leave your shopping list at home when you come to our stores because our bargains don't come thru regular channels; we buy surplus, salvage, irregulars, closeouts,and overruns. ...And every single one is a genuine, bonafide, good enough to brag about bargain.

Yeah, you can't always get what you want, But if you try, sometimes you just might find,... You get what you need: Big savings.

2. YOU SHOULDA BOUGHT IT WHEN YOU SAW IT...

Since real bargains don't last forever, the best ones run out first. So if you see what you want, buy it. You don't want to come back next week and find it gone.

3. YOU KNOW YOU'RE SAFE

I know a guy that bought an air-conditioner off the back of a truck...and when it turned out not to work, funny thing: The truck had moved. If for any reason you're not happy with your purchase, you can bring it back within 30 days for a full No-Hard-Time refund.

4. HAVE A CHAMPAGNE PARTY!

If you can find another store selling anything cheaper than we do, you get a free bottle of Champagne (available in regular and non-alcoholic styles) and, upon verification, we'll beat their price. I know one lady in Wellesley who did it twice in one year!

5. GOOD FOR NOTHING

Every store gives away Free Coffee, (free fake cream, too!) and sometimes, it even tastes

6. —WE'RE ALL OVER THE PLACE!

At this writing we've got 15 stores scattered all over New England, so at least one should be near your campus.

If not, transfer.

Movie review

No splash in 'Water'

"Lady in the Water" (D+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

I see a dead movie. "Lady in the Water," M. Night Shyamalan's embattled seventh film, is a cautionary reminder of the fine line between the childlike — a virtue cherished by such filmmakers as Walt Disney, Steven Spielberg and Shyamalan — and the moronic, and between showmen and charlatans.

In "Lady," Paul Giamatti plays Cleveland Heep (a distant relation to Uriah?), the stuttering (argh) superintendant of a Philadelphia apartment complex built around a swimming pool.

One night, Cleveland, who has a tragic secret, catches someone in the pool after hours, a beautiful young woman named Story (a pale, thin and weepy Bryce Dallas Howard, whose father Ron Howard, weirdly enough, directed "Splash"). She ends up in his bedroom wearing nothing but one of his dress shirts.

Cleveland oddly does not stutter in the mysterious young woman's presence, and instead of assuming she is on a kind of Anne Heche-like, drug-induced walkabout, he comes to believe, altogether too credulously, that Story is a "narf," a sea nymph out of Eastern myth.

Cleveland pumps resident Young-Soon (a winning Cindy Cheung), whose mother knows the myth, for more information and learns that a wolflike creature he has seen is a "scrunt," a beast sworn to kill the narf before it can fulfill its purpose.

The mysterious Story (Bryce Dallas Howard) watches while Cleveland (Paul Giamatti) tries to protect her from danger.

That purpose is to find the chosen one (a writer played by Shyamalan) and inspire him to change the world.

"Do you feel an awakening?" Story asks Cleveland when they first meet. I, for my part, was feeling an a-sleepening.

The film is a stilted allegory about the art of writing, complete with a villainous critic (Bob Balaban). Story, who resembles a pre-Raphaelite mermaid, comes to the chosen one from the "Blue World" of nymphs and presumably fairies, elves and ogres and all sorts of child-book creatures.

Among the apartments' other residents are a young father (Jeffrey Wright), who "adores words" and is adept at crossword puzzles, and his son, a prodigy who discerns plots in cereal boxes. Also in residence in the unnamed complex are five male roommates who chain-smoke, talk and spin yarns. Less coherently, the film features a young Hispanic man (Freddy Rodriguez) who unfathomably works out only the right side of his body.

While nicely shot by Christopher Doyle and often funny, "Lady in the Water" is half-baked. Characters spend too much time explaining the increasingly risible plot to one another.

Shyamalan, of course, is a prodigy who exploded on the film scene with his 1999 smash "The Sixth Sense," a film that has become part of American pop culture. Since then, his films — "Unbreakable," "Signs," "The Village" — have not been as impressive, although they have made a lot of money.

"Lady in the Water" is in many ways a vindication of Nina Jacobson, the Disney executive who told Shyamalan she "did not get" his "Lady" screenplay, an opinion that sent him sullenly to Warner Bros. to make the film and to Sports Illustrated writer Michael Bamberger to document his studio travails in the sycophantic nonfiction book "The Man Who Heard Voices: Or, How M. Night Shyamalan Risked His Career on a Fairy Tale." (Perhaps as a reward for her straight talking, Jacobson has just been fired by Disney.)

Giamatti, who plays the lead in this mainstream summer popcorn movie, is not bad. He's just hobbled by the script like everyone else in the film. To say "Lady in the Water" is self-aggrandizing nonsense is to state the obvious.

Step away from the mirror, Night.

Rated PG-13. "Lady in the Water" contains frightening images and loud, startling noises.

Hall of Fame will rock you like a hurricane

By ARTHUR POLLOCK

CLEVELAND -- Since 1995, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum has been attracting music aficionados to this city to see the world's largest single collection of rock 'n' roll memorabilia.

Does this museum have it all? You bet. Where else can you find Jim Morrison's (The Doors) Cub Scout shirt and baby book, complete with hand- and footprints.

The museum is a guitar lover's paradise, with every vintage Gibson, Fender and Les Paul you could possibly want to see, from Kurt Cobain's (Nirvana) baby blue Fender Custom Mustang to Howlin' Wolf's battered '52 Kay.

There are great film clips tracing the birth of rock 'n' roll. The anti-rock forces are given their due as well -- you can watch old newsreels of record-smashing parties and hear quotes from the likes of FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover: In 1968, he said "rock and roll is repulsive to right-thinking people."

Outlandish clothes are here, too, from Jimi Hendrix's day-glo outfit to Madonna's infamous conical bra get-up.

One of my favorite interactive exhibits is a listening post where you can select the area of the country you grew up in, scroll through previous decades and listen to tapes of your favorite disc jockeys. In just a few seconds, I was transported back to the '60s and '70s by the voices of WMEX-AM's Arnie "Woo Woo" Ginsburg and WBCN-FM's Charles Laquidara.

A new, temporary exhibit on Bob Dylan, Hibbing, Minn.'s most famous son (through Sept. 7), offers a close-up look at the early years of the iconic singer-songwriter. Before Dylan, Hibbing was most known for its iron ore mines, and 1,500 pounds of the stuff is mounted on a museum wall, staring you in the face as you enter the exhibit. Four films take you through the different parts of Dylan's storied career, including interviews with the artist himself. Though Dylan hated being labeled a "protest singer," rare performance footage proves otherwise. We see him singing earnestly at a '63 voter registration rally in Mississippi and at the '63 March on Washington, D.C.

Listening booths let you hear six of Dylan's most famous albums in their entirety.

You can listen to Al Kooper (current Somerville resident) narrate a film on Dylan's seminal appearance at the '65 Newport Folk Festival where he "went electric," much to the dismay of the folk purists in the crowd. There also is a hilarious outtake from "Eat the Document," the unreleased documentary of his '66 European tour.

You can eye a number of Dylan compositions written in longhand -- it might not be the Holy Grail, but to a Dylan fan, seeing the handwritten lyrics to "Blowin' In the Wind" (with chord references) is still pretty special.

Note: The museum strictly enforces a no-photos policy. You can preserve your memories by visiting the well-stocked gift shop which sells plenty of tchotchkes as well as rare novelty items, concert ticket stubs and programs.

For more information go to www.rockhall.com or call 216-781-ROCK.

AVON, Ohio -- We Americans love our regional eccentricities. It seems as if every state in the union boasts of at least one offbeat attraction or festival these days. You can enter a watermelon seed-spitting contest in Wisconsin, partake in the World Grits Festival in South Carolina or visit the Spam Museum in Minnesota.

Add to this curious list the annual Duct Tape Festival, which just celebrated its third year in this small town outside Cleveland.

Avon bills itself as the "Duct Tape Capital of the World." It is home to Henkel Consumer Adhesives Inc., marketer of Duck brand duct tape since 1996.

In a savvy public relations move, the festival was created and now attracts up to 40,000 people each year.

The sticky stuff has been a near obsession for many since its invention during World War II. The military needed a strong yet flexible tape to help waterproof its ammo cases. They called it "duck tape" since it was as impervious to water as a duck's feathers. The name stuck and after the war, handy homeowners found a million and one uses for it, from patching up ductwork to sealing up shotgun wounds.

Today, enough linear miles of tape is sold each year to make it to the moon and back.

The festival is always held Father's Day Weekend, and this year's three-day bash featured the usual assortment of carnival rides and live bands. But the main attractions were, of course, focused on duct tape.

Duct tape fashion

There were duct tape sculptures (a favorite was a hulking gorilla) made by students at the Cleveland Institute of Art, and a fashion show, displaying the latest in duct tape couture, courtesy of the Virginia Marti College of Art and Design. It was amazing to see what one can create with a little imagination and a lot of tape.

It helps that the humble tape comes in 19 colors now, including funky flamingo, fluorescent pink and atomic yellow. In the crafts tent, kids were busy making duct tape wallets, flowers and jewelry and trying out their new "quackers" (duck whistles). A comedy team called the Duct Tape Guys (authors of seven books on the sticky stuff)kept the crowd amused with duct tape jokes and their clever uses for the product. Favorite use of duct tape by wives? Taping down the toilet seat!

The highlight of the festival was the big parade, which this year featured 70 groups and 35 floats. There were duct tape dragons, American flags and even a motorized duct tape-covered couch which scurried back and forth across the street.

Leading the parade in regal fashion was the Duct Tape Dad of the Year, complete with duct-taped crown, scepter and robe.

The festival draws mostly locals but is gaining a foothold on the tourist trade as well.

"Our neighbors thought we were insane," said Aimee Virnig, of Portland, Ore., who flew out with her family to attend this year's event as a 13th birthday present for her son, a duct tape fanatic. They enjoyed it immensely, and Virnig called the parade "fantastic."

In an increasingly homogenized country there is satisfaction in discovering some unique piece of Americana. Why go to Disneyland when you can sojurn to a place where you can see a 5-foot grinning gorilla, created out of 60 rolls of duct tape?

Big rain event is problematic

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Jacob's Meadow has become a holding tank for floodwaters during high rain events. Both excess rainwater and sometimes overflow from the wastewater treatment plant have pooled in the marsh and backed up into residents' yards. When tested, the water shows unusually high levels of bacteria, which are a health hazard.

There are many contributing factors when it comes to the flooding. For one, there are tide gates, which regulate the flow of water out of the marsh; during high tide, the gates do not open. If a heavy rain event takes place during a high tide, there is no way for the water to escape into the harbor. Couple that with a wastewater treatment plant that is taking in excess water through the cracks in the town's pipes, and the water becomes more than the town's drainage system can handle.

"You would have to have 100 dinosaurs pooping on Main Street to get those levels."
— Jim Drysdale, Cedar Acres Lane

The Sewer Commission met Monday and placed Jacob's Meadow flooding as a special item on its agenda. Sewer Commissioner John Beck said on the part of the commission, there are two initiatives it is currently looking into — lowering infiltration and inflow (I&I), or water seeping into the town's clay pipes from the outside in, and mitigating the effects of overflow events at the wastewater treatment plant.

Museum to split director's post

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As the director for the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, education is first and foremost in the mind of Michele Bolduc. In fact, her passion is one she is truly taking to heart, as she will be leaving her role at the museum at the end of the summer to continue her educational career and earn a master's degree from Tufts University.

In late summer of 2003 Bolduc came on board as the first programming coordinator for the Our World Museum. Under her watch the museum has been given an identity, new exhibits have been unveiled, and a strong following of regular visitors has been established.

"While I've had my official last day I'm still traveling down once per week to help through the transition until school starts and I am going to remain on the Board of Directors," said Bolduc, meaning even though she might not be there every day, she will still have her hand in the events going on at the museum.

Bolduc said she has always wanted to go back to school to earn her master's degree, but until she began working at the museum, could not pin down the subject area she would like to pursue or what she would write her thesis on. However, when the museum's exhibit, Biodiversity 911, opened last October, she slowly began to realize education and the environment were her two major passions.

Our World purchased the Biodiversity 911 exhibit — which used to travel around the country but is now permanently featured in Cohasset — from the World Wildlife Fund. Biodiversity is the variety of life on earth, and through the exhibit, children are able to take a closer look at ways they can help the earth's wildlife and natural resources through six kiosks, or learning stations, each focusing on a different environmental issue. Guided by friendly cartoon characters, children learn ways they can proactively help the environment of the world they live in.

Taking a cue from the lessons taught through the exhibit, Bolduc decided to enroll in a two-year program which will end with her receiving her master's

Jean DiGiacomandrea will soon be stepping down as president of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. CDC Board member Lisa Pratt says of Jean: "She breathed new life into the CDC with love and humor and acceptance of everyone."

Leading role, a labor of love

'Jean D.' finishes run as CDC president

By Mary Jane Hanron

"There is such a spirit of family here."
— Jean DiGiacomandrea, Cohasset Dramatic Club

Regardless of the official title, she has held, Jean DiGiacomandrea, affectionately known as "Jean D." plays the parts of backbone, heart and soul of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. From "set painter" to "prop master" to "president", she has embraced her roles in each production.

According to a message composed by DiGiacomandrea herself which appeared in the Spring 2006 program of the CDC performance of "Seussical," - "Of all the titles I've held at CDC there is one that gives me the most pride: friend."

DiGiacomandrea, a Scituate resident, has belonged to CDC for 10 years. "I had done some modeling, but really didn't have any background in theatre," she says. "It's really quite a simple story; I auditioned to see if I liked it and my first role was in 'Dracula.'

"The rest is history!"

What ensued was DiGiacomandrea's growing involvement in the Dramatic Club. As an institution in Cohasset, the CDC had been through many phases of growth throughout the years. Lisa Pratt, CDC Board member, says DiGiacomandrea's loyalty and dedication to the Club is a bond that helps the CDC to evolve, grow and be such a valuable part of the community. "Jean D. breathed new life into the CDC with love and humor and acceptance of everyone," Pratt says. "She is a joy to know and work with."

For more than 80 years, CDC has brought entertainment in the form of community theatre to Cohasset. It requires hard work, commitment, and far more than the hour or two of perfection presented on stage for the audiences' pleasure. Few are willing or able to make such a commitment thus when DiGiacomandrea became involved, the CDC was especially fortunate. DiGiacomandrea believes a sense of fun,

Selectmen to hold open meeting with MBTA

The Board of Selectmen and officials from the MBTA and Executive Office of Transportation and Construction will soon meet in open session to discuss a dispute the two sides have regarding the number of parking spaces the municipal parking lot will have once construction is complete. The three parties were scheduled to meet July 26 for a second-stage dispute resolution meeting, but that meeting did not happen.

On the day of the meeting, attorney for the MBTA William Mitchell sent a letter to the town asking the meeting be held in executive session at a later date, and that the meeting be held at 10 Park Plaza, the MBTA's Greenbush Project office in East Weymouth or on site at the Town Parking Lot.

In a letter sent by Town Manager Bill Griffin to Mitchell, he states the mitigation agreement requires a quorum of the Board of Selectmen be present at the second stage dispute resolution meeting. As a result of Mitchell's request, the Board of Selectmen asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis if the meeting could legally be held in executive session under the Open Meeting Law. DeRensis advised the board there are no exceptions in the Open Meeting Law that would allow the dispute resolution meeting to be held in executive session, and therefore the board is required to hold the meeting in open session. "As it would be a meeting open to the public, the board again requests that the parties first meet at the Town Parking Lot to review the issues in dispute, then return to Town Hall for the more formal dispute resolution meeting.

Griffin then asked the MBTA to get back to the town with a number of workable dates.

Driver falls asleep, hits guardrail

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Chief James Hussey says it is not OK to drive when you are tired. He explained that driving when overly tired could be just as big an impairment as drunk driving. He said police want people to be safe and if a motorist is too tired to drive, police will find a secure place for the car and help the individual get home safely.

Last Thursday (July 27) at about 7:30 p.m., a motorist told police he fell asleep at the wheel and hit the guardrail near Rose Hill Lane and King Street (Route 3A). Luckily, no one was hurt in the incident; the car had to be towed.

"Motor vehicles weigh a couple of thousand pounds," Hussey said. "People should not take risks when driving because they put themselves and others in jeopardy.

"A sleepy driver should pull the car safely over to the side of the road," he said. "Police will help him get home another way."

Speed bumps

Cohasset police got a complaint about speed bumps on Parker Avenue. The caller said the bumps are causing the hydraulic brakes in his vehicle to burn out when he tows his boat. But police said the speed bumps are there to slow traffic down.

"If operators drive slowly over the speed bumps there are no problems," Chief James Hussey said.

Hefty fines

Car owners who lend their motor vehicle to a driver who is not properly licensed could face a $500 fine.

Police stopped a car for speeding on Lamberts Lane last Friday (July 28) and are summonsing the driver to court for not having a current, Massachusetts license, as required when someone is in the state over a certain amount of time.

Chief James Hussey said the operator was driving on a foreign license and the people who owned the vehicle will be fined $500.

Police are also summonsing another motorist to court for being improperly licensed. That motorist's car was disabled on Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue at about 5:30 a.m., Sunday (July 31).

According to the Department of Motor Vehicles, if you have recently moved to Massachusetts, you must obtain a valid Massachusetts license upon becoming a resident.

Erratic driver

Police caught up with an "erratic" motorist in Scituate. As it turned out, the operator was not operating under the influence of alcohol – which is often the case with erratic driving – but had been looking for something in the glove compartment, causing the car to swerve.

The operator was given a verbal warning, Chief James Hussey said.

"We are all guilty of this at one time or another," Hussey said about being distracted while driving. "But just taking our eyes off the road for one or two seconds to look in a glove compartment, change the dial on the radio, or dial a cell phone can be very dangerous.

"Remember a motor vehicle weighs a couple of thousand pounds."

Spate of vandalism

Chief James Hussey said police are still investigating incidents of vandalism that occurred last week and included slashing tires on 15 motor vehicles, including three school vans, and the destruction of three mailboxes.

Hussey said anyone with information should call the 781-383-1055 ext. 1050 or send an email to info@cohassetpolice.com.

Bridge jumpers

Chief James Hussey said the police continue to grapple with the problem of bridge jumpers.

"Like other South Shore towns, we continuously check the bridge(s) and remove all people found there," he said. "These people are mostly youths between 16-19 years, some younger and some older. We have brought some people to their parents who we know we have warned prior. We have arrested others if alcohol was found part of the mix.

"We continue to warn the jumpers of the potential hazard they cause for themselves and others (ie; boaters)," he said. "Many of the people are from out of town who have heard about the bridge by word of mouth. Someone mentioned to me that it is on a website. We will continue with this vigilance."

Chain reaction

A three-car, chain-reaction crash on South Main Street last week was the result of a motorist following the car in front too closely, police said.

On Tuesday (July 25) at 12:20 p.m., three vehicles were traveling on South Main Street toward Scituate. The first vehicle, a 2000 blue Jeep Cherokee slowed to take a right-hand turn onto Beechwood Street; the second vehicle, a black 2000 Dodge Dakota stopped; the third vehicle, a 1993 Toyota Corolla, hit the rear of the Dodge pushing it into the Jeep.

The operator of the Toyota was cited for failure to stop and following too close, Chief James Hussey said. No one was treated at the scene, but later one of the people involved did seek medical attention for a shoulder injury.

Car into woods

At about 1:40 a.m., Wednesday (July 26) a motorist, who had just made a right turn onto Route 3A from Sohier Street had to swerve into the southbound lane to avoid a vehicle traveling on the wrong side of the road. To avoid being hit head-on, the motorist swerved, drove off the road and into the woods, police said.

Larceny from boat

Police are investigating reports of gas cans, an anchor, paddle, and lawn chairs being taken from a local boat. The victim came into the station to report the thefts at about 8:15 p.m. Wednesday (July 26). The man said some items were stolen two weeks ago and some the night before. Police urge all residents to report a theft right away.

Teens out late

Police answered two calls last Thursday (July 27) at 12:25 a.m. and 12:28 a.m. The first call was about a bunch of kids trying to get into the north gate at Sandy Beach. The second caller said a group of kids from the beach smashed his garage and took off. Police stopped one car and interviewed the occupants but the car did not fit the description of the vehicle that hit the garage. The incident is still under investigation.

Missing child

A little girl was not "missing" after all from the Summer Playground, a day camp sponsored by the Recreation Department. Last Thursday at about 11:30 a.m., police received a report about a missing six-year-old girl. According to Chief James Hussey, as it turned out, one rec group was heading to the pool and the other was heading back to Deer Hill School. The little girl spotted her sibling in the other group, left her group, and walked back with the kids in the other group. The leader of the first group was one short, but the matter was soon resolved when the girl turned up at the school, Hussey said.

This sign depicts active senior living at Cedarmere, which is being built on the 41-acre former Hayes Estate, accessed off Route 3A and Beechwood Street. Building Commissioner Bob Egan said construction has seemingly stopped on the site, as he hasn't seen any activity since the beginning of June.

Cedarmere stalled for months, not years

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For a project which was in the headlines for at least a year and a half during permitting, the construction phase of the Cedarmere development has been quiet. In fact, some would say it has been too quiet.

Many are speculating the market just wasn't there for $1 million luxury condominiums for the 55 and older set and therefore, construction has stopped.

However, representatives from Leggat McCall say the project is only temporarily on hold. Executive Vice President of Development Mahmood Malihi said the company continues to be committed to the project, but due to the condition of the residential housing market, the company has decided to pause construction and wait for the market to improve.

The wastewater for the site will be handled by an on-site septic system and Malihi said there needs to be a critical mass of housing built to ensure the system has enough flow to work properly. With a small amount of residents signed on to purchase housing, building the full septic system would not be cost-effective. "We intend to improve the project while we pause," he said, with the intent of picking construction back up on the not too distant future. "We're looking at months, rather than years," he said.

Due to the rumors floating around town, the Planning Board has asked developers from Leggat McCall to attend its Aug. 16 meeting to provide an update and clear up the rumors. Developers also agreed to meet with Planning Board Chairman Al Moore prior to that meeting, and Moore hosted an entourage of development team members Thursday morning at his business office.

Moore said at the meeting, developers indicated there has been a turn in the housing market and while many people expressed interest in purchasing units at Cedarmere, they are worried they will not be able to sell their family homes to be able to purchase a unit. Moore said in real estate, timing is everything, and developers felt pausing construction might give potential buyers more time to sell their homes.

In addition, Moore said developers were concerned about the language in the condominium documents for the first round of units built. There will need to be a septic system in place for the first round of nine homes built to enable occupancy, but they will not generate enough flow to power the entire on-site system planned for the development. Therefore, a temporary system might have to be built specifically for those initial units, and language in the contract will have to account for that. "The septic, coupled with the slow market led them to take a temporary step back," said Moore. "They said they are still committed to the project," and the delay will be months, not years, he said.

When Leggat McCall purchased the project, it became owner of the property, permits and the lawsuit with the Sewer Commission, which developers from King Taylor, LLC launched against the town in an effort to gain a town sewer connection. Moore said the suit is one more wrinkle to be ironed out as the project progresses.

"They were going to build in groups of eight and the first round was also going to have a model."
— Robert Egan, building inspector

Moore said from the town's standpoint, there are still some issues to be discussed regarding its Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which the project filed under. He said his board has discussed the language before and developers agree it is a little "tight." Moore said the areas of the bylaw which deal with children are very restrictive, as someone wishing to have their grandchild stay with them for a few weeks or a month in the summer would be in violation, which could deter potential buyers. "We've got to make some changes because I think the languages goes beyond what was intended," said Moore. Changing the bylaw might require going back to Town Meeting with a revision.

While Moore said the rumors are "ripe" in town when it comes to Cedarmere, he feels the developers are genuine in their statements and look forward to bringing the project to fruition. "They seemed very forthcoming and they're also a very well organized and deep-pocketed organization," he said, adding he fully expects the project will be built out the way the company says it will.

Building Commissioner Bob Egan said it was early June the last time he saw any activity on the site.

"When projects like this get going, usually they're like an ant farm," said Egan, as the 41-acre site with entrances off Beechwood Street and Route 3A was slated to have a total 105 units senior housing, including 27 affordable units. "I never saw a whole lot of activity going on up there," he said, although the developers are permitted to build nine homes.

"They were going to build in groups of eight and the first round was also going to have a model," Egan said. To date, two houses have been built on the site. But even if the houses were built they have no sewer or water connections which means they are not livable, he said.

Plans for the site currently include building 105 total units, of which 60 will be luxury town homes selling in the $1 million range. There will be 14 market-rate ownership condominiums in the Manor House, which will sell for slightly less. Cedarmere was filed under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which requires an affordable component. Therefore plans also include building 27 units of affordable housing in a building dubbed the Westerly House.

The SMROD bylaw has since been sunsetted by Town Meeting and no longer exists.

The Planning Board will have developers from Leggat McCall on its Aug. 16 agenda. The meeting begins at 7 p.m. and will be held in the basement meeting room at Town Hall. All are welcome to attend.

place to control and disinfect overflow" at the treatment plant, should that ever happen again, he said. However, chlorine is used to disinfect overflow waters, which can be very detrimental to marine life.

Beck added while there were high levels of fecal coliform bacteria (found in human and animal feces) found in the flood waters at residents' homes after the Mother's Day Storm, he is not convinced that is due to the water which overflowed from the treatment plant.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm very upset any time it overflows, but you can't say that was directly attributed to the plant," he said, adding during a storm all the waste in the path of the water is carried downstream with it.

However, resident Jim Drysdale said, as an environmental biologist, he is very familiar with bacterial testing and said he has gone into Jacob's Meadow on more than one occasion to take water quality samples. He said he has found fecal matter floating in the meadow, which is much more than can be attributed to animal waste from yards being flushed out with the rain.

"You would have to have 100 dinosaurs pooping on Main Street to get those levels," he said. Drysdale said recent measurements taken after the storm in Jacob's Meadow were 200 times the level the state deems safe. The state's highest levels would cause 2 percent of the people who came in contact with the water to become ill, Drysdale said.

In addition, without the water's being able to flow out of the marsh in a timely fashion, Drysdale said the conditions are perfect for breeding more bacteria. "We need to get rid of the gate and find something more appropriate," he said.

Due to the flooding, some residents said they did not understand how the town could be planning to add 400 homes from the Little Harbor area to the current wastewater treatment system when it has already overflowed more than once.

Engineer Dan Coughlin of Coughlin Engineering Services said simply put, when the membranes, which look like long perforated straws that filter the water in large holding tanks at the plant, are upgraded — the water will be able to flow through at a quicker pace, meaning it spends less time in the tank per unit. In addition, he said the new pipes which will be installed are not made of clay and do not have the same problems with I&I as the town's current pipes do. "It's a tight system and a lot less susceptible to I&I," he said.

Members of the Sewer Commission said they felt comfortable hooking up the Little Harbor area to town sewer, but reminded those in the audience for two years they all defended the commission's stance not to allow new development to tie in to town sewer.

"We battled some members of the Board of Selectmen and even the Planning Board for a little while, but I think we did the right thing," said commissioner Ray Kasperowicz.

CEA to keep volunteer coordinator position

With total fiscal resources that total less than one-half of one percent of a $30 million budget, making ends meet is no easy task.

With the failed override this May, the Council on Elder Affairs has had to come up with some creative solutions to keep things running as usual with limited funding. With total fiscal resources that total less than one-half of one percent of a $30 million budget, making ends meet is no easy task.

But for new Director of Elder Affairs Linda Elworthy, the challenge has been met and the volunteer coordinator position, which was on the chopping block, will be saved.

Upon reviewing the fiscal 2007 budget with former director Kathy Bryanton, Elworthy realized there were some unspent personnel monies, which could be used to partially fund the position. In addition, she would like to use money from the Coblentz Fund to cover the cost of the position until the Friends of the Senior Center are reestablished and raising funds, or she is able to secure grant money.

Martha Horsefield has been employed as the Coordinator of Volunteer Services at the CEA since 2003. In a memo to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Elworthy said, "Her position is vital to the continued functioning of senior programs and services. In fiscal 2005, under Martha's guidance, 140 volunteers provided 6,641 hours of service at an estimated value of $105,539. Through the Coordinator of Volunteer Services, each prospective volunteer is interviewed, completes education and orientation specific to his or her assignment."

"The Coordinator of Volunteer Services ensures there are ongoing educational workshops for all volunteers," including safe driving practices, safe handling of food and office procedures, she said. The range of services provided by volunteers include: van drivers, food servers, escort food shoppers, friendly visitors, CEA board members, office assistants, instructors for exercise, computer training and crafts. "The volunteer program is an integral part of Cohasset Elder Affairs and we could not function without their support," she said.

Cohasset father/son tennis team is a hit at family classic

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

KEEP COOL

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone is having a chance to cool off after this very hot week. Even me, who does not care for air conditioning very much, looked for some cool relief for a day or two. I have seen and talked with so many people out and about in town over the last few weeks that have family and friends visiting from all over the country. It is so nice to see people kicking back a bit and enjoying the people who mean the most. Continue to enjoy the month of August.

BABY GIRL

Well, we have not one but two new residents of Cohasset to welcome.

First, but certainly not least, Davenport Crocker Jr., mom Kendra and big sister Addison, who is 21 months old, are thrilled to welcome and announce the newest Crocker family addition, Molly Francesca Crocker. Molly was born at Massachusetts General Hospital on July 25th at 10:42 a.m., she weighed 6 pounds, 14 ounces and measured 19-3/4 inches in length. Everyone is doing terrific and little Molly is adapting to sleeping and eating like a champ! Molly's grandmother is Jane Crocker is from Cohasset as well. Thank heavens for little girls, congratulations to your wonderful family

OH BOY

Our second new resident here in town to welcome is sweet baby James August Donohue! Little James was born on July 19 to Kim and Jim Donohue (son of James and Grace Donohue from Cohasset). Big sister Caroline (who just turned 3) is doing a great job taking care of her new baby brother! Oh the joys of children, your family is so lucky. Congratulations from all.

NUMBER ONE!

Congratulations to Nicholas Silvia, the son of Donald and Jennifer Silvia. Nick attends South Shore Vo-Tech, and recently received four awards of excellence in English, math, science and his related major, computer information technology. Nick finished his first year at SSVT with a 3.8130 GPA, ranking him #1 in the freshman class of 169. What a great accomplishment, Nicks family and friends couldn't be prouder.

FOOTBALL FUN

Calling all former football players and fans of Cohasset Football! Time to reminisce!

Dig out your old football related photos! The Cohasset Gridiron Club is now accepting ads for their 2006 Football Program. The Club is hoping for ads with photos of former football/powder puff players and cheerleaders. In addition, any ads may be called in to Derry at 781-383-2529. The Football Program is the major fundraiser for the Gridiron Club. The funds raised provide scholarships and support for the Cohasset High School football program. During the season, current football players will deliver the programs door to door.

UNCERTAINTY

I would like to make a correction to a piece that was in last week's column about Katherine Stanton's granddaughter Andrea. Unfortunately, it is not certain at this time whether Andrea will make it out of Damascus on August 14th. She is there with several friends and some are reporters from the Washington Post and Time. We all hope to hear soon of when she will be home.

MUSIC LADY

Calling all Music Lady (aka Beth Green) Fans! Beth will be here in town for One Musical Week starting on Monday, Aug. 7 giving classes, family concerts and more for fans both old and new! For more information or to register, go to www.onecreativeplace.net.

TENNIS DUO

On July 30th, William Marsden and his son William played tennis in New Haven, Conn., at the Yale University Bowl, in the Father/Son (11 & under) 2006 Pilot Pen Tennis Family Classic. They competed against 64 other teams from Conn., Mass., R.I. after qualifying earlier this year at the Weymouth Tennis Club regionals. William and Bill won the first two matches before losing in the Quarterfinals; it was quite an accomplishment for young William in the early stages of his promising tennis career! To have made it that far is awesome! Dad was right, this was a great feat for William and the bond between dad and son is so wonderful. Congrats to you both.

DEAN'S LIST

Super job to Jari R. Martin who made the dean's list for the spring 2006 semester at University of Massachusetts Dartmouth.

And congratulations are in order to William MacArthur III as he was named to the deans list for the Spring semester University of Maine at Farmington

SWIM/DIVE TEAM

The Cohasset High School Swim and Dive Team will be having a Lobster Fest and silent auction fundraiser on Friday, Sept. 8 at Atlantica from 6:30 to 10:30 pm. This team, which was re-established last year and is a joint team with Scituate High school — is not yet included in the Cohasset athletic budget and the Cohasset side of the team is privately funded.

Last year this team came in second in the Patriot League with 18 swimmers qualifying for Sectionals and 10 swimmers qualifying for, and competing, in the State Competition. The Lobster Fest dinner includes clam chowder, lobster, mussels, barbequed chicken, corn on the cob, caesar salad, rolls and watermelon. A cash bar will be available.

Tickets are currently on sale at a cost of $35 for the lobster and $25 for "chicken only" and can be obtained by contacting Mandy Mahoney (383-9812) or Brenda Regan (383-0454). Gather a group of friends to celebrate the arrival of fall and support this team while enjoying a fabulous feast at Atlantica!! Very tasty for all who attend and supports a fantastic cause.

BC HIGH AWARDS

The President of Boston College High School is pleased to announce that the following Cohasset students recently received special awards at an assembly to honor BC High undergraduates. Alexander G. Hunt '07 won an Excellence award in Algebra II; Thomas J. Chase '08 won an Excellence award in Spanish II; Kyle T. Desisto '09 won a Maxima Cum Laude Silver Medal for his high score in the National Latin Exam; and Eric P. Vanderpool '09 won an Excellence award for two subjects: Intro to Art and Christian Thought. Fantastic efforts!

PAN-MASS CHALLENGE

A local husband and dad is getting ready to ride this weekend in the 197-mile Pan-Massachusetts Challenge. Peter Vitello, husband to Jacqui Goyette-Vitello and dad to Amanda, age 7 and Peter, age 2 will be setting off in Sturbridge on Saturday at 6 a.m. He will ride 112 miles to the Mass. Maritime Academy in Bourne where he will be cheered and welcomed by hundreds of cancer survivors, family members, and volunteers. Among those who will be meeting him will be his mom, Mae, who is a two-time cancer survivor herself.

The next morning, he will take off for the 85-mile journey to Provincetown where he will receive a much needed and well-deserved rest after this wonderful achievement. The Pan-Mass Challenge is here to help raise funds for the Dana Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund and your help with a pledge would be so much appreciated and put to good use. Peter has a personal fundraising goal of $3300 which will bring his seven-year cancer fundraising total to over $18,500. Team Vitello, which includes his brothers Paul and Shaun along with his sister, Claire has a combined goal of $13,000. To make a donation, call 781-383-2668. Good luck Peter, the town of Cohasset will be thinking of you and all are so very proud!!!

'CINDERELLA'

Don't miss your chance to be swept away by the enchanting story of "Cinderella" presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Drama Workshop from tonight through Sunday, Aug. 6. The cast of 34 consists entirely of young people, ages 7 to 18, and hailing from Cohasset, Scituate and Hanover. Everyone is particularly excited about this production as it brings to life Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein's original story and musical score, and in which Julie Andrews originated the role of Cinderella onstage. The ensemble has been rehearsing 3-4 evenings a week since mid-June, while also participating in educational drama workshops on vocal training, how to prepare to audition for a show, staging and stage direction, improvisation and sound and lighting effects. The show takes place at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. Show times are Friday at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10, and are available at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset, Front Street Books, Scituate, or by calling 617-697-2115.

That is it for now. Send in all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00.

Welcome back to Eastwick

Wonderful 'witches' party raises money for charity

A "Witches of Eastwick" T-shirt is a reminder of the fabulous summer when Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer came to Cohasset.

Scituate resident and retired Cohasset schoolteacher, Faith Bowker Maloney, worked as an extra for 11 days during the filming of the "Witches of Eastwick" in the summer of 1986.

Special guests "Jack Nicholson" and "Cher" visit with, from left, Sine Pounder, Judy Wainwright, Nancy Garrison and Faith Bowker Maloney. Pounder and Wainwright, who both worked in the village in 1986, spent the summer watching "Witches of Eastwick" being filmed. Garrison and Maloney were both extras in the film.

Our World director to educate herself

degree in urban and environmental policy and planning. She said after she earns her degree, she plans to take the knowledge she has gained and pass it on to children. She said with the positive experience she has had in Cohasset, she wouldn't rule out coming back to the museum in some capacity, should the opportunity present itself.

But for now the search is on to find someone new to run the museum. Bolduc said the Board of Directors has actually decided to hire two part-time people to carry out her duties. There will be a development director and a programming coordinator making sure new programs are constantly in the works and Bolduc's hard work laying the foundation of the museum is continued. "We're still interviewing for the programming coordinator position, and we're going to roll it all out as one big announcement" when both positions are filled, she said.

Bolduc said her leaving would be the only change at the museum. Hours will stay the same, as will activities. In fact, new programs will be added this fall. "If anything, things will only continue to get better," she said.

The fall program schedule will be available in September, but Bolduc said South Shore residents can expect to see a new "Local Motion" class for toddlers which explores music and motion as well as hopefully a new instrument based music and motion class with local music teacher Jim Armstrong.

While the museum had scheduled a community picnic at the playground for Aug. 13, it has been rescheduled to a date to be announced in either September or October when the weather cools down. "This will be a free event sort of like a tailgate where everyone brings their own food and beverages. We will play games and have water balloons and of course the museum will be open," she said, adding, "It is a nice way for the community to get together."

With the last full month of summer gearing up, Bolduc said the museum's craft series would be exploring creatures from the ocean. Children can create and ocean scene, a jellyfish or a starfish necklace over the next few weeks.

In addition, the 50/50 raffle is back and residents may purchase tickets for $20 each or six tickets for $100. The more tickets sold, the bigger the prize as the winner receives half of what is brought in. Last year, the winner took home close to $2,000, but donated some of that money back to the museum to become a "founding member." The drawing this year will take place at the second annual Cocktails Around the World party on Nov. 4. Progress for the raffle can be monitored on the museum Web site.

While Bolduc said the last couple of months have been really emotional, as it is very hard to say goodbye, she said she is grateful to the museum for helping give her the knowledge necessary to pursue her dream. "It's been incomparable to anything else. It was an amazingly great opportunity. The South Shore as a whole is a wonderful community. It was very fulfilling and enriching for me, and I hope for the lives of everyone the museum has touched."

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum is open Wednesday through Friday through the summer from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $5 per person, or free for members. The museum is located at 100 Sohier Street, just behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and next door to the Music Circus. Visit the museum's Web site at www.ourworldcgdm.org.

Cohasset border collies need homes

Seven Border Collies previously owned by the Mia and John Dean of Meadow Lane are currently in foster care at New England Border Collie Rescue, Inc. The organization is looking for capable homes in which to place the dogs, which have now had their vaccinations updated, have been heartworm/lyme tested and have been spayed or neutered.

The dogs have spent time (a minimum of two weeks for some, longer for others) in experienced foster homes, learning better social skills and being assessed for their potential in future homes. NEBCR, Inc., believes with positive reinforcement training, all of the dogs will be able to be successfully re-homed.

The dogs are infamous in town, as they have either bitten or threatened four residents. As a result, an extensive dog hearing was held which led the town to require all nine dogs to undergo a behavioral analysis. The family was told in April it could keep five of the dogs, as long as they were in turn neutered or spayed and restrained at all times, either on a leash or in an enclosure on the family's property. At no time were the dogs allowed to leave the property.

However, on Memorial Day, all nine of the dogs were seized downtown. According to police reports, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy was called to Pleasant Street on Memorial Day when the dogs escaped from Cohasset Greenery, owned by Alida Dean, daughter of Mia and John Dean. The dogs allegedly began coming after people and "tearing things up." It took police officers and Murphy five hours to corral the dogs, which were then brought to the Marshfield Animal Shelter.

A press release sent by the NEBCR, states border collies are "definitely 'not your average dog.' Proven to be the smartest dog on earth, they are very capable of outwitting the average pet owner. Their exercise requirements are often not met and when a lack of exercise combines with a lack of mental stimulation and improper or no training, the results can be disastrous. One of the most common reasons border collies are 'turned in' is the complaint of 'child herding.' Yes, these bright dogs were bred to herd livestock and when kept cooped up while families work, they find their own herding 'work' to do — as the residents of Cohasset have seen."

Anyone interested in opening their home to a border collie, either as a "foster parent" or for permanent adoption should contact the New England Border Collie Rescue, Inc., through its Web site at www.nebcr.org. The Cohasset dogs, because of certain behavioral issues, will only be placed in experienced border collie homes. To make a tax-deductible contribution to the organization, please send a check to New England Border Collie Rescue, Inc., c/o Kathy Chittenden, Treasurer, 760 East Road, Stephentown, NY 12168.

Local ophthalmologist with a vision

To donate services in Guatemala

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Of all five senses, many would say eyesight is the most important. Just ask Cohasset resident Dr. Gerri Goodman, an ophthalmologist whose life is dedicated to helping people see, and she will attest to the fact that her patients report the world is a different place without proper vision.

Gerri Goodman will travel with a team of doctors to the Hospital de la Familia in Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala on Aug. 24.

In countries, which are not as fortunate as the United States, people are going blind from treatable conditions, which Goodman said no one should have to experience. To that end, she is gearing up to take a trip to Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala where she will spend nine days volunteering her medical services to the people of that region.

"I can't imagine what it must be like to be blind," said Goodman, adding she expects the majority of the work she will be doing while in Guatemala will be cataract surgery to correct vision loss. A cataract is a clouding of the lens, which is the part of the eye responsible for focusing light and producing clear, sharp images. The lens is contained in a sealed bag or capsule, and as old cells die, they become trapped in the capsule. Over time, the cells accumulate, causing the lens to cloud, making images look blurred.

Goodman is a doctor for the Nielsen Eye Center, which has offices in Quincy as well as Derby Street in Hingham. She was one of the first ophthalmologists to perform refractive eye surgery (more commonly known as LASIK surgery) in the United States and was involved in the studies which gained the surgery approval from the Food and Drug Administration. She is a relatively recent resident of the South Shore as she and her family, which includes husband Dan Counihan and their son Brian, 9, moved to Jerusalem Road from Baltimore, Md. in 2005.

While she had always thought she would like to travel to foreign countries to give medical aid, the timing was never right, as she wanted to wait until her son was a little bit older before taking that kind of a trip. Her husband also travels a lot for his job at Gensyme in Cambridge, which caused scheduling conflicts. But the timing is now right and Goodman will travel with a team of doctors to the Hospital de la Familia in Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala on Aug. 24, where she will stay until Sept. 3.

Goodman said her husband and son have backed her decision to go 100 percent. "They are excited for me because they know it's a passion of mine. Sure they'll be sad I'm gone, but they've been very supportive," she said. While she said her mother has also been very supportive, she is still a little apprehensive about Goodman's going on the trip. "My mother is still a mother no matter how old I get," she said.

Dr. Gerri Goodman stands next to an Allegretto Excimer laser, which she uses during LASIK eye surgery to correct poor vision in her patients. Goodman will be traveling to Guatemala Aug. 24 to volunteer her time and services to treat patients who might otherwise lose their eyesight.

During her stay, she will donate her time and services to patients, some of which make their appointments more than one year in advance. The hospital relies on the generosity of surgical teams from the United States and Canada that provide highly skilled treatment and perform more than 1,500 surgeries every year. Only recently have ophthalmology teams been included on this mission, and a great backload of patients are awaiting their expertise.

"Everyone says once you do it once, you get hooked," said Goodman of practicing traveling medicine. In fact, she said when gathering information about traveling medicine, she consulted Dr. Jim Mitterando of Cohasset Family Practice. Mitterando has volunteered his medical services in Africa, Indian and Aboriginal Australia. "He helped me figure out what I'd need for Guatemala," said Goodman, adding his positive experience has left her feeling like a little kid in anticipation of her trip. "I hope we can make a big difference," she said.

Four large surgical teams of more than 35 members travel to Nuevo Progreso each year. These teams consist of plastic and reconstructive surgeons, general surgeons, doctors of obstetrics and gynecology, ear, nose and throat specialists and ophthalmologists. Goodman said there are slated to be three ophthalmologists on her trip.

Nuevo Progreso is in the state of San Marcos in southwestern Guatemala. From the United States, it takes 7 hours to fly to Guatemala City, followed by an 8-hour bus ride to get to the small hilltop village, which lies 50 miles from the Mexican border. About 2,500 people live in Nuevo Progreso with roughly 25,000 more in the surrounding villages. Unemployment is around 50 percent with some finding work on the coffee plantations and the rest marginally self-supporting, living on the land.

Hospital de la Familia originated in 1972, when an American by the name of Jack Younger was exploring Mexico and Central America in his light plane and came across the town of Nuevo Progresa. Younger met the Cayetano Bertoldo, a priest dedicated to improving the welfare of poor Mayan Indian families, and a lasting friendship ensued.

Younger was an experienced builder from the San Francisco bay area and was also a member of a men's club named "The Family." With his friends in the club, Younger raised the necessary $100,000 to begin construction of a new hospital. His vision came to fruition Feb. 8, 1976 when Hospital de la Familia was formally dedicated to the medical and surgical treatment of native Guatemalans. Today, the hospital has a full-time staff, which cares for an average of 15,000 patients per year.

Goodman said everyone she has spoken to about traveling medicine says the same thing: it is a life-altering experience. 'We lose such perspective in America and we take things for granted," she said. "I am so excited to see how another part of the world is and get a deeper appreciation for what we have."

Flags fly high at Gold Star memorial

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It is the job of a mother to support her child. Over the course of our nation's history, many mothers have had to put on a brave face and say goodbye to their sons and daughters who have left home to serve their country, never to return.

"We feel it also pays respect to their families, who know best the high price of freedom."
— Glenn Pratt, Veterans Memorial Committee

Cohasset's 22 Gold Star Mothers, who have lost sons in World War I, World War II, and the Korean and Vietnam Wars, will forever be remembered through a monument at the Woodside Cemetery, located on North Main Street. On the anniversaries of the deaths of their sons, flags fly high to remind the town of the sacrifice of both.

"We wanted to make the memorial a living tribute to their memories," said Chairman of the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt, adding it has been five years since the Gold Star Mother's memorial was dedicated and the flags have been flown since the beginning. He said the flags are flown on the anniversary of the soldier's death for 24 hours, and are lit up at night. "We feel it also pays respect to their families, who know best the high price of freedom," he said.

Herbert Gleason bows his head during the November 2001 dedication of the Gold Star Mothers memorial at Woodside Cemetery. Herbert's brother, Howard Gleason, was killed in World War II. One of the monuments at the memorial is dedicated to the brothers' mother, Emily.

The portion of the cemetery which includes the Gold Star Mother's memorial is the "new" section. The original portion of the cemetery was built in 1906. At that time, there were roughly 2,400 graves on the plan. By the late 1980s, the town began running out of burial plots and was unable to sell graves on a pre-needed basis. Some families were unfortunately forced to carry out interment in neighboring towns.

To aid the situation, a Cemetery Study Committee was formed in 1986 to develop a strategy for long-term relief. Over the next 16 years, several options for a new site were proposed before the town voted in the spring of 2001 to expand Woodside. The expansion provided 1,800 additional burial locations, and for the first time, the town was able to offer crypts for inurnment of cremated remains.

When Cohasset embarked upon its expansion project, "We felt we needed a focal point and a central theme," said Pratt. With the clearing of trees and planting of grass, there wasn't much appeal at the site, as it was relatively bare, until the memorial was erected.

Pratt said Cohasset is fairly unique in its paying tribute to Gold Star Mothers. He said he knows the town of Hull has a memorial at one of its cemeteries, but has not heard of any others in neighboring towns. While he said over the years he has been asked why such a tribute is not paid to fathers, traditionally only the mothers have been given recognition.

Today, Gold Star Mothers June Simeone and Elizabeth Maree are the town's only two living Gold Star Mothers. Simeone's son Craig served the country in Vietnam, paying the ultimate sacrifice on Memorial Day, May 30, 1969. Simeone was a 1966 graduate of Cohasset High School and received much commendation for his service including the Bronze Star Medal with V for valor, with the Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of his second award, the Purple Heart Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Medal, Parachutists Badge, Combat Infantry Badge, and numerous other campaign and unit awards.

Maree's son Edward was in the Navy and served two tours in Vietnam — shore duty in My Tho and in the Gulf of Tonkin aboard the USS John King. He was a graduate of Cohasset High School and shipped out with the Navy on September 16, 1965.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Parking matters

It can be difficult to get excited about parking or the lack there of – until you are trying to find a space.

There is nothing more frustrating than to plan to go shopping, eat at a restaurant, or get to a doctor's appointment and not be able to park.

The truth is lack of adequate parking can translate into significant loss of business for local merchants.

We have seen this in Hingham Square – where the Cohasset Mariner office is located. The Greenbush tunnel project has caused huge disruption to the parking and road circulation for nearly two years. Some merchants are toughing it out, but we know firsthand from people who try to stop by our office, that if it can be handled by email or phone, they keep on going if no parking spaces can be found.

It is critical that Cohasset, and the downtown merchants, put pressure on the MBTA to honor the mitigation agreement and provide the total of 182 spaces as promised.

In order to do that the MBTA has to blast some ledge behind the Teen Center. That is going to cost the T some money.

If the Village and downtown area are to remain viable and grow, then parking is critical and the loss of some 21 spaces as the MBTA's current plans dictate is just not acceptable and could translate into a serious parking deficit downtown.

With its spruced-up streetscape, the Village has not looked this good since Witches of Eastwick was filmed here 20 years ago.

Walking along South Main Street or driving through town – you cannot help but feel good about how the village looks. There's a whole new feeling downtown; there's a spring in people's step. The village looks vibrant and inviting.

However, we do not want the good feeling to go away because of a lack of parking. We want people to come to the village and support our merchants and businesses – but if there is not adequate parking, they could go elsewhere.

Here at the Mariner, we will keep you posted on when the MBTA and selectmen schedule a site visit and powwow. Selectmen need your support in playing "hard ball" with the MBTA. The merchants also need to make sure their voices are heard.

I & I issue

We would not want to live on the Jacobs Meadow side of Elm Street when there is a "major rain event" coupled with high tide.

What can occur is a nasty situation if stormwater has no place to go and the sewer treatment plant cannot cope with all the "I & I" (translation: seepage through cracks and joints) into pipes taking wastewater into the sewer system.

One mother found out her backyard had high levels of fecal coliform and enterococci following the spring flood. She described the situation as "scary" because her kids had been splashing around in the puddles.

We appreciate the assurances from the sewer commissioners and their engineer that the issue is under control and the upgraded plant will be able to accept more tie-ins when Little Harbor comes on line.

But we think the issue of stormwater and its health effects is very serious. Plans are afoot to establish a storm water management committee to survey the situation and make recommendations to Town Meeting and selectmen.

This is an important step and while it means yet another committee – Cohasset is lucky enough to have an abundance of caring citizens willing to serve.

Shipyard ferry facilities a blank

COMMENTARY

MARTHA A. R. BEWICK

Last week was Water Transportation Awareness Week and this year marks the 30th Anniversary of the Hingham Commuter Boat, and the 43rd Anniversary of Hull's Commuter Boat in the modern era. Hull's service actually goes back even farther than that, but Bill Spence of Mass. Bay Lines purchased the Wilson Lines business in 1963, and began to run the Pemberton and Nantasket ferries at that time. But that's another story.

While press events are providing a brief focus for the ferries, South Shore residents should be aware of the absence of public sector focus on the ferry facilities at the Hingham Shipyard while all the peripheral private sector development is underway. This will affect commuters, airport travelers, and visitors to the Boston Harbor Islands, as well as future visitors to the enterprises and restaurants of the Hingham Shipyard who come by ferry from Boston.

A recent ferry expedition aboard Mass. Bay Lines "Freedom" brought the Water Transportation Advisory Group past the Shipyard waterfront, while the approved development plans were examined by both state agency and private sector water transit planners. This group has met for a number of years, and provides an informational forum to public and private agencies and companies about water transportation programs in the Commonwealth.

What was evident to all participants was that the heart of the Hingham Shipyard, the ferry facilities, bus turnaround, automobile, pedestrian and bicycle access, and intermodal connections, are portrayed on the "approved plans" as large vacant areas. The only area with any delineation seems to be a strip of property between the ferry terminal and the MBTA parking lot, which was transferred to SeaChain in a legislative land swap. This parking area is apparently where higher priced parking and state employee parking will be inserted, pushing the regular commuters back from the terminal.

One participant in the session observed with concern "there is a direct conflict between the private interests and public transportation needs." He issued a call to the Department of Natural Resources and the transportation agencies to get a transportation planner to scrutinize the private developments now underway and to protect the public interest.

Reviewing the Hingham Shipyard plans were Bill Spence, President of Massachusetts Bay Lines; Corinne Young of Congressman William Delahunt's office; Mo Freedman, Co-Chairman of the Water Transportation Advisory Group; Charles Norris, of Norris and Norris; and Alice Boelter of Boelter Associates. Freedman, Norris and Boelter were among the ferry consultants, architects and planners attending the Water Transportation Advisory Group meeting aboard the "Freedom."

Other transportation planners immediately saw problems and conflicts with parking, with road access to the terminal and with pickup and drop-off facilities.

One participant urged "fresh thinking" in order to create a true intermodal center at the Shipyard before it's too late. Others warned that the ferry terminal "needs an artery corridor without friction." Presently, one proposed access road to the ferry terminal is a limited roadway lined by retail stores and parking lanes, with a speed limit of 15 mph, traffic calming devices, and "a waterfront park that overflows into the streetscape." This is not compatible with traffic requirements for a major ferry terminal.

Members of the Water Transportation Advisory Group also saw problems and conflicts with the limited public access along the waterfront to the Eastern side of the development, and pointed out that both the new residents along the waterfront and those members of the public using the waterfront would feel constricted by the limited space.

One participant noted that there is a major trend where towns allow developers to be their own urban designers. The drawback is that the developer's planners can't advocate for the public trust and public interest. "There has to be another force, a sort of public response to keep public entities honest. You need a separate entity advocating the public need."

The Hingham Ferry Terminal facilities are designated as one of the nation's 60 national intermodal ferry connectors. Other facilities with this designation include the Washington State Ferry terminals, the Steamship Authority, and ferries in New York City, San Francisco, Alaska and North Carolina. That designation makes the facilities eligible for federal highway funds. Congressman

Parking and sidewalk, not Pleasant subject

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Revitalization — A Cohasset citizen took "before" photos of the Village. We've been asked to provide "after" photos for comparison.

Over the past several weeks we've spoken quite a bit about the Informal Dispute Resolution, which is an ongoing saga with the MBTA. But, lest we give the wrong impression, we do have good everyday relations with the MBTA Project Staff. We talk or email to them multiple times a day and generally have good constructive open dialogs. But, occasionally the relationship with the Greenbush Project Management seems to come apart at the seams. The Informal Dispute Resolution is one of those instances. All that the Town wants is to have the MBTA provide the items they have agreed to provide in the Mitigation Agreement as approved by both the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and the Secretary of Transportation.

Public parking and Pleasant Street sidewalk – The MBTA agreed to supply "a minimum of 182 Public Parking Spaces" when they redesign and rebuild the Town Parking Lot. Even though they took land on Pleasant Street to add 26 new spaces, they are still 21 spaces short of the required 182. Their options are either to take enough land somewhere else to make up the difference or to use the Town-owned land behind the Teen Center, which will require blasting. Either of these options will make up the difference. So the difference is the cost of taking land vs. blasting. It's up to the MBTA.

The second issue is that MBTA decided to cut the scope of their construction short at Pleasant Street. Thus, until they agree to meet the edge of the Village Revitalization Project, we will have no sidewalk connection to Town from Pleasant Street.

The Informal Dispute Resolution procedure, written by the MBTA, is spelled out very carefully in the Cohasset Mitigation Agreement. In fact, the MBTA insisted on this procedure and would not accept any changes to it. Now here's the rub — The MBTA insisted that no less than a majority of the Board of Selectmen be present for the Informal Dispute Resolution meeting. But, according to Cohasset's Town Counsel, under the laws of the Commonwealth, this requires that the meeting be an open, public meeting. Well, the MBTA doesn't like the idea of an open public meeting. That's why they canceled out last week at the last minute, which was sort of odd, since they wrote the rules. The Town has sent a formal request for the MBTA to reschedule this important meeting. Once we hear from them, we'll let you know about the arrangements.

Pedestrian crossing at Lower King Street – There have been other instances where we don't understand why the MBTA does what it does. Last January we were in a meeting in the MBTA General Manager's office in Boston where a high-placed person from the MBTA Right-of-Way Department told us that the MBTA is providing pedestrian crossings at all train/street crossings. But, the MBTA is making the Town pay for such a crossing at Lower King Street to the tune of between $20,000-$25,000. When we approached Greenbush project executives, who were not present at the Boston meeting, about this disparity, we were told that we must have misheard what was said. We know what we heard. No mistake about that. We could accept that fact that the MBTA Right of Way person may have misspoken, but don't tell us that we didn't hear what was said. One still has to ask the question; why will this be the only pedestrian crossing not paid by the MBTA on this project?

Station & Route 3A traffic light – In the Mitigation Agreement, the MBTA is to provide a traffic light at the station entrance on Route 3A if approved by the Massachusetts Highway Department (MHD). Initially MHD did not approve the light. Instantly, the MBTA zapped the money for the light from their budget. Subsequently, MHD approved the traffic light. But, alas, the MBTA claims they have no money. Note — the Cohasset Mitigation Agreement does not put any other conditions or time frames on the MHD approval. So, now we have the MHD approval but the MBTA says they have no money. What good is the Mitigation Agreement if the MBTA can't fulfill their commitments? More to come on this subject since this traffic signal is critical to the safety of Cohasset residents.

As we said at the beginning, some aspects of this project just don't make sense.

A bit more on the Town Parking Lot – We have just found out that the MBTA might be closing the Town Parking Lot again this coming Monday and Tuesday (Aug. 7 & 8) for more work. The final decision will be made after we go to press for this week. So be advised.

And, Rocky Lane — We understand that the Rocky Lane bridge has fallen behind the original schedule we were last given. As a result of delays in procuring supplies, the bridge won't be available for traffic until sometime in September. Meanwhile, CBB has begun installing underground drainage and utilities under the present Rocky Lane that will ultimately be closed to traffic. Their commitment was that they would only close half of the road at a time so that traffic would not be hindered. On Tuesday of this week, they overstepped their bounds and narrowed the roadway to the point where large trucks could not get through to conduct their business. And, the Fire Department called the police because their trucks could not get through. Fortunately, CBB was very accommodating and had a crew come in after normal working hours to rectify the situation. The Town really appreciates their cooperation.

We are continuing to work with the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction for the Town to receive the additional funds to complete Brook and Elm streets. Progress is being made and we should know something in the next week or so. If we receive the necessary funding, the plan is to build these streets, curbs and sidewalks this fall. Please stay tuned.

Elastic loaves replace 'pizza'

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where President Mahmoud Ahmado . . . oops, let's start that again . . . President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad of Iran is purging Farsi, his national language, of decadent Western influences, starting with, among others, the word "pizza."

He has decreed that henceforth all publications use the term "elastic loaves" to describe the pastry wheels topped with cheese and tomato (hold the anchovies, please) and directed the Farhangestan Zaban e Farsi to see to it that the linguistic order is carried out.

The Farhangestan Zaban e Farsi, or the Persian Academy, I suspect is a lot like the Taliban, which used to see to it that Afghan women wore burkas and fought back the urge to show a well-turned ear or a scantily clad nose to strangers.

The word "chat" becomes a "short talk," which is something the Iranian president has never been accused of.

I haven't heard what the International Pizza Association, or whatever they call it, in Naples has to say about it, but I haven't heard that they've changed their name to the International Elastic Loaves Association so I guess it's all right with the Italians.

Pizza is only one of more than 2,000 words that have been contaminated by being Western in origin and therefore must be rusticated from the Farsi language.

The word "chat" becomes a "short talk," which is something the Iranian president has never been accused of.

Who knows, if this works out, the process of pruning a language of politically incorrect words may become known as "doing an Ahmadinejad," much as another president was involved in coining the term "doing a Lewinsky?"

Actually, the replacement of a word that has fallen into political disfavor began right here in the good old US of A.

Remember when the French turned down our offer to let them join us in Iraq and, in a fit of pique, patriotic Americans began calling French fries "freedom" fries and French toast "freedom" toast? It didn't last long.

The last time I ordered freedom fries at Burger King, the kid, who was only 12 when we went to war in Iraq, didn't know what I was talking about, and I dare not order freedom toast for breakfast at Jimmy's because I have a reputation to maintain.

I don't know about Farsi, but words in English sometimes have short lifespans.

When was the last time someone accused you of being "mawmsey" or drunk to the point of stupidity; or told you the weather was "swullocking," or sultry; or described the state of a dog as "pulicosity," or full of fleas?

But English also is full of words adopted from other languages.

Words like "gung ho," from the Chinese; "en route," from the French; "kindergarten," from the German; "charisma," from the Greek; "incognito," from the Italian; "ego," from the Latin; "macho," from the Spanish; and "klutz" from the Yiddish.

But nothing from Farsi.

Except maybe "doing an Ahmadinejad."

HEALTH NOTES

Staying healthy in hot weather

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It wouldn't be the end of the world if, during these hot days, we follow the lead of those in warmer climates who have lifestyles more accommodating to the temperature.

With the continuing heat wave in the Midwest, and the expectation of a similar situation here, one is prompted to think in terms of climate changes rather than a mere heat wave. There is evidence of increased long droughts in the Midwest, and longer fire seasons in places like Colorado, New Mexico and California. Perhaps it's appropriate to take a page out of the book of some areas where climate differs. Of course, we should heed the conventional warnings about overheating and taking fluids, etc., but it might be instructive to observe how people live in climates considered nominally warmer, like Spain and parts of North Africa.

In Madrid, it's difficult to find a restaurant open for dinner at 6 p.m. – and difficult to find a table at 9:30. In Jeddah, city life doesn't really begin until 11:30 p.m. And yet, it's difficult to find anyone at all between 2 and 5 p.m. in both cities. The pace of life in warmer climates makes use of the cool that we generally find between late night and early morning, and there is a tendency to sleep following a meal in the afternoon. The structure of life in many places has been modified to reflect the reality of a pervasive climatic reality. It wouldn't be the end of the world if, during these hot days, we follow the lead of those in warmer climates who have lifestyles more accommodating to the temperature.

But, there is the reality that we live with our air conditioned mobility; our cool (sometimes chilly) workplaces stores and restaurants; our heated schedules in an artificially cool environment.

Nevertheless, we go outside — and we get hot. Normally, the body cools itself by sweating. But if temperatures and humidity are extremely high, sweating becomes ineffective in maintaining normal temperature; blood chemistry can change and internal organs — including the brain and kidneys —can be damaged. It usually takes several days for the body to adjust to heat. The most common heat-related afflictions are heatstroke, heat exhaustion, and less serious, heat cramps, sunburn and heat rash.

Heatstroke can result from overexposure to direct sunlight, with or without physical activity, or to very high indoor temperatures. When the sweating mechanism fails, the body becomes unable to control its temperature, which may rise rapidly to 106 degrees F or higher within 10 to 15 minutes causing death or permanent disability if emergency treatment is not given. Symptoms include an extremely high body temperature (above 103 degrees F, orally); red, hot and dry skin; rapid pulse; throbbing headache; dizziness; nausea; confusion; and unconsciousness. If symptoms of heatstroke are suspected, find a cool place, preferably an air-conditioned indoor setting. Outside, find a spot in the shade. Put the person in a semi-sitting position. Loosen his or her clothing and bathe the head and body with cold water. Seek medical attention immediately.

Heat exhaustion can result when too much time is spent in a very warm environment, resulting in excessive sweating without adequate fluid and electrolyte (salt and minerals) replacement. Symptoms may include dizziness, headache, nausea, abdominal cramps, shallow breathing, cool and clammy skin, muscle tremors and heavy perspiration. A person suffering from heat exhaustion should be moved into a cool environment. Encourage consumption of cool, non-alcoholic, decaffeinated beverages. Keep the person quiet. If left untreated, heat exhaustion may progress to heatstroke.

Fans alone will not effectively cool an overheated person when air temperatures are above 100 degrees F.

What is "plenty of fluids"? — Several years ago, "Plenty of fluids" meant at least 1-1/2 to 2 quarts of fluids daily. It's now considered prudent to know more about a person's liquids consumption before administering large amounts of liquids. Administer a glass or two of cold water and observe the result. Then be sensible about liquids consumption or find qualified medical assistance. Since aging can cause a decreased thirst sensation, elderly persons generally should drink liquids at regular intervals during the day, even if they do not feel thirsty. Avoid alcoholic beverages and those containing caffeine. Salt tablets are not substitutes for fluids.

Never leave children, the elderly or pets in a parked car, not even for just a few minutes. — More than 300 children have died in overheated cars in the last eight years.

In conclusion, I would encourage you to read this column, have lunch and take a nap.

Israel's response to Hezbollah attacks

COMMENTARY

SHIRA H. JOSEPH & STEVEN WEISS

As clergy of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom and citizens of this great nation, we feel we must respond to the devastation that is occurring in Northern Israel as she continues to be under the attack of Hezbollah, a terrorist organization financed by Syria and Iran. Only five months ago, members of our synagogue community traveled together on a Congregational trip to Israel. We thoroughly enjoyed the sites, sounds and smells of Israel. We spent several days up North, enjoying a jeep tour of Safed, Rosh HaNikra, Rosh Pina and so many more places. We have pictures of Jordan, Syria, and Lebanon...literally just a few miles from where we were standing. So much has changed in just a few short months. Israel must now do what every other democratic country would do, defend herself.

We express heartfelt concern for the safety of innocent people, Israeli, Palestinian and Lebanese, who have been hurt by the brutality of Hamas and Hezbollah who have brought on the violence in the area. We are committed to the belief that peace and stability can only be achieved when terrorism by Israel's enemies ends once and for all. We call upon terrorist organizations and the regimes that support them to put an end to the terror.

It is important for our community to understand the sequence of events. In May 2000, Israel pulled out of Lebanon. The withdrawal adhered to the international border and was certified by the United Nations pursuant to resolution 425. The US and Britain have declared Hezbollah a terrorist organization. Hezbollah representatives serve in both the Lebanese parliament and cabinet. Lebanon's inactions tacitly support a terrorist organization.

The current violence reignited when on July 12, Hezbollah launched an unprovoked attack that killed eight Israeli soldiers, and two others were kidnapped. Since that time, Hezbollah launched scores of rockets at Israeli cities and towns, including Boston's sister-city Haifa, resulting in civilian injuries and deaths.

Israel's response is a measured response born out of the terrorist attacks. She is acting in self-defense to protect her citizens. Her objective is to bring home the hostages and restore calm to the northern Israeli communities. Unlike Hezbollah, Israel tries to safeguard civilians and regrets the loss of innocent life. But the terrorists make it difficult by often using women and children as human shields and embedding themselves and their operations amid civilians.

We commend the Bush administration for its immediate condemnation of these attacks, and we urge the international community to condemn them as well, strongly and unequivocally. As always, we urge Israel to carry out her military activities with maximum sensitivity to humanitarian concerns and to the welfare of civilians, and to do everything possible to assure that basic civilian needs are met.

We hope and pray that this conflict will come to an end at the earliest appropriate point and in a manner that roots out the forces of terror, ensures that the elected leadership of the Palestinian and Lebanese people are responsible and accountable, and moves the parties to this conflict forward towards diplomacy and peace.

William Delahunt recently obtained $7.5 million for improvements to the intermodal ferry facilities in the most recent federal transportation bill under a transit category. In spite of the availability of these federal monies, there is still an absence of planning.

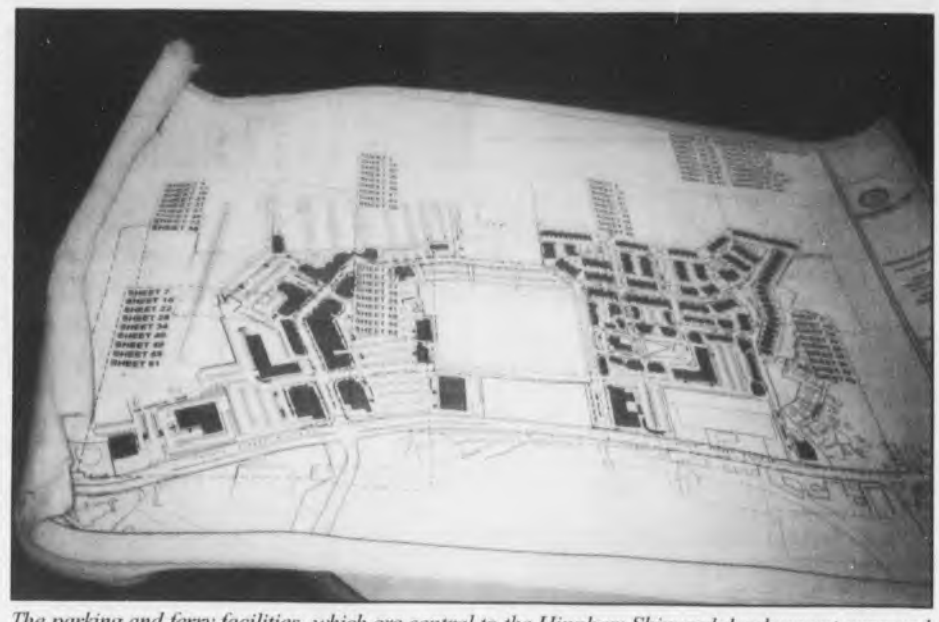
Also aboard for the water transportation group program, Corinne Young, Congressman Delahunt's staff coordinator for the ferry initiatives, congratulated the representative from the Executive Office of Transportation, Todd Fontanella, for the new state ferry projects. These include the new Salem ferry, and initiatives in Winthrop, Boston Harbor Islands, UMass/Boston, Provincetown, Quincy and Boston . She mentioned the Congressman's vision for a Massachusetts-wide set of ferry routes, and looked forward with building partnerships with cities, towns, the state and the federal government.

Ms. Young saw an opportunity for the Hingham Shipyard Ferry Terminal to be a case study, and the site to become a national model for coordination of transit facilities with surrounding development. She noted that the federal funds were "crafted to allow flexibility" in their spending. She offered the services of the Congressman's office to assist in the planning for the ferry terminal facilities.

Others expressed concern that the agencies which are involved with the Shipyard, including the MBTA, Department of Natural Resources, Town of Hingham, and Executive Office of Transportation, are not sitting down to ensure that all of the transportation elements were being properly designed. MBTA Planning Chief Dennis DiZoglio who was unable to attend, offered to have the T's head of terminal design review available plans to determine whether they met appropriate transit facility guidelines. He indicated the Town was expected to guide the planning effort. Maurice Freedman of Pressley Associates and Chair of the Water Transportation Group, asked how issues of communications networks and integration with private buses, T buses, other ferries, harbor islands services were being coordinated at the Hingham ferry facility. He wondered whether the homeland security issues are being built in to the planning. It was his recommendation that the ferry facility planners should step ba ck and think comprehensively.

Charles Norris, an architect and water transportation planner, pointed out that there was a ferry study undertaken at the state level two years ago, which looked at the entire Quincy/Hingham ferry and potential rail corridor, and examined a real intermodal set of facilities, including recommendations for integrated fare structures. (NOTE: This study was never officially published.)

One of the keys to smart growth is "an environmentally friendly transportation system that is coordinated with the surrounding development". In the current approved plans for the Hingham Shipyard it is clear that there is no coordination of the development with the proposed intermodal transportation system. The Water Transportation Advisory Group members are willing to meet with members of the Town, State and Federal government agencies, to share their concerns and recommendations to ensure that the intermodal facilities and private developments are truly integrated and complementary.



The parking and ferry facilities, which are central to the Hingham Shipyard development approved plans, are portrayed as blank spaces.

Martha A. R. Bewick helped start the Hingham Commuter Boat 30 years ago, and is a ferry systems consultant and resource.

NOTE TO BHRC SUBSCRIBERS: There are several roll call votes in this week's report. We did not include "ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL" in this week's report so that we could include more roll call votes. This week's report follows:

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on eight roll calls and local senators' votes on six roll calls from the week of July 24-28.

RETROACTIVE PAY RAISES FOR CONSTITUTIONAL OFFICERS (H 5056)

House 133-22, Senate 35-2, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of a provision making the 4.1 percent pay raises for the state's constitutional officers retroactive to July 1, 2005. The hikes include a $5,535 raise for the governor, $5,023 for the attorney general and $4,920 for the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer and auditor. Supporters of making the hikes retroactive said that the raises are reasonable and long overdue. In his veto message, Romney said that he is opposed to legislative mandated retroactive pay raises. (A "Yes" vote is for making the pay raises retroactive to July 1, 2005. A "No" vote is against making the raises retroactive).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: Y

PENSION FOR FORMER REP. MICHAEL RUANE (H 5063)

House 121-35, Senate 29-10, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a bill providing the late former Rep. Michael Ruane with health insurance and a $44,000 annual state pension that would be collected by his wife despite the fact that Ruane has never paid into the state's retirement system. The measure provides that a lien be attached to Ruane's home to allow the state to eventually collect the balance owed to the system. Ruane was denied the right to enter the retirement system from 1975 to 1994 because he was already in the city of Salem's system. He did not take advantage of a special bill passed into law in 1994 that allowed him to join the state's pension system. Supporters of the pension said that the Legislature should do the right thing and help this former legislator, his sick wife and their children. They noted that the state would recoup the pension payments upon the sale of the house. Opponents of the pension expressed sympathy for Ruane and his family but said that the Legislature should not approve this unique and narrow bill for a former legislator. They noted that the Legislature annually ignores or defeats many similar proposals for other public employees who are in difficult situations. The Legislature a few weeks ago had rejected Romney's amendment that the governor, lieutenant governor and all the members of the Legislature privately fund the pension. (A "Yes" vote is for giving Ruane the $44,000 pension. A "No" vote is against the pension).

COMPULSIVE GAMBLERS' TREATMENT (H 5000)

House 134-21, Senate 34-4, overrode Gov. Romney's $345,058 veto reduction (from $1 million to $654,942) in funding for a compulsive gamblers' treatment program. The program is funded by money from unclaimed Lottery prizes. Supporters of the $345,058 said that this program is important and argued that the state should take responsibility for the damage caused by state-sponsored legalized gambling. Opponents of the $345,058 questioned how many people are actually served and helped by these treatment programs and noted that the anonymous component of these programs makes it difficult to determine if they are effective or are even being used by a lot of people. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $345,058. A "No" vote is against the $345,058).

$1 MILLION FOR METCO (H 5000)

House 142-13, Senate 33-4, overrode Gov. Romney's $1 million veto reduction (from $19.6 million to $18.6 million) in funding for METCO. The METCO program allows urban students to attend suburban schools. It was created in the 1960s to provide better educational opportunities for urban minority students and to help integrate suburban school districts. Supporters of the $1 million said that the METCO program is a very successful one that promotes racial integration and educational opportunities for more than 3000 Boston and Springfield school students and also benefits the students in the suburban school districts that receive these students. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $1 million. A "No" vote is against the $1 million).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

$464,892 FOR CHILDREN'S TRUST FUND (H 4004)

House 153-2 Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's $464,892 veto reduction (from $1,382,307 to $917,415) in funding for the administration of the Children's Trust Fund (CTF). The CTF is a public-private partnership that was created by the state in 1988 with a mission to establish community-based educational and service programs designed to reduce the occurrence of child abuse and neglect. Supporters of the $464,892 said that the funding is necessary for the CTF to properly administer its many programs that help children and families across the state. Opponents of the $464,892 said the CTF is a public-private partnership that is allowed to raise money privately and argued that the additional $464,892 in state funding is unnecessary. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $464,892. A "No" vote is against the $464,892).

SALES TAX HOLIDAY IN 2006 (H 5200)

House 150-4, Senate 34-2, approved and sent to Gov. Romney a bill allowing consumers to buy most products that cost under $2500 on Saturday, August 12 and Sunday, August 13 without paying the state's five percent sales tax. Supporters said that the holiday would be a boon to retailers and consumers and noted that similar tax-free holidays in 2004 and 2005 saved shoppers millions of dollars and resulted in a substantial increase in retail sales for the two days. They argued that the state's sales tax revenue loss would be offset by increased revenue from the meals and gas tax generated by shoppers. Some opponents said that the holiday actually generates little additional revenue for stores because consumers would buy the products even without the tax-free days. They said that the Legislature should be looking at broader, deeper tax relief and not a tiny tax-free holiday. Others said that the Legislature should not vote for tax cuts when the money could be better spent on bridge repairs, local aid, education and human service programs. (A "Yes" vote is for the tax-free holiday. A "No" vote is against the tax-free holiday).

PERMANENT SALES TAX HOLIDAY (H 5200)

House 22-133, rejected an amendment establishing an annual one-day permanent sales tax holiday on the second Saturday in August. Amendment supporters said this is the third year that the Legislature has approved a tax-free holiday and argued that it is time to make it permanent. They noted that a permanent holiday would give consumers the opportunity to plan big purchases in advance and not have to sit around and see if the Legislature approves the holiday each year. Amendment opponents said that it is fiscally irresponsible to approve a permanent holiday. They argued that the Legislature should reserve the option to look at the state's finances each year and then decide whether the state can afford a sales tax holiday. (A "Yes" vote is for establishing an annual one-day permanent sales tax holiday on the second Saturday in August. A "No" vote is against establishing it).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: N

INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE (S 2632)

House 154-0, approved a bill hiking the minimum wage from $6.75 per hour to $8 per hour over two years. The Senate okayed the measure on a voice vote and sent it to Gov. Romney. The governor vetoed the hike and sent it back to the Legislature for action. Romney supports a 25-cent increase to $7 per hour – a proposal that the Legislature has already rejected. Supporters of the hike to $8 said that this pro-worker measure would help thousands of families that are living near the poverty level despite the fact that the breadwinner works in excess of 40 hours weekly. (A "Yes" vote is for the hike to $8).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote

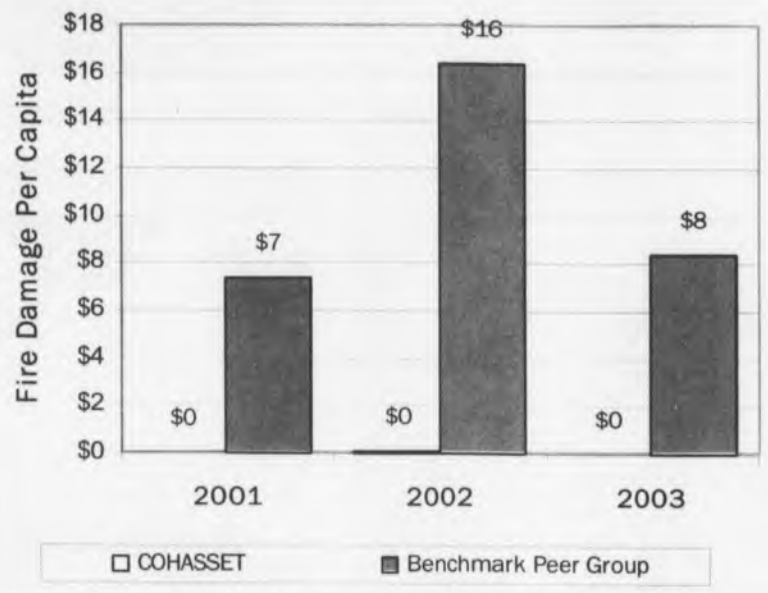
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Under Massachusetts law every community is required to report each fire that causes damage or injury. However, some communities choose to also report fires that did not cause damage or injury.

This chart shows the amount of damage done by fires per capita in 2001, 2002 and 2003. One can use these two approaches to gauge the effect of fires in Cohasset. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. This is the last of six benchmarks about the fire department.

Cohasset's Emily Zimmermann excels at FOBISSEA Games in Thailand

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

What is one of the most important things a 10-year old living in Hong Kong can learn?

How to order Chicken McNuggets in Chinese, of course.

Cohasset native Emily Zimmermann has that down pat, but there is plenty more to her than that. This is particularly evident in athletics, as Emily won all six of her swimming events during June's FOBISSEA (Federation of British International Schools in Southeast Asia) Games in Bangkok, Thailand.

Cohasset's Meaghan Mahoney rears back in the 14-and-under backstroke race during a recent meet against Scituate Knights of Columbus. Next week, the Mariner takes a look at the swim team's successful season to date.

Kissick stands out at Bay State Games

Hope Kissick has had a busy summer.

The 12-year old Cohasset resident earned four medals at last month's Bay State Games in swimming, and followed that up by placing in six events in last week's 12-and-under New England Championship at Harvard University.

At the Bay State Games, Hope earned gold in the 100-meter and 200-meter breaststroke events. She rounded out her standout performance by winning a silver medal in the 400-meter freestyle relay and a bronze in the 200-meter freestyle.

At the New England Championship, Hope was joined by four other Cohasset athletes: Sam Rice, Connor Green, Vincent Kennedy and Aniko Haber. All five swim for the Weymouth Waves swim team.

At this competition, Hope won the 50-meter breaststroke. She competed in two other breaststroke events, taking fourth in the 100-meter and seventh in the 200-meter.

She earned two third place finishes in the 200-meter medley and 200-meter relay. In the 400-meter relay, Hope took fifth place.

School, one of 24 institutions from 12 countries throughout Asia to participate in the FOBISSEA Games. The other nations represented included Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Phillippines, Japan, Nepal, South Korea, Taiwan, Brunei, Singapore and Vietnam.

Emily took first place in four 50-meter swimming events (backstroke, breaststroke, freestyle and butterfly), as well as the 100-meter individual medley and 200-meter relay. She also earned four top-three finishes in track and field (60-meter, high jump, 4x100 and shuttle run), and played for the fourth place soccer team in her age group, as well as the winning tee-ball team.

Back home in Cohasset for the summer, Emily said Wednesday her athletic inclination comes from her parents, Jill and Dave Zimmermann.

"My mom and dad played sports, and it inspired me a lot," Emily said. "They've kept teaching me different sports; I've played pretty much everything."

Growing up in Cohasset, Jill Zimmermann swam and played basketball, soccer and softball, and still swims competitively today.

"We like to keep them active and expose them to different sports," Jill said of her two daughters, Emily and 8-year old Kara. "I think there's a lot to be learned from playing different sports; there's plenty of time to specialize [in one sport] later on."

Emily, who says swimming and soccer are her two favorite sports, competes for Cohasset's summer swim team, and also sails three times per week. She has also participated in week-long lacrosse and basketball camps.

The Zimmermanns moved to Hong Kong four years ago when Dave was sent there on a business assignment for the shipping company he works for. Jill says the family didn't have a car during its first year there, providing a challenge for her and the kids to travel about a city that she described as "very hilly, much like San Francisco."

When the family first arrived in Hong Kong and looked for a school, they looked at international schools from Germany, Switzerland, France and the United States as well as Great Britain. Jill says the British school system stood out because of its emphasis on public speaking and the arts.

The latter has also become a major part of Emily's life, as during a school trip to Beijing last year, she played the good witch in a Chinese-language production of The Wizard of Oz.

"This has been a great experience," Jill said. "It's good for the kids to see that not everyone speaks English and that there is a whole different world of cultures out there."

Annual SIDS Road Race slated for Sept. 17

On Sunday, Sept. 17, the 25th annual SIDS Road Race will be taking place in Hingham to raise funds for the Massachusetts Center for SIDS. All funds raised go towards research, family support, and education. With the generous support of sponsors, runners, and friends the Road Race Committee has been able to donate more than $250, 000 over the last 24 years.

The course starts and finishes at the Hingham High School and traverses four miles of beautiful Wompatuck State Park. The race consists of three events: The 10K Road Race, which is sanctioned by the USA Track and Field, includes age categories and is run by competitive and casual runners. With water stations, three miles of shaded path, and one challenging hill, it is a well-balanced course, enjoyed by all.

The 10K Walk-a-thon, which follows the same course as the run, attracts both dedicated walkers as well as those participants who wish to gather pledges and support the event. The two-mile Fun Run is an event for all ages, where everyone is a winner. The course is flat and easy and welcomes runners and walkers from the youngest to the oldest. It is a true family event.

Pre-registration is $15 for all races. Post-registration is $20 for all races. Registration opens at 8 a.m. on Sept. 17, with race times starting at 9:30 a.m. (10K Walk-a-thon and two-mile Fun Run) and 10:30 a.m. (10K Road Race).

Soccer goaltending course being offered

Mass Premier Soccer will host a NSCAA (National Soccer Coaches Association of America) Goalkeeping Coaching Course Friday, Aug. 4 from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the MPS Rockland Arena.

The overall objective of the State Goalkeeping Diploma is to explore some of the myths and mystiques surrounding the goalkeeping function. The course is directed towards the team coach - not the specialist goalkeeper coach.

The object is to empower the coach with knowledge and practice methods that will enable the coach to evaluate a goalkeeper in game situations and then design an appropriate practice program for goalkeepers in and outside of team practices. The course includes lecture (theory) and field (practical) sessions. Fee $35.

"FitKids" combines nutrition, exercise at Weymouth Club

With more and more parents concerned about overweight and out-of-shape adolescents, Weymouth Club has designed "FitKids," a new program for youngsters 7 to 14 years of age that provides information on health nutrition, fitness, and athletic support to help young people make the right food and exercise choices.

With the specific assessment information gathered during these tests—including nutrition habits and goal strategies—the staff will provide each participant with the necessary information he or she needs to get fit and strong.

FitKids is a four-week program that will be held monthly, beginning Aug. 8. Participants will attend two 1fi-hour sessions each week that are offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. or 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

FitKids is $179 for members and $199 for non-members.

For information and registration, call 781.337.4600, Ext. 140, or email fitness@weymouthclub.com for more information.

Cohasset's Gabriella Flibotte scored a team-best 62 goals this spring.

All-Scholastic girls lacrosse team

3 Skippers named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: boys lacrosse.

Lindsay Durkin – Junior
Attack – Cohasset

After a solid sophomore season, Durkin stepped up in a major way to help lead Cohasset to its best season in years…Tied for the team lead in points with 78 (61 goals, 17 assists) despite missing two games and most of a third due to injury…Pilgrim Conference All-Star ays her best games came against Scituate and Hingham; she scored seven goals each in those games, both big wins for the Skippers over big rivals…Also scored the game-winner on May 8 against Notre Dame, and had a season-best 10 points (six goals, four assists) in first round playoff win over Nantucket…Plays for the MassELITE program, and also coaches youth lacrosse…Plays soccer for CHS…Plans to play lacrosse in college, where she will likely study physical therapy or sports medicine…Cohasset coach Chuck Jaffe: "Lindsay played hurt all year, and still tied for the team lead in points. She's about as tough as it gets."

Gabriella Flibotte – Freshman
Midfield – Cohasset

Gabriella Flibotte

The Cohasset youth program's all-time leading scorer, Flibotte lived up to the hype with a sensational freshman campaign…Voted as the Skippers' MVP by her teammates after scoring 62 goals and dishing out 16 assists…Also led the team with an incredible 120 ground balls from her center position…Scored a game-high five goals in Cohasset's playoff loss to Walpole…Also had four goals each in Skippers' big wins over Scituate and Hingham…A Pilgrim Conference All-Star this season, Flibotte possesses a vast array of tricks around the net to score…A Marinerland All-Scholastic for basketball in the winter, Flibotte also plays soccer and enjoys surfing and snowboarding…Aspires to a career as a lawyer…Will attend Groton School next year…Cohasset coach Chuck Jaffe: "Gabby is the best player on the South Shore in my opinion, regardless of class. She became more and more dominant toward the end of the season."

Lisa Spirito – Senior (Capt.)
Attack – Cohasset

A first-time Pilgrim Conference All-Star this season, Spirito made opponents pay for focusing on teammates and fellow All-Scholastics Lindsay Durkin and Gabriella Flibotte…Finished the season with 38 goals, ranking third on the team despite missing three games at the end of the season…Her best game of the year may have come in a 13-8 win over Falmouth, in which Spirito finished with six goals and two assists…Also scored twice in regular season loss to Duxbury…Her scoring touch and ability to run plays from behind the net were certainly missed in the postseason…One of the top gymnasts on the Cohasset-Norwell co-op program…Will attend the University of Connecticut this fall…Cohasset coach Chuck Jaffe: "Lisa kind of flew under the radar at times, but she was definitely an unsung, key offensive player for us."

Colleen Mulligan – Sophomore Attack – Hanover

Just a three-year program, the Hanover lacrosse team started turning some heads this season, and Mulligan was one of the reasons why…This talented sophomore was the leading scorer on the Lady Indians squad, racking up 79 points on 54 goals, 25 assists…Tallied four goals in a 16-8 victory over Oliver Ames this season, the program's first win in its brief history…The speedy Mulligan caught the Hingham defense by surprise, netting four quick goals in the second half of an eventual 19-10 loss…In all, Mulligan had two seven-goal games and one six goal game…Hanover (2-10) tallied 124 total goals in 12 games this season, with Mulligan accounting for nearly half of them…According to coach Martha Christian, what makes Colleen so successful on the field are her "stick skills, ability to read the field, patience, bursts of speed, and overall athletic ability. I so enjoy coaching her."…Mulligan has been elected to captain the lax team next year as a junior…She will also captain the field hockey squad in the fall.

Emmalee Willis – Junior (Capt.)
Attack – Hingham

Willis is at the center of a young offense that has limitless potential next season…From her third home/center position, Willis led the Harborwomen in scoring this spring with 75 points on 58 goals, 17 assists…Speed was one of her greatest assets, as several of her goals came on fast breaks…Willis had several big games for Hingham this season, but her five-goal efforts in a wins over Sandwich and Bourne, four-goal/one assist performance in a slim loss to Cohasset, and three goal contribution in a win over Waltham are among the standouts…Willis' steady play on the frontline helped the Harborwomen rack up a 10-7 record and berth in the postseason tourney…There, Willis scored a pair of goals in a 10-8 overtime win over Martha's Vineyard…A Pilgrim Conference All-star, Willis was voted by her teammates as their MVP…Willis will return as team captain again next season.

Kerri Doherty – Junior
Midfield – Hingham

Another offensive stalwart for the Harborwomen, Doherty's versatility on the field makes her invaluable…The attack wing was not far behind Willis in scoring, contributing several big goals along the way…But the junior was also among the team's defensive standouts at defensive wing…According to coach Cory Ford, Doherty brings "exceptional speed and tenacity to the field. She is one of the best leaders who sets a great example for her teammates through her tremendous work ethic and hustle."…Doherty tallied a goal in a game against Duxbury that brought the Harborwomen to within one (6-5) at halftime in an eventual loss…Her consistent play on both ends of the field helped Hingham finish 10-7 overall and earn a spot in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney…There, the Harborwomen knocked off Martha's Vineyard in an OT 10-8 win, advancing to the quarters to meet eventual finalist, Duxbury…Just a junior, Doherty will be one of the top returning players on the Hingham squad.

Erin Fitzgibbons – Senior (Capt.)
Defense - Norwell

Erin Fitzgibbons

The leader of a defense that surrendered just 24 goals during Norwell's five-game postseason run to its second straight state championship…One of the Clippers' best in controlling ground balls, Fitzgibbons' hustle on defense often led to goals going the other way…Almost always in the proper position to ward off opposing attacks and create turnovers…One of five Pilgrim Conference All-Stars on Norwell's roster this season…Displayed considerable stick skills and frequently carried the ball downfield to set up goal-scoring opportunities…Scored a goal in Norwell's Division 2 South semifinal win over Walpole, and notched two goals in regular season game against Cohasset… A Marinerland All-Scholastic honorable mention last season, Fitzgibbons will attend the University of Connecticut and plans to major in elementary education

Michelle Granara – Senior (Capt.)
Goalie – Norwell

Michelle Granara

Ask just about any coach who the best goalie in the state was this year, and they will say Granara without hesitation…A two-time Marinerland All-Scholastic and Pilgrim Conference All-Star…Turned in some of her best performances of the season during the state tournament, including 12 saves in the Division 2 state championship game, a 9-6 win over Winchester…Made 10 stops in the sectional final against Duxbury, and came within five minutes of a shutout in the Clippers' semifinal win over Walpole…One of the things that set Granara apart from the rest was her ability to stop direct shots; just ask Cohasset, who saw nine of 11 such attempts saved during the teams' regular season meeting…Has taken an interest in journalism, writing for the NHS school newspaper and the Norwell Mariner…Will play lacrosse at Division 1 Holy Cross

Kathleen Kramer – Senior (Capt.)
Midfield – Norwell

Kathleen Kramer

The leading scorer for the state champion Clippers, Kramer finished the season with 102 points (85 goals, 17 assists) Scored 27 of those goals in the state tournament, including four in the 9-6 championship win over Winchester Kramer found the back of the net seven times in Division 2 South first round win over Canton, and followed that up with six-goal performances against Medfield and Walpole…Notched a career-high eight goals in April 29 win over Bourne…Took the majority of the draws from her center position, and played solid defense when it was needed…Pilgrim Conference All-Star making her second straight appearance on this team…Also ran cross-country and played basketball at Norwell High…Kramer will attend Colby College, where she will continue to play lacrosse

Margot Littlehale – Senior (Capt.)
Midfield - Norwell

A two-time Marinerland All-Scholastic this season (she was on the field hockey team last fall), Littlehale ended her high school career in style by helping lead Norwell to its second consecutive state title…Saved her

Taylor Murphy – Senior (Capt.) Attack – Norwell

Taylor Murphy

Norwell's second leading scorer this season (60 goals), Murphy earns her second straight nod to the Mariner-land All-Scholastic team…Notched 14 goals during the Clippers' post-season run, including four in first round against Canton and hat tricks against Medfield, Walpole and Duxbury…Scored the first goal in Norwell's state title win over Winchester…Pilgrim Conference All-Star tallied four goals in regular season win over Duxbury…Possesses a superlative finishing touch around the net…Battled through an ankle injury early in the season to still put up big numbers…Also played basketball, soccer, field hockey and ran cross country during her high school athletic career…Murphy plans to continue her lacrosse career at Boston University

Kerrin Kasianowicz – Sophomore Attack – Scituate

Kerrin Kasianowicz

One of the best pure goal-scorers in the area, Kasianowicz followed a strong freshman season by leading the Sailors with 53 goals this season…Was just about automatic when she got the ball near the net…Consistently scored five or six goals in several games this season…Plays for the Revolution Lacrosse club team, and has participated in summer tournaments in Long Island and New Jersey…Also a member of the silver-medal winning team at this summer's Bay State Games…Kasianowicz skis and plays field hockey at SHS, and plans to continue playing lacrosse in college

Jackie Moscardelli –Sophomore Attack - Weymouth

The Wildcats were faced with a rebuilding year this season under first year head coach Melanie Curtin, but despite struggling with injuries in the toughest lacrosse league in the state the Wildcats did find a huge building block for the future in Moscardelli.

Only a sophomore the young forward lit up the scoreboard at an alarming rate this season to the tune of 41 goals, while also adding nine assists. This season she recorded six goals in a game three times, against Walpole, Braintree, and Natick. She also tallied five goals in a loss to Framingham, who went undefeated and won the Division 1 state title. It was no surprise she was named a Bay State League all-star this season for her accomplishments.

Moscardelli also plays soccer and basketball for the Wildcats.

Next year she'll be counted on to carry the scoring load again, and Curtin is looking forward to it.

"She has a great attitude and has earned great respect from everyone as a sophomore. I'm excited to see where the next two years takes Jackie—her talent and potential could take her far if she so chooses."

'Cinderella' is where dreams come true

Musical on stage this weekend

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Transformed into a moonlit garden, a humble country cottage or a royal palace, the stage at Cohasset Town Hall is the setting for Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella" as presented by members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Recreation Department's Summer Drama Workshop, Aug. 4-6. Earlier this week, the auditorium was alive with excitement and anticipation as the dress rehearsals were held.

Despite the midsummer heat, members of the cast donned their costumes and posed for last minute fittings and adjustments. They appeared thrilled to be transported to a make believe world where, in the guiding words of director, Lisa Pratt, they would "step out of (them) selves and be the character (they) were playing every moment on the stage."

The cast of 37 ranges in age from 7 to 18 and comes from several South Shore towns. Whether portraying a townsperson, a princess or a mouse everyone knew there was magic in the air!

Veronica Galvin and Olivia Sanderson are two members of the company who are privileged to play multiple parts in the production. Between the two young ladies the roles of townspeople, fairies, chorus member and princess/maidens are depicted. A very special duty pivotal to the plot that Veronica and Olivia handle is that of presenting Cinderella's glass slippers and tiara. "It makes me feel happy to be on the stage, especially when we are at the ball," said Veronica. Olivia nodded in agreement. "It sort of makes you really believe you are there," she added.

A 10-year veteran of drama but first-time performer with the Cohasset Dramatic Club is Austin Crumpton, 18, who portrays the King. Though not playing a large role in this version of the story, he is well aware of its significance. "This King is a true fairy tale king," he said. "It is so different from other roles I have played. In this case, it's important to me to seem real for the little kids. I want to live up to their expectations so they will believe in make believe."

His lady in the performance, Mimi Mahoney plays the Queen. Adorned in her regal "everyday" clothes, she described her costume changes. "The King and Queen have two costumes; one for 'everyday' and one for 'the ball.'" she explained. Of course, both she and her King wear brilliantly jeweled crowns! Describing her happiness when securing the part of the Queen, Mimi said, "I watched the movie again right away! It had been awhile since I had seen the show!"

An intent and enthusiastic John Demick, 10, of Cohasset shared his thoughts about being in the production. "It's fun to be in the show; a good time," he said. As a member of the ensemble and a "guard", he too has multiple responsibilities in the play. As "guard", he has a solo singing/speaking part in "The Prince Is Giving a Ball," one of the liveliest and most robust numbers in the production.

Another cast member with multiple roles, Danielle Frederick 12, spoke of the challenges of playing many parts. She is a townsperson, footman and goes to the ball. "There are three costume changes so you have to be fast and there is lots to learn with all the songs. We have a lot of fun," she said.

Seen on and off the stage during the rehearsal were Cinderella's "stepsisters" and "stepmother" who insert light and witty moments into the romantic story. Their sound checks revealed singing voices that were anything but "ugly and mean!"

Not to be forgotten, a Godmother flitted about with costume and sound checks and a voice that will bring enchantment to the very upbeat and inspirational song, "Impossible." Doubtlessly, her magical powers will dazzle the audience.

Musical director, John Ferguson described the imagination and skill involved in presenting a show like Cinderella which has so many musical possibilities. Ferguson has been with the Cohasset Dramatic Club for several performances. A senior at Stonehill College, he explained that this was a fun change for him. His role in the production is managing "the pit." He will assist with the actors' musical cues and provide the show's music by playing the piano. "We have a lot of kids with really nice voices," he said. "Some came to us that way and others had talent and we worked with them to develop them more."

Ingénue, Emily Badger, 17 of Scituate plays the coveted role of Cinderella. Knowing she has very big acts to follow with Julie Andrews, Leslie Ann Warren and Brandy all playing the beautiful princess on stage or screen before her, she is overjoyed but undaunted. The Scituate High School junior said upon learning the part was hers, she, "Was thrilled! It's every little girl's dream! I watched it over and over and over growing up." She said being on stage felt, "So unreal; just like a dream. Once you are in the costumes it's really like stepping inside a fairy tale."

Chris Barba, 15 also of Scituate, plays the Prince. He said jokingly, "In this version, I don't even have a name; not even "Charming." I'm just "the Prince." The SHS sophmore has been involved in drama for sometime and was surprised that this was not as much like a fairy tale as he had expected. "For me, this is really more like a love story. It's been quite easy in that way. I've played parts similar with love duets and things. I like the Cohasset Dramatic Club and it's great to work with Emily as my romantic leading lady. I've learned a lot from Lisa as a director, too. She is very patient and has taught me a lot about showing emotions and different acting techniques. It's really been fun to be part of this."

The regal festivities begin today (Friday) when the CDC and Recreation Department's Summer Drama Workshop present Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella" to the public. The show will run through Sunday Aug. 6. May all "townspeople" and those from the "neighboring villages" come to be swept away by this midsummer enchantment and captivating musical score. Shows are scheduled to allow all to return home safely before midnight.

Tickets are $10 available at the door; Front Street Books in Scituate, Buttonwood Books in Cohasset and by phone @617-697-2115 continuity and community are some of what keeps everyone coming back to the CDC.

"There is such a spirit of family here," she says. "Our shows are family oriented so they appeal to audiences of parents, kids, brothers and sisters; really everybody."

Though stepping down from her role as president of CDC in September, when the Board of Directors begins its new year and elects a new slate, DiGiacomandrea recalls her tenure with joy and wonderful memories. Slightly hesitating, as though so many thoughts whirled through her mind making it difficult to choose just one to describe, she says, "I enjoyed every moment I spend with my 'family' at the Dramatic Club. But it is hard to say anything can replace the children. The kids are so pure and open and amazing when they begin with us. They are sometimes so shy and it is wonderful to watch what they will blossom into as they learn and grow. It is a gift to have a small role in molding a child."

"The kids love Jean D.!" Pratt says. "They love to be around her and they love to surprise her. Where ever she is they know there is going to be fun."

"Fun" appears to be DiGiacomandrea's middle name (which it may very well be!) but many of her jobs at CDC were anything but! Basement organizer, painter, ticket taker, popcorn maker, money counter, printer and poster deliverer were some of her less glamorous parts. "I loved them all, though!" she laughs. "They added to my theatrical resume!"

The residents of Cohasset also benefit from DiGiacomandrea's selflessness in other ways. Using quite different skills from those of the theatre, she is a Disaster Relief Worker for the Town of Cohasset. Studying and planning with the appropriate workers, she is learning and developing the state of preparedness in the town in the event of a disaster.

On a lighter note, DiGiacomandrea revels in her annual participation in the First Night Boston Celebration. She is a House Manager each year at the same gala, a church that hosts musical events for children.

Midsummer evenings for DiGiacomandrea and the CDC have been lively and dynamic as lately, they have rehearsed for the current performance of "Cinderella." This delightfully enchanting musical by Rodgers & Hammerstein, which is being directed by Lisa Pratt and produced by DiGiacomandrea possesses a cast of 34 children ages 7-18. The show will play Aug. 4-6 at Cohasset Town Hall. The Cohasset Recreation Department joins CDC in presenting the performances.

Pratt described DiGiacomandrea's motivation and humor. "We were rehearsing, it was hot, I was exhausted and there was Jean D.... Hardworking, going strong, committed. I learn so much from her! Right then I thought, 'Be like Jean. Just let the rough stuff roll right off your back.'"

DiGiacomandrea attempts to control her excitement about the Cinderella story, but it is obvious in the twinkle in her eyes. She encourages everyone to see the play, but, in true "show biz" style, won't give away any secrets or special effects that may be planned.

She will say, "You will be so glad you came. It's going to be beautiful....It's going to be captivating and magical!"

It is fitting that DiGiacomandrea speaks of the show in terms of "magic." As her years at the CDC have evolved, it is evident through her sentiments as well as those of others that she exudes a type of magic as well. As she continues as a vital member of the organization, she will bring her delightful ways and talents with her. She said it best in her own words, "I am proud of our spirit, integrity and dedication to theatre and each other. Most of all, I am proud to be part of this community."

Shows at Cohasset Town Hall: Aug. 4th 10 a.m. and 7:30 pm. Aug. 5th 7:30 pm. August 6th 2pm.

DESTINATIONS

The Magic of Seville

Meet colorful locals, ghost of Columbus in Seville

By FRAN GOLDEN

SEVILLE, Spain -- The magic of this beautiful city took hold rather immediately when we bumped into Maria.

Jan, my cousin and traveling companion, had been talking about a shop she had visited many years ago. At the time she and the shopkeeper, Maria, had got to talking. They were very simpatico. They had dinner and then lost touch.

As we wandered the streets of the Old Town, I spotted a store that looked cool and suggested we go in. Jan was looking at the handmade cloth handbags and she asked the shopkeeper who made them. "I did," said the woman. They looked into each other's eyes and, sure enough, it was Jan's Maria (different shop). Much hugging and kissing followed.

Seville is a place where birds seem to constantly sing, the sun nearly always shines and bitter oranges ripen on the trees. And the city has some of the warmest, most charming people I've encountered anywhere in my travels.

We vowed to meet Maria later and found ourselves at a tapas bar called Bar Giralda around 8:30 p.m. (the earliest a respectable Spaniard will dine) with Maria joined by a friend of hers, Miquita. They ordered various little dishes for us to try -- tapas dining is about sampling a variety -- including one we could only translate as "important potatoes." Delicious. And cheap (dinner for four came in under $50 including sherry and beer).

Barrio Santa Cruz, Seville's Old Town

Seville is a place where birds seem to constantly sing, the sun nearly always shines and bitter oranges ripen on the trees.

Maria spoke virtually no English; Miquita more than she admitted. My Spanish is weak. Jan's is OK. But a major lesson of travel is: If you have the opportunity to interact with locals, do it. Sign language works if all else fails; and if like me you declare that the jabon (soap) is muy bueno when you mean jamon (ham), so be it.

After dinner, Maria and Miquita led us to a former coal factory, La Carboneria, that's been turned into a gallery/music hall. The featured artist, leather jacket resting on his shoulders and cigarette dangling, greeted us in English and showed us his odd paintings. We chatted with some college students from the Netherlands (the University of Seville attracts a lot of international students, including Americans). Around 11:30 p.m. performers hit the stage -- a guitarist and singer, both young guys with flowing hair, accompanying a flamenco dancer in a bright blue dress, her movements both seductive and determined. We were mesmerized.

The next day Maria and Miquita decided to introduce us to, well, everyone they knew in Seville, and so we found ourselves meeting various friends and relatives as we hit several cafes and tapas bars and landed at Miquita's apartment. An older fellow, an opera-loving sheep farmer named Pepe, stopped by. He scored points by telling us he had a friend who was friends with Picasso. Of course he did. This is Spain.

Seville is the country's fourth-largest city with a population of 700,000, yet it feels like a small town, especially if you stick around the older sections, such as Barrio de Santa Cruz, where the maze of narrow streets and tiled courtyards are exceptionally fun to explore. You'll get lost, but that's all part of the adventure.

The nearby Guadalquivir is the only navigable river in Spain and runs 56 miles to the Atlantic; it's the reason Seville for 200 years had a monopoly as a port to the Americas.

The Cathedral in Seville

Must-view sights include the ornately decorated palace, built in the 12th century by Moors (Seville was once a place where Arabs, Jews and Christians lived peacefully) and rebuilt beginning in the 14th century by Christian kings. After Ferdinand and Isabella took over in 1492 they expelled the Jews and Moors and forced those who remained to convert. Inside the Alcazar are elaborately tiled rooms and courtyards. Outside is a spectacular garden.

We also visited the city's landmark cathedral, the third largest in the world after St. Peter's in Rome and St. Paul's in London. It took 120 years to build in the 15th and 16th centuries. Here, the marvels are the 44 chapels, the biggest main altar in Europe and the tomb of one Christopher Columbus.

The joke told here is that Columbus traveled more in death than in life. While he died near Madrid, one of his sons was governor of Santo Domingo in the Dominican Republic and had the body buried there. The body was later transferred to Cuba, and in 1898 brought back here. University of Granada researchers are currently looking at the DNA of the body in the tomb to see if Seville has the true remains (they are comparing it to the DNA of one of his sons, buried in the cathedral).

Guitarist in Seville

Attached to the cathedral is the Giralda minaret, all that remains of an old mosque on the site and today the most recognized symbol of the city.

Nearby at the Archivos de Indias, we were fascinated by copies of documents and maps that are on display, including papers signed by King Ferdinand for Columbus' voyages and the coat of arms of L.A., circa 1538, which interestingly depicts a castle that looks very much like Cinderella's palace at Disneyland.

Downtown shops include several selling flamboyant flamenco costumes. Tapas bars seem to be on every corner.

One day, Jan and I followed the crowd to Casa Roman, deep in Barrio de Santa Cruz, where we stood chatting at the bar, standing under hanging hams, with a bunch of men (their wives and children were seated at nearby tables). Much to their amusement, we asked in our broken Spanish what to order and were advised to go with a plate of ham, a delicious bean dish and fried cod. One fellow introduced us to his godchild.

We felt right at home, in magical Seville.

'Highway to Hell' leads to Plymouth

Back in Black rocks Memorial Hall

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

BACK IN BLACK: The Ultimate AC/DC Tribute Rocks Plymouth Memorial Hall; August 5

It's a long way to the top if you wanna rock and roll. And it seems even longer to find any public signs of Australian metal-rock icons AC/DC these days. It's been six years since the band's last studio album, 2000's Stiff Upper Lip, and there are no current plans for any national or worldwide tours.

Plymouth Memorial Hall has the next best thing, however, as the theatre hosts Back In Black: The Ultimate Tribute to AC/DC, on Saturday (August 5) at 8 p.m. Hailing from the Dallas/Fort Worth area, Back In Black, as the show billing suggests, is recognized as the U.S.'s premier tribute band to AC/DC and come Saturday will be ready to take you down the highway to hell, or just shake you all night long.

"We're looking forward to coming up to play in the Boston area, because we know there's always been a big AC/DC following in the Northeast, plus we've never toured in that part of the country," said lead guitarist and band spokesman Mike Mroz, who faithfully fills the role of AC/DC guitar slinger Angus Young, even if, at 6 feet tall, he's hardly a ringer for the diminutive real-life axeman, who's only 5'3".

Everything else about Mroz's tribute part, however, is honed right to the letter, from Angus's thunder-striking riffs and solos to his sweat-packed schoolboy uniform and even the occasional enactment of the guitarist's legendarily notorious onstage antics that are unmentionable here.

"Any time I've gone to see AC/DC live, or watched and studied their films and videos, I've noticed that the guitars always look so big strapped around Angus (Young), and on his brother, Malcolm, too for that matter, who's just about the same size," said Mroz, a Chicago native.

"But to me, Angus is simply one of the most amazing rock guitarists ever. His riffs and overall style are the sort that you can always spot them right away. It's all essentially blues-based, but there aren't too many players I know of who can play so great like that and at the same time runaround onstage and play with that kind of energy," Mroz said.

Back in Black's popularity and drawing power has at times rivaled even that of AC/DC themselves.

Back in Black is self-described as dedicated to capturing the power and excitement of AC/DC, including all of the best material from eras of lead vocalists, the late Bon Scott and now longtime front man Brian Johnson. Back in Black was formed in Los Angeles in late 2001 by former bandmates Mroz and vocalist Darren Caperna, who worked the LA club scene at such venues as the Whisky A-Go-Go and the Roxy playing mostly original rock but, as Mroz said, "we always closed out with an AC/DC tune."

Other band members, Jay Benzi (drums), and Mike Wagner (guitar) were found via an ad in the Dallas Observer, and Taylor Smith (bass) was recently added.

Back in Black's popularity and drawing power has at times rivaled even that of AC/DC themselves. The band has performed sold out shows in Sarasota to Toronto, and also played to over 36,000 people at the Bone Bash held on September 11, 2004 in Ft Worth.

The band was also recruited by 20th Century Fox, who chose Back in Black over all other tribute bands to record AC/DC's classics "TNT" and "A Long Way to the Top" for two of their movies, Napoleon Dynamite and Garage Days. Although for the first-named movie, Mroz said, BIB was eventually bumped off when MTV bought the distribution rights and retooled the soundtrack, the band nonetheless enjoyed exposure on the 20th Century Fox website for a time.

Back In Black have shared bills with Cheap Trick, Foghat, Bad Company, Blue Oyster Cult, Grand Funk Railroad, and Vince Neil of Motley Crue among others. But the band's favorite live date was when Brenda Johnson, wife of Brian Johnson, saw the show in Sarasota in October, '04 and said (vocalist) Caperna "Looked, sounded, and moved just like her husband, and I thought the band was incredible!"

Back in Black plays Plymouth Memorial Hall, Saturday, Aug. 5. at 8 p.m. All tickets for Back In Black are $20 and at General Admission. Tickets are available at the Plymouth Memorial Hall box-office, located at 50 Court Street in Plymouth, by phone at 508-747-1340, and online at www.plymouthhall.com. Tickets can also be purchased at all Strawberries outlets. This show is presented by Loretta LaRoche Productions.

Movie review

Jay (Jason Mewes) and Silent Bob (Kevin Smith) refer to their little black book while loitering.

Check out 'Clerks'

"Clerks 2" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

According to Thomas Wolfe, you can't go home again. This is especially true if you burn your home down in the opening scene, as Kevin Smith does to the shabby, suburban New Jersey Quick Mart he made famous in "Clerks," a 1994 film one of my colleagues described as his favorite $27,000 movie.

Dante Hicks (Brian O'Halloran) and Randal Graves (Jeff Anderson), the Butch and Sundance of no-budget, New Jersey-set indie films, instead take jobs at nearby Mooby's, a fast-food restaurant with a Western steer motif. Mooby's is the home of the Cow Tipper burger and Udderly Delicious Skinny Shake.

Dante is about to leave New Jersey forever for a new home and a new life in Florida, where he plans to marry the sweet and smitten Emma (Jennifer Schwalbach, Smith's wife) and work for his father-in-law, a carwash magnate. "Star Wars" buff Randal, meanwhile, can't tell the difference between Helen Keller and Anne Frank and is taking out his frustration at losing his best friend on "Lord of the Rings" fanboy Elias (an inspired Trevor Fehrman). Elias, for his part, is hugely excited at the prospect of the live-action "Transformers" movie.

Elias, Randal and Dante engage in ridiculously lewd, pop-culture and profanity-laden conversations and debates familiar to anyone who's seen "Clerks." That Dante and Randal are no longer 20-something slackers and are now 33-year-old men puts a different complexion entirely upon their lives and interests.

I don't know how much Rosario Dawson was paid to play Becky, the manager of Mooby's. But it was not enough. Dawson's Becky brings such warmth and joy to the film it's astonishing.

A self-professed cynic when it comes to love, Becky is pregnant with Dante's child, the result of a mad after-hours encounter on the Mooby's prep table. What will Dante do?

Arguably, "Clerks II" is the third (at least) installment in the "Clerks" saga after the underwhelming 2001 effort "Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back." It lacks the indie-film credibility of the no-budget original, although it boasts celebrity cameos from Jason Lee and Ben Affleck. In the roles of Jay and Silent Bob, Jason Mewes and Smith, sporting what looks like a double-wide overcoat, return, and they're still hanging out front selling "the chronic." Whatever his personal demons, Mewes is a unique comic presence, and his impersonation of Jame Gumb from "The Silence of the Lambs" is spot-on hilarious.

His Jay is also a recovering junkie and Christian convert the Christians might want to throw to the lions themselves. As Bob, Smith continues to channel the late John Belushi.

Homophobic, racially insensitive geeks with a fondness for bestiality humor and a tendency to hurl extreme insults at one and all, Dante, Randal and company are losers. But they're also recognizably human, and losers deserve their movies, too.

With his "Clerks" films, Smith has been mining a John Waters-like vein of provincial-slacker filmmaking. What he does is extremely limited and not to everyone's taste. But no one does it as well, or in the case of "Clerks II," as surprisingly poignantly. "Clerks II" also boasts a "Star Wars" vs. "The Lord of the Rings" smackdown scene that is guaranteed to incite an Internet war. To hell with Luke. Frodo lives!

Rated R. "Clerks II" contains explicit, sexually graphic language and situations.

LEMMING (C)

"Lemming" is an eerie and strange thriller that's more puzzling than ghoulishly good. Set in a picturesque town in the south of France, "Lemming" takes us into the lives of Alain (Laurent Lucas) and his wife Benedicte (Charlotte Gainsbourg), a young, dreamy couple whose lives are interrupted when a supernatural spirit threatens to ruin Alain's life. At first intense and gripping, the film is all pandemonium and little payoff. (Not Rated.) -Chelsea Bain

MONSTER HOUSE (B+)

Who could have guessed trick-or-treating could be this much fun in July? This Halloween-set animated film is a haunted-house movie about puberty. DJ (Mitchel Musso) believes he is responsible for the death of his mean, scraggly toothed neighbor, Nebbercracker (Steve Buscemi), who lived in an old, run-down wood-frame house. Soon, Nebbercracker's house itself is calling DJ on the phone, making evil noises and trying to swallow him and his friends. To figure out how to "kill" the house, the boys enlist legendary gamer Skull (Jon Heder), master of "Thou Art Dead." (Rated PG)

THE MOSTLY UNFABULOUS SOCIAL LIFE OF ETHAN GREEN (C+)

A romantic gay comedy about a serious subject — the reluctance of Ethan Green (Daniel Letterle) to commit to a relationship — "Mostly Unfabulous" is filled with smart quips, fast pacing, attractive actors and bright colors. Unfortunately, it's also a film that never gets its tone right, and its climax, which mirrors "The Graduate," is all too predictable. -Stephen Schaefer

MY SUPER EX-GIRLFRIEND (C+)

Hell hath no fury like a superwoman scorned. Uma Thurman and Luke Wilson are the title's girlfriend and boyfriend. He's Matt Saunders, a prosperous designer on the prowl. She's Jenny Johnson, a shy and seemingly withdrawn assistant art gallery curator — and G-Girl, a superheroine in the Superman mold, and a neurotic, jealous and needy girlfriend. The film is a by-the-numbers variation on the "Bewitched" theme with a superhero twist. Most of the jokes are in the revenge of the superwoman theme. And yes, all the good stuff is in the trailers. (Rated PG-13)

ONCE IN A LIFETIME (A)

Today, people might fancy the likes of David Ortiz and Coco Crisp, but 30 years ago, Pele and Giorgio Chinaglia were idolized. The sport they played was soccer, a game that never quite hit the bull's-eye in the States but had a brief moment in the sun here. Paul Crowder and John Dower's "Once in a Lifetime: The Extraordinary Story of the New York Cosmos" is a trippy flashback to a time when a unique team packed Giants Stadium and a black-and-white orb was the ball of choice. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

A couple of neighborhood kids want their basketball back, but are leery of a posted warning in "Monster House."

RUSSIAN DOLLS (B+)

Xavier (Romain Duris) is a 30-year-old writer who thinks someone better is just over the horizon. When he is hired to write the biography of a jet-setting Paris model, he cannot resist falling for her. "Russian Dolls" takes its name from those painted Matryoshka figurines nesting inside each other, totems of infinity. The image is an apt metaphor for some people's endless romantic quest for Mr. or Ms. Right. In French with English subtitles. (Not Rated)

Ongoing

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

CLICK (D)

With the help of a new remote control, architect Michael Newman (Adam Sandler) finds that he can mute people, freeze action and restart it at will, fast-forward past unpleasant things and rewind to past events. Much of the action in this uninspired, gratuitously gimmicky and derivative comedy is so mean-spirited that it suggests a movie made by people who killed college classmates in fraternity hazing incidents. I'd say fast-forward through "Click." But you'd be better served by just hitting the "Off" button. Click. (Rated PG-13)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

THE GREAT NEW WONDERFUL (C+)

"The Great New Wonderful" is neither great, new nor wonderful. More like a misconceived play than a movie, it charts the post-9/11 malaise of a group of New Yorkers (Maggie Gyllenhaal, Tony Shalhoub, Edie Falco, Judy Greer and Olympia Dukakis). "The Great New Wonderful" aspires to be a quirky, multi-character, mosaiclike indie in the "Crash"-"Magnolia" manner. But the film's unsubtle point is that the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks have left psychic scars, a pervasive sense of meaninglessness and deep-seated desire for payback. That such feelings are a virtual universal part of the human condition is not acknowledged. (Rated R)

THE HIDDEN BLADE (A)

"The Hidden Blade" is not a violent gorefest, but an occasionally comic, surprisingly tender love story. Brooding, psychologically scarred Munezo Katagiri (Masatoshi Nagase) is a lower-caste samurai in a backwater town. With the woman he secretly loves is being starved to death, Munezo is required by his shogun to learn the basics of Western artillery and rifle fire, and he's been ordered to divulge the names of anyone on familiar terms with fellow samurai and ex-friend Hazama (Yukiyoshi Ozawa), a convicted traitor to the shogun. All Munezo can do is follow the path of the samurai and his heart, however difficult or perilous that path might be. In Japanese with English subtitles. (Rated R)

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

LEONARD COHEN: I'M YOUR MAN (B-)

"Leonard Cohen: I'm Your Man" is an amiable documentary about the poet laureate of folk-rock singer-songwriters. It's a Cohen lovefest, featuring a concert that took place in Sydney, Australia, in January 2005. Comprising home movies, archival footage, still photos and Cohen tunes covered by such artists as Rufus Wainwright, Nick Cave, Linda Thompson, Kate and Anna McGarrigle and Bono, the film is a by-the-numbers blueprint for a tribute DVD. (Rated PG-13)

LITTLE MAN (B)

Harmless and silly, "Little Man" is the simple story of Calvin (Marlon Wayans), a pint-size ex-con who uses his skimpy stature to break the law. Dressed in diapers, Calvin plants himself on a couple's doorstep and makes the phrase "goo-goo-ga-ga" his motto. He soon finds his newfound caregivers make him a little misty-eyed for his parentless past. "Little Man" may reach below the belt for its laughs but knows how to soften the blow with good performances and funny horseplay. (Rated PG-13.) -Chelsea Bain

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT (A-)

Mrs. Palfrey (Joan Plowright) moves to London to be near her 26-year-old grandson, who, oddly, doesn't show up. Instead, Mrs. Palfrey persuades aspiring young writer Ludovic Meyer (Rupert Friend) to impersonate her grandson to deflect the attention of busybody hotel residents. A rare friendship develops between the lonely widow and young artist. Brimming with warmth and intelligence, "Mrs. Palfrey" is small film, yet completely delightful. (Not Rated)

NACHO LIBRE (B+)

Behold Nacho Libre, the summer's most winning superhero. Nacho springs from the wacky netherworld of Lucha Libre (masked Mexican professional wrestling). An orphan who grew up in a monastery, Nacho, also known as Ignacio (Jack Black), is now the orphanage's cook and caretaker, and yearns to get fresher ingredients for the children's food. Hoping to win the big Battle Jam and use the money to help the orphans, Nacho trades in his monk's robes for "stretchy pants" and the trademark, lace-up mask of the Mexican luchador (wrestler). (Rated PG)

PEACEFUL WARRIOR (C)

This assaultive adaptation of the inspirational 1980 book "Way of the Peaceful Warrior" by athlete turned new age author Dan Millman, follows the spiritual journey of Dan (Scott Mechlowicz), an injured gymnast. With the help of "Socrates" (Nick Nolte), Dan weans himself off his abusive diet of beer, fast-food, cheap sex and cheaper sex partners in hopes of qualify for the Olympic tryouts. "Peaceful Warrior" shamelessly attempts to persuade viewers that they're experiencing something sublime. But the film's spiritual themes reminded me of Bill Murray's greenskeeper in "Caddyshack" encouraging himself to "be the ball." (Rated PG-13)

PIRATES OF THE CARIBBEAN: DEAD MAN'S CHEST (A-)

"Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest," the second installment in Disney's "Pirates" trilogy, is the best and most spectacular summer blockbuster thus far. The plot is a potpourri of piratical nonsense involving the arrest and escape of Will Turner (Orlando Bloom) and Elizabeth Swann (Keira Knightley), that mysterious chest, a Monte Cristo-like escape by Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp), a cannibal tribe, a Kraken and, best of all, the legendary Davy Jones himself. This funny, imaginative, witty and action-packed film is overlong by at least 30 minutes. But overall it's that rarest of summer behemoths: a sequel superior to its predecessor. (Rated PG-13)

Bus fees back on the table

School Committee could change mind

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Numbers have been painted in the parking spaces at the high school — step one for implementing parking fees for students. However, at Wednesday night's School Budget and Finance subcommittee meeting, fees for parking and riding the bus were put back on the table.

Members of the School Committee admitted they were surprised when Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh informed the board at its July 17 meeting the district had a roughly $430,000 surplus at the close of fiscal 2006. Not knowing there would be such a surplus, which would be used to pay ahead for fiscal 2007, the board had voted to implement a number of fees for fiscal 2007, including bus and parking fees, implementing junior varsity sports fees and raising varsity sports fees.

"Had I known what the surplus would have been, I'm not sure I would have voted the same way," said School Committee member Steve Fusco.

In addition to their own concern, members of the School Committee said they have been receiving many phone calls from residents who were also shocked to hear of the surplus. In light of the recent events, member Jamie Williams made a motion for the board to reconsider its vote to implement and increase in fees for this year, and the motion passed unanimously.

The discussion was part of a larger subcommittee meeting, at which all five School Committee members attended, that tackled issues such as the inadequacies of the current budget reporting systems and process, and the School Committee's receiving more timely information. At the meeting, the School Committee also discussed adding "cost centers" and tracking line item transfers. Before the end of the night, the board voted in favor of drafting a policy, which would require School Committee approval for budget transfers. The board also went into executive session to discuss "contracts for non-union personnel." Due to time constraints, the meeting will be more fully reported in next week's Mariner.

Before taking a vote, Walsh asked to provide the board with Linda Elworthy, new director of the Council on Elder Affairs, just completed her first month on the job.

Elworthy's enthusiasm is contagious

Takes over helm of CEA

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Heading up services for the town's seniors is no easy job. But new director for the Council on Elder Affairs Linda Elworthy, who has just finished up her first month in town, is already proving she is up to the task.

Elworthy comes to Cohasset with many years of elder affairs, health care and nursing experience. She spent the last eight years as Director of Elder Affairs for the city of Salem, Mass., but is looking forward to working on the South Shore and becoming part of the community.

"This is a wonderful community," said Elworthy, adding she is currently living in a temporary apartment in Hull, but is looking to find a place in Cohasset. She said it is always her preference to live and work in the same community, and she is looking forward to becoming a resident of the town.

"Driving back to Hull each evening, I almost go off the road. It's just spectacular view after spectacular view," she said. "The ocean is extremely healing for me and always has been. Being this close is a dream come true."

But while she might feel as if her new home is a vacation spot, that doesn't mean she has had a moment to relax since her arrival. Elworthy has remained very busy ensuring all the programs started by former director Kathy Bryanton are kept running smoothly, and new programs which the community would like to see are begun. "We'll make changes, but we'll go slow," said

MBTA stalls parking powow

Wants no public or media scrutiny

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The MBTA is pushing back against the Board of Selectmen, which says it will only have dispute resolution discussions in open session. Currently the town and the authority, which is building the new Greenbush commuter rail line, are butting heads about the number of parking spaces to be constructed in the municipal parking lot behind the shops on South Main Street, and have entered into a phase two dispute resolution process.

Both parties, as well as members of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction were scheduled to meet July 26, but on the day of the meeting, attorney for the MBTA William Mitchell sent a letter to the town asking the meeting be held in executive session at a later date. The Board of Selectmen then asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis if the meeting could legally be held in executive session under the Open Meeting Law. He replied there are no exceptions under the law to allow the meeting to be held behind closed doors, and the town informed the MBTA it would hold all future meetings in public.

Some stickers stuck in wrong spot

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Have you put your all-facilities sticker in the wrong spot? If so, you may have found out the hard way. Police have been ticketing motor vehicles that have not displayed the sticker in the lower left of the windshield (on the driver's side).

"What we tried to do this year, is to get people to conform to put the sticker in the same location," said Police Chief James Hussey.

To that end the police provided a notice that was available when residents purchased their stickers at Town Hall. The notice explains where the sticker should be placed and states if the sticker is in another location, the vehicle could be tagged.

"But it appears that some people did not read it and have put the sticker in a different location," Hussey said. "Some people have been ticketed who, in reality, did have a sticker."

Hussey said having uniform sticker placement makes the process more efficient in terms of policing vehicles that are parked at Sandy Beach that should not be. Having stickers at various locations on a vehicle — including on tinted windows — makes the job more difficult when the officer has to search for the sticker.

"It makes it easier for us to identify the people who are not supposed to be there." Hussey said about uniform sticker placement.

Hussey said seasonal officers are focusing on parking enforcement on Sandy Beach, the village and Government Island on weekends.

Hussey said residents can move the sticker to the lower left, front corner of the windshield. If that is not possible, a new sticker can be issued at Town Hall for $2.

According to the Town Clerk's office, the sticker placement is nothing new. The town went to an "all-facilities sticker" in 2003 (rather than issuing separate beach and RTF stickers). The all-facilities sticker is supposed to be placed on the lower left front of the windshield. Before the summer of 2003, beach stickers were placed on the rear passenger side window. The Town Clerk's office also provides information about sticker placement when the stickers are purchased.

The Town Manager serves as Parking Clerk and the application for an appeal is obtained and turned in at his office. The fine for parking at Sandy Beach without a sticker is $50.

"I would say most of the appeals are from those who purchased the sticker but placed it in the wrong location," Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

There are other fines for other offenses. Most are $25 for such things as obstructing a driveway, restricted parking, or within 20 feet of an intersection. All those fines go into the general fund. The fine for handicapped parking is $100, and those funds go into a special fund for handicapped accessibility needs.

"This is only my second summer here, so I can only compare this year to last year in terms of the number of appeals. There seem to be more, but most relate to the location of the sticker itself," Griffin said.

He said this summer he is forgiving the parking fine for misplacement of the sticker. "We will work on a better system for next year that will hopefully take care of this once and for all," Griffin said.

Youths clash

A group of teenagers ranging in age from 15 to 18 from Cohasset and Hingham had an altercation last Friday on Milliken Field that resulted in fisticuffs between two of the youths. According to Chief James Hussey, a Cohasset teenager punched a Hingham teen in the face breaking his nose.

Hussey said the dispute was over money; some Hingham teens arrived to find out who took the money.

The victim was transported to South Shore Hospital. Hussey said police are seeking a complaint of assault and battery against the Cohasset youth.

Hussey said it was fortunate the incident did not escalate further. He explained the boy's nose was bleeding so badly, it may have scared the other teens.

MVs entered

Police are investigating two incidents of motor vehicles being entered last week. In both cases the cars were unlocked and wallets that included some cash and other items were stolen.

The incidents on Bayberry Lane and Woodland Drive were reported at 11:12 a.m. and 12:42 p.m., respectively, on Thursday (Aug. 3). Police believe the thefts occurred over night.

Water balloon

A motor vehicle was hit with a water balloon at Forest Avenue and North Main Street last Wednesday (Aug. 2). Police received the call at about 1:30 p.m. but the perpetrator or perpetrators, likely kids, could not be found.

"Whether it's a water balloon or a snowball – when it hits, it distracts the driver and can cause them to take their eyes off the road, potentially causing an accident," Chief James Hussey said.

Sleepy driver

For the second time in two weeks, a motorist has driven off the road after falling asleep. At 12:17 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 4), a motorist fell asleep at the wheel in the vicinity of 164 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Chief James Hussey said the car, which was traveling southbound, crossed over into the northbound lane hitting at sign at 164 CJC Hwy. and a fence.

The operator was cited for crossing the double yellow line, and failure to use care, and is responsible for the property damage.

Last week, another motorist fell asleep and hit a guardrail on Route 3A near Rose Hill Lane.

Car crashes

Police said a bottle that rolled onto the floor of a 1996 Mazda caused a two-car accident last week on N. Main Street.

Chief James Hussey said a 2003 Volkswagen was turning right into Wheelwright Park at about 4:15 p.m., Wednesday (Aug. 2) when the Mazda hit it in the rear.

Hussey said the operator of the Mazda said a bottle rolled onto the floor and got lodged behind the brake pedal so the car couldn't stop. No one was transported to the hospital following the accident. Police did not cite the driver of the Mazda but the accident report explains the operator of the Volkswagen was not at fault and the operator of the Mazda was deemed responsible for the accident.

A chain-reaction accident occurred last Thursday (Aug. 3) at 11:58 a.m. on Sohier Street near Fairoaks Lane. Hussey said traffic was heavy following a children's program at the Music Circus. He explained a 2001 Nissan Pathfinder stopped in traffic, as did a 2006 Toyota Highlander that was behind the Nissan. But the third car, a 2005 Buick Century, did not stop; it hit the Toyota pushing it into the Nissan.

The operator of the Buick was cited for following too close. "People have to remember to leave two to three car lengths in slow traffic," Hussey said. "That allows a motorist time to react."

Water rescue

On Monday (July 31) at 2:30 p.m., fire responded to a call about a woman in the water off Aaron River Road.

Here is what happened. A woman, who had been walking in Wompatuck State Park in Norwell with her dog, followed her dog into the river. She tried to get out on the Scituate side but the rocks were too slippery and she was worried she might hurt herself.

She stayed in the water and called for help; someone heard her on the Aaron River Road side. Cohasset fire responded and with the help of the Scituate Fire Department launched the boat and went out and picked her up.

"The dog did not want anything to do with us," Fire Capt. Robert Silvia said. "So the Scituate dog officer went in from the Scituate side and got the dog."

"It was not a life-threatening situation," Silvia said. "Except that the woman found herself in a precarious situation. She was in the water and could not get back out."

Words exchanged

Police said young boaters seeking to dock at the Cohasset Yacht Club at 5:23 p.m. last Wed. (Aug. 2) were turned away and words were exchanged. Investigation later revealed that some of the occupants of the boat were under the influence of alcohol, but the driver was not. There was no alcohol on the boat. "There was no arrestable offense," Chief James Hussey said. "But if those at the yacht club feel there were threats made, we will seek a complaint."

School bus fees could be reconsidered

some more information. She said in her opinion, the fiscal 2006 and 2007 budgets were being confused. She said there was a surplus in the fiscal 2006 budget, but that doesn't mean the fees aren't needed for the fiscal 2007 budget. The override was supposed to be put into the fiscal 2007 budget, which meant when it failed, the school department needed to bring its budget down by roughly $1.2 million. The leftover funds from fiscal 2006 were used to help close that budgetary gap between what the school department said it needed and what it got. She said the board decided to increase and implement new fees to help close the gap as well. With four more special education tuitions added to the fiscal 2007 budget, totaling close to $300,000, having additional money from fees would be beneficial.

However, Alfred Slanetz said the fiscal 2007 budget is based on the fiscal 2006 figures, and in some cases, line items which showed a surplus this year are budgeted even higher for next year. He said the budget needs to be thoroughly vetted to ensure next year at this time, the schools aren't in a situation where they have close to $600,000 left over.

Fusco agreed and said there may be areas where the numbers were overestimated for fiscal 2007. "I don't want to charge these fees and find out next year we didn't have to," he said.

Williams then made a motion to rescind the vote taken to implement fees for transportation and student parking. She felt the other fees dealing with sports were more complicated issues and decided not to discuss them at this time.

Williams said the School Committee attended many budget discussions to talk about the necessity of passing an override. "We repeatedly said we need between $500,000 and $700,000 every year just to open the doors. Without it ($400,000 from failed 2006 override), how could we then find $430,000? We've had $1 million washing in and out of this budget," she said. "We repeatedly told people we were in a crisis situation."

"I don't want to charge these fees and find out next year we didn't have to."
— Steve Fusco, School Committee

Slanetz said when making decisions, it is prudent to have the best information available at the time. "We were given a slightly different operational picture at the time we took the vote" to implement fees, he said. "When you raise fees, it has to be for good reasons. Ours were raised because we thought we'd lose five teachers who were retiring. To raise fees when you're potentially running a surplus or profit, just having fees for fees' sake, that's what we're questioning," he said.

Slanetz said the level of information coming in to the School Committee needs to increase. "We were pre-purchasing in May and June and we didn't know until July," he said.

Walsh noted when pre-purchasing materials and supplies, the orders need to arrive at the school prior to the end of the fiscal year on June 30, which is why the purchases were made when they were.

"It still warranted discussion," said Fusco.

Williams brought her motion up for a vote and while members agreed the fees need to be looked at more carefully, none felt comfortable taking them off the table until the fiscal 2007 budget is thoroughly gone over. The motion was defeated 4-1.

Forest Avenue work continues

Greenbush liaison Mark Brennan recently sent a letter to Carlos Sanchez, county engineer for Norfolk County, asking for additional drainage work on Forest Avenue near Wheelwright Park.

In the letter he states, "As you know, the Heather Drive drainage project is nearing completion. Based on the many reviews of the Forest Avenue roadway situation, the town of Cohasset recognized not only the need for this project (as it appears to be working!) but also the need for additional drainage to be constructed near Wheelwright Park on Forest Avenue, as we discussed. Please take this correspondence as the town's official request to commence design of drainage plans so that this project may be designed and built as soon as possible.

"As you know, the long-range plan is to completely resurface Forest Avenue including a complete sidewalk on the west side of the road. This cannot be done until the drainage adjacent to the road is properly constructed, so we need this part of the puzzle done first," he said. "Once the plans are complete, please notify this office so we can commence the plan review, permitting and the bid process."

Brennan also sent a letter to Joseph McNichols, county surveyor, asking the road be properly surveyed prior to any drainage work being done. "The town of Cohasset is requesting that the road be surveyed to accurately layout the center line in preparation for this road to be reconstructed in the near future...We expect to undertake this project in the spring of 2007, so the survey should probably be done this fall so preliminary plans could be accurately updated."

Should sidewalk curb be curbed?

Selectman Rob Spofford said he has received a number of phone calls regarding the sidewalk near St. Stephen's church in the Village. While the sidewalk is technically "rolled" and does not have a hard edge, which would damage tires, it is still high and not easily driven up on, which makes that section of South Main Street really tight. He said the combination of the sidewalk and the angled parking spaces, which often have vehicles backing up into both lanes of traffic, are causing congestion. "I don't know what the action is, it's just a concern," he said.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said regular sidewalks are 6 inches high while the sidewalks near St. Stephen's are 4 inches with a 2-inch radius. "It will take a little something to go over it, but it shouldn't hurt your tires," he said.

Selectman Fred Koed said the board should verify the sidewalks were built in accordance with the plans. Spofford said he would speak with Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, who worked with the construction company throughout the project, and report back to the board.

Dormitzer said the easiest way to remedy the situation would be to re-paint the parking space lines to have a 30-degree angle rather than 45 degrees, but that would mean losing a space or two downtown. He said the town could also choose to impose car size limitations for the spaces at that end of the Village.

Looking at increasing Cohasset tax base and savings

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Economic Development Committee has made huge strides in bringing new ideas for increasing the town's commercial tax base to fruition. Still riding the wave of success from the April Town Meeting, which saw the passage of two new zoning articles, the committee isn't sitting still. Their ideas for increasing revenue continue to flow.

Members of the committee came before the Board of Selectmen Monday, to give an update on the initiatives they are working on. Chairman Peter Brown said the passage of the Transit Oriented District bylaw (which will allow construction of mixed-use housing near the new Greenbush train station) and the parking ratio reduction bylaw (which brought the number of parking spaces down from 10 to 5 per 1000 square feet of space on Route 3A) will both help increase commercial development, and in turn tax revenue, for the town. Passing the articles has also helped pave the way for new initiatives.

With fewer parking spaces on Route 3A, greater density development can be constructed. The EDC has plans to follow-up with land holders of under- or undeveloped properties along 3A and find ways to encourage them to create new commercial development.

The committee is also currently working on evaluating the disposition of "parcel two" a piece of town-owned land located at the south end of the municipal parking lot near the Red Lion Inn. "We believe this property should be surplused as soon as possible, a feasibility study completed to determine the highest and best uses, and a bid package developed and put out to bid," said Brown. He added because the town does not have the resources to complete a feasibility study, money would be needed to complete one.

"It will be important to incorporate part of the property to expand existing municipal parking. Also key to the final disposition is evaluating the relocation of the Teen Garage, which should be part of the bid package. We see this as either a long-term lease or an outright sale of a portion of the property.

"Also, since it is our goal to change the Village bylaw to encourage additional multiuse development, this parking will be needed to accommodate this growth," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said while he appreciates the effort, the town is currently in a second stage dispute resolution process with the MBTA over the municipal parking lot, and plans for the site cannot be set until both sides come to an agreement. The town and MBTA have different views when it comes to how many parking spaces the municipal lot should have. "At this point, we can't endorse or not endorse your effort," he said.

Selectman Rob Spofford agreed. "It's great to have it on your agenda, but we can't touch it," he said.

The EDC would like to change the Village Business District Bylaw or develop a new overlay district that supports multi-use development downtown. The current bylaw prohibits adding multi-family dwellings in the downtown business district on lots less than 40,000 square feet, which Brown said he feels is too restrictive and discourages any multi-use development. "In addition to generating new tax revenue, this bylaw change is needed to create greater business activity in the downtown village district to better support the businesses there.

"The EDC is very mindful that any such bylaw change must be fair to all village property owners affected, include extensive dialogue with all parties concerned to create a vision that all stakeholders agree to and one that includes the study of building facades that require protection and one that maintains Cohasset's very special character," Brown said.

Spofford cautioned that at one point in time, whoever wrote the bylaws for the downtown area thought having a 40,000-square-foot minimum was a good idea, and the EDC should go back into the town's history and find out why. "But, you're putting it on the table, and that's what we asked you to do," he said.

In addition to generating more tax revenue for the town, the EDC focuses on ways to save money. Therefore, it is in full support of the work being done by the Alternative Energy Committee, especially its initiative to bring wind power to Cohasset. "We need to explore ways to cut energy costs in town, especially for the large users, such as the schools. We believe wind power is a logical, appropriate way to accomplish this goal and fully support the AEC's efforts to do so," said Brown.

EDC member Peter Richardsson added while the AEC is looking at wind power from turbines, there is also the possibility of looking into smaller "egg beaters" which are essentially turbines that can be erected on private property, unlike the larger variety which requires using town-owned land. He said they could potentially be put up at the schools and at the wastewater treatment plant, and the building at which they are built can use the power generated.

Brown said one of the major obstacles in increasing commercial development in town is the lack of clarity regarding sewer capacity in town. "We have heard from the Sewer Commission that the Village Sewer District only has 13-15 EDUs (equivalent domestic units) available. Assuming this is true, no real development can occur unless and until additional sewer capacity is developed or we make a deal with Hull to rearrange sewer capacity," he said.

Dormtizer said the sewer problems brought up by the EDC are ones his board has grappled with many times before. "This is one of the largest Pandora's Box," he said, adding it is an issue that will certainly be revisited in the future, after the expansion of the Little Harbor sewer district takes place.

Two new committee appointments

Two Cohasset boards gained a member Monday night. The Board of Selectmen appointed Mark Rattenbury of Pleasant Street to the Harbor Committee and Michael Milanoski of South Main Street to the Economic Development Committee.

Rattenbury is a lifelong, third generation resident of the town with many years of experience on the harbor. He took sailing lessons at the Cohasset Sailing Club in elementary school, worked on the lobster boat "Prime Ribs" as a teenager, and spent six years in the US Navy Submarine Service.

Rattenbury said he feels the harbor needs an infusion of new energy and ideas and he looks forward to working with the committee.

Milanoski has been in town roughly one month and is eager to participate on the Economic Development Committee. He currently serves as the Executive Director of the City of Attleboro's Redevelopment Authority and is also nationally certified as an economic developer by the International Economic Development Council. He has his master's degree in regional planning focused on economic development. "I am here to offer my services and provide any assistance I can and learn more about the town," he said.

Chairman of the Economic Development Committee Peter Brown said the committee has met Milanoski and gives its complete support to his appointment. "He is going to be invaluable to our future success," Brown said.

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Hey Cohasset. I think that August vacations are in full swing as the news around town is pretty scarce. I will say that last weekend, the Cohasset Dramatic Club put on its performance of Cinderella and it was so magical. It is so amazing to see children from several towns come together and put together a terrific rendition of a well-known show. I was so proud of each child and the adults who were involved across the board. With rehearsals happening many times opposite the Farmers Market or on Sundays ending right before the carillon concert on the common, it is just so nice to see community events happening. We need to have more in my opinion and I would love to see some put together however it can happen. I have some ideas as do many others who came forward after my last request in the column. Anyone else have ideas or requests? "It takes a village" has a lot of meaning when people come together for the right reasons.

SUPPORT CHS SWIMMERS

The Cohasset High School Swim and Dive Team will have a Lobster Fest and silent auction fundraiser on Friday, Sept. 8 at Atlantica from 6:30 to 10:30 pm. This Team — which was re-established last year and is a joint team with Scituate High School— is not yet included in the Cohasset athletic budget and therefore, the Cohasset side of the team is privately funded. Last year this team came in second in the Patriot League with 18 swimmers qualifying for Sectionals and 10 swimmers qualifying for, and competing, in the State Competition. The Lobster Fest dinner includes clam chowder, lobster, mussels, barbequed chicken, corn on the cob, Caesar salad, rolls and watermelon. A cash bar will be available. Tickets are currently on sale at a cost of $35 for the lobster and $25 for "chicken only" and can be obtained by contacting Mandy Mahoney (383-9812) or Brenda Regan (383-0454). Gather a group of friends to celebrate the arrival of fall and support this team while enjoying a fabulous feast at Atlantica! Very tasty for all who attend and supports a fantastic cause.

BIKE WINNER

Cohasset resident Lily McCarthy was recently named a weekly winner in the 8th Annual Read to Ride reading incentive program sponsored by Dependable Cleaners. Lily, 9, is a student at Deer Hill Elementary School, where she learned about the Read to Ride program. Her winning entry form was for reading "Arthur Tricks the Tooth Fairy," by Marc Brown, and one of more than 4,300 entries received.

"I can't believe how many books Lily has read since she found out that she could win a new bike," said Lily's mother, Hortense. "She constantly asks me if we can go back to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library so she can choose some more books. The program has been a great incentive to keep her reading this summer."

Read to Ride offered children, ages 6-15, the chance to win a bike and helmet with a retail value up to $275 for every book they complete during the program.

"The success of this program relies heavily on the cooperation of local libraries and YMCAs, as well as parents, by promoting regular reading habits over the summer months," said Dependable Cleaners president Christina Hagearty, herself a mother of three young children. "Many parents have reported that the program influenced their children to read a lot more than they normally would."

Kate Bosworth has a super role

CHS graduate plays Lois Lane

By Peter Herman
CORRESPONDENT

Kate Bosworth, 23, daughter of Hal and Patti Bosworth of Cohasset, is soaring to new heights, playing "Lois Lane" in "Superman Returns" currently playing in theaters throughout the area (and the world).

Bosworth's Lois Lane is different from the one played some years ago by Margot Kidder. "She's five years older," noted Bosworth. "She feels like she's on top of the world." For Lane has just won a Pulitzer Prize for writing a piece saying that the world doesn't need Superman, who had vanished half a decade earlier without saying, "good-bye" to Lane. In addition Lane is now a single mother.

Therefore Bosworth doesn't feel there should be comparisons made between her Lois Lane, and Kidder's, believing that if the character had been written identically, "It would have been ridiculous to me. You learn and you change. In that five years she's gone through a lot of intensity in her life." This includes the departure of Superman, whom she loved. "It's a wound she can never heal from," Bosworth said. "Margot Kidder was fun and silly, she can't be the same person, that would have been ridiculous."

In comparison to other parts she has played in her now eight-year-long career, she "felt like the stakes were higher." While the movie is derived from the comic book, she stated that Lois Lane is, "not a comic book character, she has depth." Bosworth added, "It is an iconic film."

"Superman Returns" is certainly the biggest production Bosworth has appeared in. But she said, "Despite that I still felt like I was doing an intimate film." For this she gives credit to its director Bryan Singer.

Unlike many in the movie business Bosworth has not always sought the spotlight. For example she keeps personal matters personal. Ask her about any rumored relationship, she states in a kind but firm voice, "I don't discuss my private life." Now playing "Lois Lane," the question arises whether the trade off in playing such a high profile role could make it harder for her to shun the limelight. "One danger of getting more involved in the industry is that one can get lost. I don't ever want to be sucked into that," she said. "It's not interesting to me. I love the creative side."

"Right now I don't feel any different. I'm kind of in the eye of the tornado. I really don't think about it. I have a lot of friends in Los Angeles, writers, and fashion designers. They all bring something to the table. That's much more interesting to me than the Hollywood side."

Kate Bosworth

In comparison to other parts she has played in her now eight-year-long career, she "felt like the stakes were higher."

Filming on "Superman Returns" took place in Australia over a number of months. But Christmastime found her in Cohasset. Here she enjoyed the beauty of the town in the holiday season and its winter scenery. She was also able to see family and friends, in addition to shopping at local merchants.

One of her Cohasset friends recently moved to Los Angeles, and Bosworth is thrilled to have a longtime friend nearby.

"Interview" magazine is one publication, which features Bosworth on the cover for July. This is the second time "Interview" has featured her on the cover. The other was exactly four years ago, July 2002. In that issue Bosworth was interviewed by fellow cast member Michelle Rodriguez. The question thus arose whether she would like to interview someone she is appearing with, now or in the future? "Yes, I would love to do it. Now that I'm playing a journalist. I'm dying to do it!"

Bosworth, 2001 Cohasset High graduate, was recently scheduled to be in Japan. She said she would be attending the Fuji Festival its for environmental awareness, and promoting the movie.

Bosworth's next project is a smaller one called "Seasons of Dust" which takes place in Depression era Oklahoma.

Summer craft series – As summer begins to wind down, we are exploring creatures from the ocean in our craft series. Stop by during regular museum hours over the next two weeks and create an ocean scene, a jellyfish or starfish necklace.

50/50 raffle – Due to its success of last year, the 50/50 raffle is back. Tickets are available at the museum for $20 per ticket or six tickets for $100. Winner gets 50 percent of the ticket sales, so the more tickets sold, the bigger the prize. To track progress of ticket sales visit www.ourworldcgdm.org starting at the end of August. Drawing will be held at the 2nd Annual Cocktails Around the World party on Nov. 4.

Top Ten Reasons To Give Blood On A Regular Basis:

- Because the need for blood is growing every year.
- Because most people don't donate blood at all.
- Because many formerly regular blood donors can no longer give blood.
- Because it makes you part of the solution.
- Because blood has a limited "shelf life" and cannot be stockpiled.
- Because it's a great way to monitor your own health on a regular basis.
- Because we enjoy getting to know you better.
- Because it allows you to take advantage of the many fun promotions we offer each month.
- Because if every donor gave regularly, it would eliminate blood shortages once and for all.
- Because it saves lives.

Elworthy.

To help ensure new programs meet the needs of the community in Cohasset, she has formed suggestion boxes and will send out a survey to gain feedback. "I can have a vision, but it has no value if it doesn't meet the needs of the town's seniors," she said.

During the past month, Elworthy has come to find in Cohasset, the senior population has two prongs. There are the older seniors who make up the majority of the senior community the CEA supports, and there are the younger seniors who are coming up. The number of younger seniors will continue to be on the rise as the Baby Boomers continue to age, she said. "The CEA needs to make sure we are offering activities for the older seniors and make sure the younger seniors know there are activities for them as well," she said. Younger seniors can benefit from educational courses such as those dealing with Medicare insurance and nutritional seminars to stay healthy as they age.

"The senior population is growing and we're above the national average," said Elworthy of Cohasset, as 25 percent of its population, or 1,950 residents, are seniors. She said while in Salem, she oversaw programming for roughly 7,300 seniors, and that number was 18 percent of its population.

When it comes to providing senior services, Elworthy said she feels the general population has misconceptions about what senior centers provide. "People think of BINGO," but that couldn't be farther from the truth. "It is about services as well as programs," and for many seniors who are on fixed incomes or are living alone, the CEA is vital.

"The senior population is growing and we're above the national average."

— Linda Elworthy, CEA director

When families are dealing with an aging parent, Elworthy said the local senior center should be their first phone call. She said there are programs in place to provide respite care, to allow the full time caregiver a chance to go out and do the food shopping, other errands, or just take time for themselves and refresh.

For those seniors who are still living independently, but perhaps do not feel as comfortable driving to the store, or just need help lugging in the groceries, there are escort shopping programs which pick up the senior at their home, bring them to the supermarket, and will help bring in and put away the items purchased.

There are also lunches throughout the week and many other programs that cater to the social needs of seniors, such as bridge clubs, cooking clubs and walking clubs. "The things we are doing are critical," said Elworthy, and could not be accomplished without the help of the town's many volunteers. Cohasset is very lucky to have 150 current volunteers of all ages. "It absolutely thrills me," she said.

Since her arrival, Elworthy has been making the rounds, meeting with the various boards and organizations in town. She appeared before the Board of Selectmen and even appeared on Cohasset's own cable television show, "Our Town." She said back in Salem, she had her own television program, which ran at around 7 p.m., to enable both seniors and their caregivers the opportunity to watch, and she would love to have her own program here. She said every television show must have its own crew, which is able to produce the show, and she would love to have a group of seniors who can learn to run the equipment and work behind the scenes.

In addition, the same night she was on "Our Town," so was Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh. "I'd love us to do more with the schools," said Elworthy. In Salem, her senior citizens loved ballroom dancing and just before prom time, they held a class where the seniors citizens taught the high school students various steps for the big dance. "Of course, it all depends on the interest," she said, but added she is always trying to come up with ideas, which will spark new intergenerational activities.

Also in the works for the future, Elworthy would like to be able to offer more holistic health programs. "We have Reiki and we have yoga and they've had an herbalist come, but I'd love to have people experience a holistic chair massage," she said. By offering the programs through the CEA, seniors will be able to get a massage at a reasonable rate of charge, which they might otherwise not be able to afford. She said in Salem, massage was a huge hit with the seniors, and even one 96-year-old member of the community regularly showed up for hers.

Elworthy said behind all her efforts, the reality is, it takes money to make it happen. But she's not letting a lack of funding stifle her creativity. She said she would be reinstating the Friends of the Senior Center to help raise funds to keep things moving in a positive direction. "There is a limited amount of money in town and everyone wants a piece of the pie," she said. "The less I have to ask of the town, the more we'll be able to grow."

Stick it to the tax man

There's Christmas in July, and for the past two years in Massachusetts, Christmas in August.

For a while it looked like lawmakers might not get around to giving their stamp of approval to the third year of a sales tax holiday in August, what retailers describe as the dog days for selling big ticket items. Everyone goes on vacation in August.

But finally, just before adjourning for the next several months, thus ending the current legislative session, Beacon Hill approved lifting the 5 percent sales tax for the weekend of Aug. 12 and 13.

So, lace up your running shoes and shop 'til you drop this coming Saturday and Sunday. The weekend will no doubt give a shot in the arm to the economy, as consumers flock to shopping centers to take advantage of the tax break. That means more people in the malls and shopping plazas opening their wallets at restaurants and other businesses. And while they're there, maybe going to the movies?

As everyone knows, the Massachusetts economy has been in a bit of a slump. Last year retailers hauled in $500 million during the tax-free weekend with many businesses reporting a 20 percent hike in sales. That's no small change.

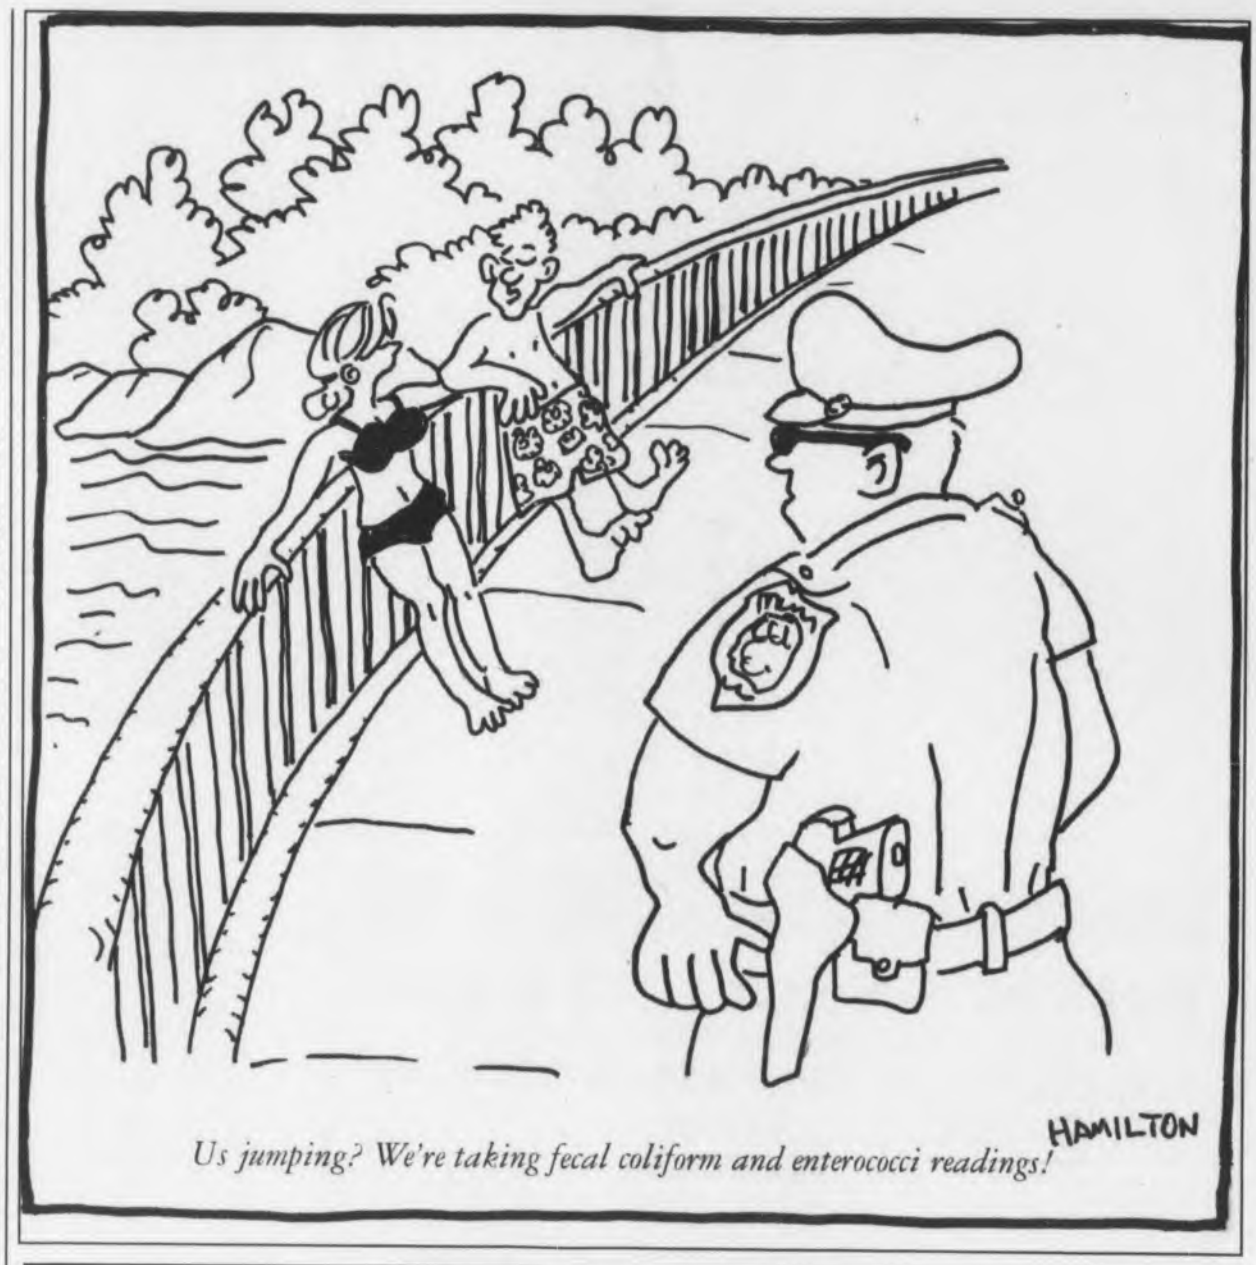
Critics of the sales tax holiday say it really doesn't give that much of a boost to retailers, as people don't buy more stuff, they just spend in August instead of November. Opponents say the sales tax reprieve deprives the state of much needed revenue.

Whatever, if you're in the market for a new computer for that college student of yours heading back to school, this is the right time to buy. For families outfitting an entire brood for back to school, the weekend can offer considerable savings. Then again, how about doing your Christmas shopping early, avoiding the last minute rush in December? Buy a new watch, couch or refrigerator, whatever strikes your fancy.

Many retailers will be offering additional savings to lure shoppers into the stores. Consumers will not be charged the sales tax on most purchases under $2,500. But in case you're looking to buy a yacht or a Hummer, remember exemptions include motorboats, vehicles, tobacco, meals and utilities. That's right, don't buy that computer sales tax free, and then stop for lunch and expect not to pay a meals tax. After all, the state of Massachusetts has only so much largesse.

Some legislators have voiced concern that institutionalizing the sales tax holiday deprives the state of much needed revenue. Thankfully, those voices were overruled by lawmakers who saw a chance to give the average consumer a much-needed break. Every little bit helps.

The sales tax holiday looks like it's become a Massachusetts tradition, and a popular one at that. Taxachusetts takes a holiday this weekend. It's about time.



Us jumping? We're taking fecal coliform and enterococci readings!

Poor parking habits

TO THE EDITOR:

I cannot see what all the fuss is about concerning parking spaces! It should be quite evident to anyone who drives in Cohasset that the average Cohasset driver pays no attention to parking spaces or to any of the white lines! This seems to be particularly true of the drivers of the big, gas guzzling SUVs.

Bus fees poorly thought out

TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to a recent bill my family and I received from the School Committee for bus fees, I thought it was important to alert all parents about a certain exception written into the Department of Education's Transportation Guide Policy (http://finance1.doe.mass.edu/transport/guide_1.html). Under the topic of "Eligibility", it states: "All children in grades kindergarten through six who reside more than two miles from the school they are entitled to attend and the nearest school bus stop is more than one mile from their residence and all children residing in regional school districts in grades kindergarten through twelve. /Exceptions to this policy may be made when road conditions do not provide for the physical safety of the children and when the health of students make this service essential./"

In essence, because the town of Cohasset has failed to provide adequate road conditions in many areas throughout the town (i.e. sidewalks), and there has been no written documentation or discussion (that I'm aware of) outlining the hiring of additional crossing guards for those children now deemed "walkers" (especially those who need to cross a State Highway — 3A), am I not correct to assume the Cohasset Public Schools (and all towns enacting these fees, for that matter) be 100 percent legally and financially responsible for providing a safe and adequate transportation service for those children who fall under this "physical safety exception", like they have done so in the past?

Now that this new policy has been promptly voted on and bills have been mailed, is the town of Cohasset now accountable for providing new sidewalks throughout the town where there are none, particularly along the path where children are expected to walk to school? Where is the plan to hire additional crossing guards or police details for the 3A/ Sohier Street intersection? Where is the proposal to deal with the influx of extra cars on the road due to all the people/ families not partaking in this program? And what about the already congested and poorly designed school parking lots (Osgood), which are inadequate during drop off and pick up times, especially during inclement weather? What about hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide emissions? As one example, 20 additional motor vehicles would result in six times more hydrocarbons and four times more carbon monoxide emissions. Who is going to step up to the plate and assume the liability if, God forbid, a child is killed or a family is involved in a bad accident en route to school? Where is the financial benefit and cost savings if the town has to hire crossing guards and build new sidewalks? After all, buses will still be operating to pick up those children beyond the 2 mile radius (passing by those within the radius!) and drivers are still being paid. This policy makes no sense from all perspectives— safety, environmental, or economic.

Please Cohasset, state mandated transportation for our children to school is a vital service to this town and this decision ultimately effects everyone. Please band together on this issue and force the school committee, business manager, and Superintendent to conduct studies and re-assess the areas upon which they are implementing these fees. The physical safety of our kids is at stake here.

Help for exotic pets

TO THE EDITOR:

I forget that when you have a pet, eventually, they die. We have had a hamster named Buffy for almost two years. She was mischievous, energetic, sweet and gave us many hours of enjoyment. Then, she got sick. I started calling vets only to find out that she needed to be seen by an exotic vet.

Asking around, it was suggested that I call an animal hospital in Weymouth. They gave me the number of a vet. I called and left 3 messages. Finally, late in the evening, I got a call back and was told to try Angel Memorial in Bridgewater and then, the vet remembered that colleagues had just started practicing here in Cohasset.

Unfortunately, Buffy died a few hours later. However, the next morning, I received a call back from Crazy Paws, here in town. Later in the day, I met my cousin at the Windsor Tea House and guess whose business is right next door? Crazy Paws. A friend was walking in to pick up his dog and gave Crazy Paws high reviews! If I had known that there was an exotic vet in town three days earlier, I am sure Buffy would be on her way to recovery. Please spread the word to your friends with exotic pets that there is a new vet in town!

Volunteers sought for budget committee

The Board of Selectmen is asking for volunteers to serve on a Long Term Budget Committee. The committee will develop a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations. The model shall include income statement, balance sheet and cash flow modules. The income statement shall include the town's payroll list and the different components of fringe benefits, all suitably classified by department, job level, etc., so the Town Manager can test potential wage, salary and benefit scenarios. It shall also include line items of revenue and expense corresponding to the Town Manager's annual budget breakdown, at the level of detail needed to test different scenarios such as the effect of a rise in fuel prices. Level of detail shall be as recommended by the Town Manager. The goal is to have the model tested and ready for use by Sept. 1, 2007, so it may be applied for the 2009 budget and upcoming union negotiations.

Interested residents should send a letter of interest and résumé to the Selectmen's office, Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., or via e-mail to Town Manager Bill Griffin at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org.

Updates on range of issues this week

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Dispute Resolution – To keep you informed, there is absolutely no change in the status of Informal Dispute Resolution. The MBTA still does not want to have an open public meeting to discuss their areas of dispute with the Town. This is so odd, since they wrote the rules we must abide by.

Town Parking Lot – This week the main part of the Town Parking Lot has received its final grading and initial layer of asphalt. They told us that they would be working on this for two days, but as of this Wednesday they are still working. We have asked them to open up at least part of the lot so that the businesses and their customers have a place to park.

Rocky Lane — The utilities work continues under the Present Rocky Lane at the tracks. The project did agree to cover what would have been an open ditch alongside of the tracks at Rocky Lane when the street is closed. The Town has an agreement with CBB that Rocky Lane will be kept open at all times so that residents and businesses can traverse the construction area. Twice, that agreement has been violated. The most recent time was this past week. We actually went out and shut down their work until the superintendent arrived. We don't think they will block the road again.

Self-Regulating Tide Gate — Somehow, we manage to get ourselves into a lot of different projects around our Town. One of these projects is our Self Regulating Tide Gate (SRT), which is mounted on the sea wall between Veteran's Park and the Cohasset Harbor Resort. If you look at the sea wall from the harbor (It can best be seen from Border Street.), the SRT looks like a "Rube Goldberg" contraption. Its function is very interesting. It is designed to allow an adjustable amount of saltwater to flow back up into Jacobs Meadow, on an incoming tide, in an attempt to restore the salt marsh. When the tide reverses, it allows meadow water to flow back out in the harbor. The adjustment of the SRT is very critical to achieve a balance between marsh restoration and flooding the surrounding homes. Its adjustment is also regulated by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Recently, we had the SRT inspected and found that it had several failed welds. With out repair it would have probably disintegrated. We were able to get the manufacturer to come from the factory California to repair the gate this past week. We were fortunate to have repaired the device at no cost to the Town, even after the SRT had been in service for three years

One of our citizens took "before" photos of the Village. We've been asked to provide "after" photos for comparison.

Sewer treatment plant targeted unfairly

COMMENTARY

JOHN BECK

I must take exception to the impression left in the article on the front page of the Aug. 4 Cohasset Mariner. The allegation by Mr. Drysdale that the high levels of fecal coliform found in the outfalls into Jacob's Meadow are solely attributable to the overflow event at the Wastewater Treatment Plant is quite simply preposterous.

There have been repeated, very high levels of fecal coliform and enterococci bacteria found in the Town Center stormwater drainage system from measurements taken over the past few months at many locations in Cohasset. Almost all of these measurements have been nowhere near the treatment plant or Jacob's Meadow. The article failed to mention Mr. Drysdale's repeated silence when asked to establish any connection between these measurements and the treatment plant, and instead printed his colorful comment about dinosaurs pooping on Main Street. Maybe it makes for a catchy headline, but the problem of contaminated stormwater is too serious to focus on such misleading sound bites.

The facts speak for themselves. We, like many other communities, have seriously contaminated stormwater runoff. A significant step was taken last week in forming a committee to recommend policy and a strategic plan for stormwater management in Cohasset. Hopefully the result of this effort will be an authoritative ability to more effectively deal with this issue.

The facts speak for themselves. We, like many other communities, have seriously contaminated stormwater runoff.

There was a concern expressed at the Sewer Commission meeting about the ability of the treatment plant to handle the flows resulting from the addition of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue expansion. Wouldn't those additional flows worsen the plant overflow problems during extended periods of high rainfall? It was explained that the changes in the treatment plant membranes (which are microscopic filters) will give us the ability to not only treat the planned additional flows, but will have a "peak flow" capability substantially greater than we now have. It is this peak flow capability that is needed to handle the large increases over normal flow during extended periods of high rainfall. When the plant is modified we will be able to handle higher peak flows for longer periods of time than we can now, over and above the increase in normal flows from the expansion.

Does this mean that we will not ever have another plant overflow event? Unfortunately there can be no such guarantee; that is up to Mother Nature, but we will have more margin to deal with those flows than we have today. We are also embarking on an intensive campaign over the next two years to identify and correct many situations that allow stormwater to leak into our collection system and contribute to the high flows during storms. These steps will definitely reduce the amount of excess stormwater entering the plant, and hopefully reduce the likelihood of future overflow events.

We are also developing some carefully engineered solutions to better handle peak flows at the plant. Our current focus before we upgrade the treatment plant is on controlling any future overflows, disinfecting it and neutralizing it before it escapes from the plant boundary. These anticipated changes will allow us to have a wastewater treatment plant that even under overflow conditions will have negligible effects on the environment. This strategy will serve all segments of our community and we welcome any questions. Our next scheduled meeting is Aug. 28th.

Border collies' infamy grossly exaggerated

COMMENTARY

JOHN AND MIA DEAN

In reference to the article in the Aug. 4 issue of the Cohasset Mariner: "Border collies need homes," we would like to make the following comments. The Mariner has informed us the source for this article was part press release and part police report. We must clarify for the record that some of the facts and representations referred to in this article are not consistent with the facts of record as reported in the Incident Report released by the Cohasset Police Department. In regard to the Memorial Day incident, the Incident Report refers to a report of a "pack of dogs running wild" however when police arrived they "encountered four dogs running around the yard". No complaints were filed or injuries reported.

The article states, "it took Police Officers and Murphy five hours to corral the dogs". On the contrary, the timeline on the Incident Report records the initial call at 11:35 a.m. until the dogs were transferred to the Marshfield Animal Shelter at 12:51 p.m. The report states, "the dogs were monitored for a short while until the owner arrived. The dogs were recovered by the owner and family and placed in a secure setting."

Nonetheless, all the dogs even those, who were not necessarily in violation of the restraining order, were seized by ACO Paul Murphy, who did not arrive on the scene until after order was restored. Seven dogs were immediately placed in animal shelters in the area and two were relinquished to NEBCR. Subsequently of the seven, two were placed with a friend in a North Shore home, and another two were relinquished to NEBCR accounting for all but three, which the Deans were to retain including the mother, father and one son.

...the misrepresentation of facts and erroneous allegations cited in the article, vilify all nine dogs individually and the breed collectively.

Following the expiration of the Court ordered time allowed to comply with the Town Orders, we received a letter dated July 11, 2006 from the Attorneys representing the town stating that "because all nine dogs were running loose through town and we have failed to comply with the Order in any aspect and stand in complete violation of the order the town will retain your Border Collies permanently." As a matter of fact, by this time, all but three dogs were permanently outplaced. Of the three, the family wanted to retain one that had been neutered in accordance with the Order, and the family was trying to find temporary foster homes for the other two parents outside of Cohasset.

We feel there is a clear discredit to our good faith in trying to work with ACO Murphy to find placements in the best interest of the displaced dogs. But more to the point, the misrepresentation of facts and erroneous allegations cited in the article, vilify all nine dogs individually and the breed collectively. We also feel these misrepresentations have injured our reputation and defamed our good will to comply with the Town Orders.

While some of the dogs may have been involved in this incident, not all seven dogs currently in foster care are guilty of the alleged offenses. We contend that the infamy of these dogs has been grossly over exaggerated and blown out of proportion by the Town and counters the appeal of the NEBCR attempting to solicit individuals to open their homes for placement. While we wholeheartedly support the work of the New England Border Collie Rescue (NEBCR) we feel that by lending credence to the allegations without having all the facts works counter to the purpose of the article.

Finally, we wish to express our deep gratitude to Kathy Chittenden of the NEBCR for her tireless and diligent effort on behalf of these wonderful dogs and the breed in general.

John and Mia Dean are Cohasset residents.

An iceless martini

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, you could get a pretty good martini for under a dollar.

I know because I put away a lot of them, and the buck always had enough change left over to tip the waitress.

"A pretty good martini," according to my definition, is six parts gin to one part dry vermouth that has been stirred gently, not shaken, in company with one or two ice cubes that are removed before it is served straight up with an olive.

Now, I learn, they are charging you an extra dollar just for taking out the ice.

Bill Dowd, the associate editor of the Albany, N.Y., Times-Union, first noticed it when he got two martinis at the Water's Edge Lighthouse in Glenville and found an extra $2 tacked onto his bill. His waitress explained.

"You mean," he said, "you're charging me an extra dollar for not putting ice in my drink — a drink that doesn't have ice in it anyway?"

Exactly, she said.

"It's not done to be deceptive," says Steven Odom, whose Suite 225 in Lantana, Fla., also adds a dollar for taking a drink off the rocks. "There's more liquor in straight up drinks. A martini glass needs to be full."

I gave up drinking martinis several years ago when I finally figured out it was the grain and the grape, not the potato chips that were mounting so swiftly to my head, so I don't really have a personal interest in the evils that have befallen the martini.

In a way, Prohibition was responsible for the popularity of the martini and other mixed drinks since the speakeasys found they had to mix in exotic beverages to kill the taste of whatever rot-gut they were serving at the time.

Did you know that FDR himself is said to have mixed the first martini after Prohibition was repealed?

Those who tried them during the daily cocktail hours at the White House pronounced them notoriously bad. Too much vermouth, they said.

FDR tried one on Joe Stalin during the Big Three meeting in Teheran in 1943, and the Soviet leader acknowledged that it was "cold on my stomach" as he hurried to warm himself with a chaser of vodka.

The search for the perfect martini was still on during the 1950s when some bars employed a "vermouth atomizer" to blow a fine mist of vermouth into a glass of gin for those aficionados who sought cocktail stronger than 6 to 1.

Remember the "martini stones," marbles that were soaked in vermouth and dropped into the gin glass?

The martini started downhill about that time, too, first when someone replaced the olive with a twist of lemon, then a baby onion, and called it a "Gibson." Then came vodka in place of the gin and after that, the deluge.

The last I saw, the Martini Ranch in Chicago was serving no less than 40 different kinds of "martinis," including the Chocolate Chip Martini, which features blue curacao, peppermint schnapps and . . . I can't go on!

That's one martini I'd pay a dollar not to drink.

MBTA pushes closed meeting over parking

Mitchell replied in a letter dated Aug. 4, "I was disappointed that the Selectmen rejected our offer to meet in executive session. In particular, it was the MBTA's feeling that an executive session negotiation would be much more productive. The MBTA's principal concern is to make the second stage of dispute resolution as effective as possible. For this reason, we would ask that you reconsider having the second stage negotiation in executive session of the Board of Selectmen," which it believes Mass General Laws permit.

The mitigation agreement requires all five members of the board of selectmen be present during all second stage dispute resolution meetings. The MBTA said if the board does not agree to meet in executive session, the parties could waive that requirement. "The Selectmen could designate one or two members to attend the negotiation. This would allow flexibility in scheduling and location without the pressure of constituents and press driving the issues. Again, our goal is to make sure that we have an environment that would be conducive to productive negotiations on these issues," the letter stated.

"Should the board reject these suggestions, the parties could also declare an impasse at the second stage and proceed to the next stage under the mitigation agreement," it states. The next phase would be for the town to take legal action against the MBTA.

Members of the board had differing opinions about how to handle the situation.

"Let's just get it resolved. We've already wasted a month," said Selectman Gary Vanderweil who was not opposed to holding meetings in executive session. He said if the board agreed to designate one or two members to attend the negotiation session behind closed doors, he would volunteer to go.

However, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said the mitigation agreement specifically states all five members attend second stage dispute resolution discussions and if the board starts waiving portions of the agreement, "When do you stop? This is a simple issue."

But Vanderweil said at the rate things are going, the board and the MBTA are going to keep sending letters back and forth and not get anything accomplished.

Selectman Fred Koed said it is his feeling the MBTA doesn't want to "get slammed on cable TV," and said if it helps move the process along, he would not be against having discussion in executive session as well. But Selectman Rob Spofford said while he understands both points, "They agreed to the process. They signed the contract and we did too." He said the meetings should be held the way the mitigation agreement states they will.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said if the board wants to meet in executive session, the mitigation agreement with the MBTA would have to be amended to allow for a different negotiations process.

Dormitzer said he does not favor changing the mitigation agreement as it could lead to more trouble, but suggested having an exploratory meeting outside the mitigation agreement with one or two members of the board and representatives with the MBTA to discuss how to come to an agreement about their disagreement with the dispute resolution process.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Library Trust

At the 2005 Special Town Meeting, residents authorized the filing of special legislation to establish the Cohasset Library Trust. The non-profit branch of the library is intended to raise and manage the funds in the library's endowment. The legislation has been filed by state Rep. Garrett Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund and is now House Bill 4840.

However, since being filed it has been discovered some of the wording of the bill needs to be changed. In the Town Meeting vote, it states any constructive changes to the text may be made with Board of Selectmen approval. The board gave the go-ahead for the amendments at its Monday meeting.

The changes to the language make it clear the town will not appropriate any public funds for the trust and the trust shall have no role in the governance of the library. Library Trustee Sheila Evans said the wording "is exactly what we've wanted all along. It doesn't change anything."

With selectmen approval, the bill will go back to the Senate for a third reading. "This has been a lesson in civics for us," quipped Evans.

Water Commission makes land purchase

Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt came before the Board of Selectmen Monday asking for the necessary signatures to carry out a purchase of land off Route 3A to protect the town's water drinking supply. The 2006 Annual Town Meeting approved the purchase, which includes obtaining approximately 7.92 acres of land.

The total negotiated purchase price for the two parcels (5.93 and 1.99 acres respectively) of land, owned by Elinor and James Campbell, is $170,000. The Water Commission is using $50,000 of its funds as well as $120,000 in CPC (Community Preservation Committee) funds to purchase the land.

Kudos to St. Pierre

Assistant Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre was given kudos this week in a letter included in the selectmen's correspondence. St. Pierre assisted Thomas Bingham, a resident of Honolulu, Hawaii, in obtaining the birth record of one of his ancestors.

"A scholarship my son applied for requires Portuguese ancestry. Only one week before the deadline the selection committee asked us to provide documentation supporting the Portuguese relationship. Ms. St. Pierre was very helpful and more than courteous. Because the scholarship deadline was only days away, she graciously agreed to locate and mail the birth record right away. This willingness to be helpful may be the norm in Cohasset, but I can assure you it is unusual in city and state office workers around the country. What could have been a negative experience for a 'stressed-out' parent (the Web site states it takes two weeks to get a birth record) instead was most positive," Bingham said in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

"We won't know for several weeks if we will be awarded the scholarship, but I take away from this experience a very warm and positive feeling about the town and people of Cohasset," Bingham said.

$2.3 MILLION FOR PRIVATE COUNSEL FOR INDIGENTS (H 5000)

House 144-9, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's $2.3 million veto reduction (from $119.7 million to $117.4 million) in funding for private attorneys who handle criminal and civil cases for indigents. Supporters of the $2.3 million said that the funding is necessary to provide these services that ensure equal access to the justice system for thousands of below-poverty level Massachusetts residents. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $2.3 million. A "No" vote is against the $2.3 million).

$5 MILLION FOR UMASS (H 5000)

House 146-11, Senate 37-1, overrode Gov. Romney's $5 million veto reduction (from $443.8 million to $438.8 million) in funding for the University of Massachusetts. Supporters of the $5 million said that the funds are necessary to ensure that UMass continues to excel as an outstanding public university that has gained a national reputation. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $5 million. A "No" vote is against the $5 million).

$122.9 MILLION FOR STATE WORKERS' HEALTH INSURANCE (H 5000)

House 152-5, Senate 38-0, overrode Governor Romney's $122.9 million veto reduction (from $976 million to $853.1 million) in funding for health insurance for state employees. The governor also removed language providing that state employees hired after June 30, 2003 pay 20 percent of their premiums with the state paying 80 percent and that all other state workers pay 15 percent of their premium with the state paying 85 percent. Supporters of the $122.9 million said that this unfair reduction would result in reduced benefits or a premium hike for thousands of hardworking current state employees at a time when their families' budgets are already being stretched. Opponents of the $122.9 million said that they support a plan that would require state employees to pay 25 percent of their premiums with the state picking up only 75 percent. They noted many private sector employees are required to pay 25 percent of their premiums. (A "Yes" vote is for the $122.9 million. A "No" vote is against the $122.9 million).

$3 MILLION FOR EMERGENCY FOOD ASSISTANCE (H 5000)

House 141-16, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's $3 million veto reduction (from $12 million to $9 million) in funding for the state's emergency food assistance program. Supporters of the $3 million said that hunger is on the rise in Massachusetts and argued that the $3 million is essential to fund food banks across the state. They noted that without food banks, many poor residents face the choice of buying food or paying for rent, heat or medical assistance. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $3 million. A "No" vote is against the $3 million).

$224,588 MINORITY AND WOMEN-OWNED BUSINESSES (H 5000)

House 136-21, Senate 33-5, overrode Gov. Romney's $224,588 veto reduction (from $299,588 to $75,000) in funding for the Affirmative Market Program (AMP). Supporters of the $224,588 said that AMP promotes equality by ensuring that minority and women-owned businesses participate in and receive state contracts in many areas including construction and the delivery of goods and services. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $224,588. A "No" vote is against the $224,588).

$58,927 FOR TOXIC USE REDUCTION (H 5000)

House 132-18, Senate 34-4, overrode Gov. Romney's $58,927 veto reduction (from $1.323 million to $1.265 million) in funding for the University of Massachusetts' Toxic Use Reduction Institute (TURI). The group's website states that TURI "helps Massachusetts companies and communities find innovative, cost effective ways to reduce toxic chemical use at the source, rather than treat wastes once produced." Supporters of the $58,927 said that TURI recently concluded an important study of alternatives for toxic or hazardous substances including lead, formaldehyde and dioxins and how the use of alternatives would affect the finances of the companies and the state's environmental health. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $58,927. A "No" vote is against the $58,927).

INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE FROM $6.75 to $8.00 (S 2632)

House 154-0, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a bill hiking the minimum wage from $6.75 per hour to $8 per hour over two years. Supporters of the hike to $8 said that this important measure is long overdue and would help thousands of workers and families that are living near the poverty level. In his veto message, Romney said that he supports a modest 25-cent increase to $7 per hour. (A "Yes" vote is for the hike to $8).

$150,000 FOR WINTER MOTH WORM STUDY (H 5056)

House 147-7, Senate 35-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $150,000 for the University of Massachusetts' ongoing study of the winter moth worm and methods to minimize or eliminate its damage. Supporters of the $150,000 said that this ongoing study is an important one that has been in the forefront of the battle against more than one trillion of these pests that attack and eventually destroy maple, oak and fruit trees. Some opponents of the $150,000 said that the study is an example of wasteful spending. Others said that UMass should fund the study out of its regular budget. (A "Yes" vote is for the $150,000. A "No" vote is against the $150,000).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL.

Gov. Romney signed into law several bills including allowing consumers to buy most products that cost under $2500 on Saturday, August 12 and Sunday, August 13 without paying the state's five percent sales tax (H 5200); giving seniors who are eligible for long-term care more options to receive the care in their own home as an alternative to a nursing home (S 2273); making major changes aimed at streamlining the permitting process for developers who build on commercial land in priority development sites designated by a city or town (H 4968) and banning the sale of many products containing mercury including thermometers, thermostats, switches, barometers and new motor vehicles with mercury-added switches (S 2464).

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION? Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time that the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say that legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say that the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

Consumer Reports critical of Cohasset Knoll nursing home

But facility says study doesn't show whole picture

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Families often trust nursing care facilities to provide loved ones with the services they need when they do not have the resources to provide adequate care on their own. While facilities do the best they can to meet those needs, Consumer Reports recently reported on nursing homes around the South Shore and found the Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing and Rehab Facility isn't measuring up.

Consumer Reports is a magazine published by Consumers Union, a non-profit organization that informs consumers about changes and news within the marketplace. Every year it compiles its Nursing Home Quality Monitor report (formerly known as the Watch List), which identifies nursing homes which are likely to provide better quality care and those likely to provide poorer quality care. This year, Cohasset Knoll, located at 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, scored in the bottom 10 percent in the state, and ended up on the list of facilities to avoid.

Consumer Reports looked at three dimensions of quality: deficiencies cited in each nursing home's three most recent state inspection surveys, staffing levels and quality indicators. Due to the fact that it is not uncommon for a facility to improve and then lose ground, the evaluations were based on more than one state survey. To land a spot on the "avoid" list, a nursing home had to be in the lowest 10 percent on at least two of the three dimensions.

Cohasset Knoll met 119 out of the 132 key requirements in all five categories in its last three state surveys. The five categories are administration, nursing, resident rights, food services and environment. The facility met 34 of 39 requirements in administration, 32 of 33 in nursing, 24 of 27 in resident rights, 10 of 12 in food services, and 19 out of 21 in environment. Two deficiencies were not met as a result of complaint investigations in environment and administration, which led to a score of 114 after adjustment for scope and severity. Eleven percent of all facilities had a score of 114 or lower. The statewide average facility score was 123.

> "Our team continually strives to meet our customers' needs and high standards of excellence and care quality."
> — George Elkins, Cohasset Knoll

Cohasset Knoll Administrator George Elkins said the staff at the nursing home has not reviewed the research methodology used in the Quality Monitor yet. "What we do know is that simply using survey and enforcement data as a way to measure quality does not show the whole picture and it leaves out one of the most important criteria in determining facility quality — the voice of the consumer who has an actual experience with long-term care," he said in a prepared statement.

"Consumers should remember that Consumer Reports is only one tool. We would suggest consumers look to a variety of quality measurements like customer satisfaction surveys or data from quality initiatives like the Nursing Home Quality Initiative (NHQI) to get a more comprehensive, useful, and accurate picture.

"Many nursing homes nationwide provide the type of high quality, compassionate care that patients, residents and their families want and deserve. Our team continually strives to meet our customers' needs and high standards of excellence and care quality," he said.

Elkins said the recommendations Consumer Reports list about how to choose a nursing home are helpful, and said similar information is provided on the Cohasset Knoll Web site. He said when choosing a long-term care facility, it is also very important to understand the care needs of the individual. "Getting the appropriate care in the appropriate setting is critical," he said, and suggested visiting www.LongTermCareLiving.com for more information.

"Having access to reliable, accurate information when choosing a nursing home is important. Choosing a nursing home is a difficult decision. We recommend that consumers consider many factors when choosing a nursing home, and a personal on-site visit and interview with the staff is one of the best ways to decide if a nursing home will meet your needs. We have the privilege of providing care and services to our community. This is a responsibility we take seriously. Our team works hard to make a positive difference in the lives of our residents and their families," he said.

Land Sharks snag silver

South Shore AAU lacrosse team does NE proud in trip to Jr. Olympics finals

By Julie Ann Nevero
JNEVERO@CNC.COM

During the spring lacrosse season, they're enemies. But for a few months this summer, they were teammates.

The South Shore Land Sharks AAU lacrosse team drew players from across the area last summer with the hopes of forming a team that would be capable of reaching the Junior Olympics.

The 22-man squad — which included Cohasset's Charlie Czerkawski, Chris Mills, Jonny Wade, Andersen Lynner and Mark Flibotte — won four New England tournaments and was selected to compete in the first-ever Junior Olympic lacrosse tourney in Virginia, July 29 to Aug. 2.

There, the Land Sharks picked up a silver medal, going 5-2 and reaching the title game.

"This was the first time they'd ever had lacrosse at the Junior Olympics, so to win a silver medal was a great thing for the kids," said Land Sharks coach Rick Peterson, the director of the Marshfield Youth Lacrosse program. "It was a great four days and a nice experience for the kids."

The kids on the team were selected during a tryout process held last year. More than 150 ninth and tenth grade athletes tried out, but only 22 were chosen.

Black Jacks laxers leave their mark

From July 29 to August 1, the Black Jacks of 21 Lacrosse took part in the "Battle of the Hot Beds" at the University of Delaware.

This tournament attracts 30 of the best lacrosse clubs in the nation to compete for the championship in this grueling four-day event.

The Black Jacks of 21 Lacrosse are a hand picked team by coach Rick Bagby. When asked what were his criteria he said, "We are looking for team players. '21' is all about team. '21' is a tribute to Paul Trendowicz, who was the most selfless player I ever coached. I am looking for players who, like 'Trendo,' put the team before themselves. Our success at this tournament is a direct result of that mindset."

Each team plays 11 games in three days in hopes of qualifying for the championship round. The Black Jacks' chances to make it to the championship round hinged on its final game. Both the Black Jacks and the Long Island Sting had identical 8-2 records when they faced each other in the final game of the regular session.

The Sting jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead. At halftime the field director informed the two teams that the winner would go to the championship round. At this point the Black Jacks took over the game and proceeded to outscore the Sting 6-1 for a final score of 6-3.

The Championship round included two undefeated teams at 11-0 each, Minnesota and the Long Island Express, as well as the North Shore (Long Island) Rage at 10-1 and the Black Jacks at 9-2. Minnesota, winners of 25 games in a row at Hot Beds and the defending champion, slipped by the Black Jacks with a late second half goal, 6-5.

In the consolation game the Black Jacks avenged one of its first round losses to the Long Island Express, 5-4. The Express' back-to-back losses to the Rage and the Black Jacks were their first losses in four years.

The Black Jacks team was

Seadog 11s capture bronze in Florida

The Seadogs 11-and-under baseball team recently captured a bronze medal at the National AAU Championships at Disneyland in Orlando, Fla.

Catcher Connor Goetz of Cohasset was one of three Seadog players named to the All-Tournament Team, which also featured Cohasset's Colin Gideon-Murphy.

The Seadogs posted an impressive 31-7 record this season, including a 7-3 mark at the Nationals, where the local club defeated Team Wilson (4-2), Virginia Lightning (2-0 and 7-6), GBC Wizards (5-3), Tampa Hitmaster Heat (15-8), North Carolina Cleveland Indians (8-5), and Florida Xtreme (2-1) in the bronze medal game.

"The kids really believed they could do it," first-year head coach Bob Biagini said. "They deserve a lot of credit for their accomplishments and it was very hot there, too. The further they got, the more confident they got. I went down there believing we had a great team. If we were challenged, I believed we could handle it, and we did."

Prior to playing in the Nationals, the Seadogs glided through the New England Championships, winning all six games, four by the slaughter rule. After jumping out to a 21-1 overall record, the local nine went through a three-week period of rainouts, Little League tournament commitments, and time away from each other.

They got back together, won the opening game of a series in Ashland, and then lost three in a row. The team's first game at The Nationals resulted in a 9-5 loss, extending its losing steak to four in a row. The resourceful Seadogs, however, came back strong to capture a bronze medal by winning seven of its next nine in the championship series.

"I was happy after our first game at Disney because we played well," Biagini remarked. "We went into a not-playing-together funk for a few weeks, but these kids worked so hard, and I believed that they were better prepared than anybody else around here. I reminded everyone that we were there for com-

Mariner All-Scholastic boys lacrosse team

4 Skippers named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Trevor Brady – Senior (Capt.) Midfield - Cohasset

Trevor Brady

Contributions from this Pilgrim Conference All-Star go well beyond the numbers... Fast, intelligent athlete served as arguably the best two-way player on the Division 3 state champions...Brady was a constant presence in Cohasset's man-down situations...Scored a goal in the state championship game against Dover-Sherborn...Rarely committed turnovers and almost always found the target with his passes...Says the Division 3 state semifinal win over archrival Scituate was the most memorable game of his high school career...A three-sport captain this season, having also served in that role for the soccer and basketball teams...Was a Marinerland All-Scholastic Honorable Mention for soccer last fall...Brady will attend Keene State in New Hampshire, where he will continue playing lacrosse...Cohasset coach Stew Curran: "Trevor was extraordinary on defense, and may have been the fastest middy in the league. He didn't score a lot of goals, but he just about always got the ball to the right guy to start our offense in motion."

Jeff Brown – Junior Defense – Cohasset

Jeff Brown

Few in his position can impact games like Brown did this year... Earned a nod to the Pilgrim Conference All-Star team... The formula was often quite simple; if Brown was defending you, you weren't scoring many goals...A strong, fast athlete that controlled just about every ground ball that came his way...Also an adept stick-handler that often forayed into the offensive zone and scored some goals...This summer, Brown has attended camps at Brown University and in Delaware, and has also taught kids the game with the MaxLax program...Has played football and basketball as well for CHS, and plans to play hoops again in the winter...Counts boating, kneeboarding and fishing among his favorite hobbies...A captain-elect for next spring, Brown has drawn interest from Division 1 and Division 3 programs...Cohasset coach Stew Curran: "At the end of the year, he was playing as well as any defensive player in the state. Those last three or four weeks of the season, he was just a monster out there."

Aidan Buick – Senior (Capt.) Attack – Cohasset

Aidan Buick

Finished his standout high school career as the program's all-time leading scorer with 303 points... Finished with 98 points this season despite missing three games; that total tied him for the team lead with fellow All-Scholastic Mark Flibotte...Pilgrim Conference All-Star saved his best for last, scoring seven goals with two assists in Division 3 semifinal win over Scituate, then earned four of his team's eight goals in state title win over Dover-Sherborn...Could finish in traffic and from a wide variety of angles...The youngest of five brothers, all notable athletes at CHS...A two-time Marinerland All-Scholastic in lacrosse and soccer, Buick will play both sports at prep school Northfield Mount Hermon this upcoming year...Cohasset coach Stew Curran: "Aidan was, in big games, our really key offensive player. He was a great captain. He's unassuming, works hard; he was the first guy to practice and the last guy to leave."

Mark Flibotte – Sophomore Attack – Cohasset

Mark Flibotte

Pilgrim Conference All-Star finished a superlative sophomore season with 98 points, tying him for the team lead with fellow All-Scholastic Aidan Buick...Scored 15 goals in four state tournament games...A major testament to his goal-scoring prowess came in Skippers' 14-6 loss to Division 1 state champion Duxbury, in which Flibotte scored a hat trick, a rare feat against the Green Dragons...Moves extremely well without the ball and has a quick release on his shot...With classmates Mike Grimm and Mike Bunstein, the Cohasset attack is in good hands for the next two years...Cohasset coach Stew Curran: "He might break [Aidan] Buick's school scoring record before it's all said and done. Come his senior year, there is no telling what he can do."

John Nolan – Junior Midfield – Hanover

A standout player on the up and coming Hanover squad, Nolan drew a lot of attention from opposing defenses this spring...Nolan was the leading scorer on the Indians' squad and helped guide the still building program to an 8-10 record...Though they just missed qualifying for the post-season, Hanover had plenty to be proud of, topping Div. 1 programs like BC High, Marshfield, and Braintree, while also knocking off Norwell and Canton...Nolan and company stuck with a very strong Cohasset team in an eventual 12-9 loss and dropped a pair of slim OT decisions to Sandwich and Arlington...Just a junior, Nolan will be one of the top returning players on the Indians' squad next spring.

Chris Ryan – Senior Defense – Hingham

Was about as solid as it gets on defense for the Harbormen...Ryan is a two-time All-American defender and three-time Pilgrim Conference All-star at HHS...With the success the Harbormen have had over the years, they are forced to play one of the most difficult schedules in the area and Ryan did much to keep tough opponents in check...Was a huge part of a defense that topped state champs Cohasset (5-2) during the regular season forced a very talented Wellesley team into OT in an eventual 8-7 loss in the Div. 2 East tourney...Also came up huge in one-goal victories over Norwell (9-8), St. John's Prep (8-7), and Lexington (6-5 in 2OT) as the Harbormen finished the regular season at 10-8...In addition to his defensive prowess, Ryan also contributed offensively, scoring a goal and eight assists...Racked up a goal and an assist as a junior...Ryan will continue his lacrosse career at Bowdoin College next year.

Charlie Hovespian – Senior Midfield – Hingham

Was one of those players who could do it all for the Harbormen...Contributed both offensively and defensively to Hingham's cause from his midfield position...Great speed and size made him one of the most productive players on the Harbormen squad...Scored a pair of goals in a 9-2 victory over Hopkinton in the second round of the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. Tourney...Had arguably a bigger game against Wellesley in the next round, registering a pair of big assists as the Harbormen erased a one-time 7-3 deficit to tie the game 7-7 and force overtime...Hovespian assisted on Jay Dupras' game-tying goal with just under two minutes in regulation...During the regular season, Hovespian had stellar games against Hanover (11-5) and Lincoln-Sudbury (a tough 13-8 loss)...A first-time Pilgrim Conference All-star, Hovespian is perhaps better known for his play on the football field...There, Hovespian was a standout receiver for the Patriot League runners-up...A three-sport athlete at HHS, Hovespian also played basketball...He will continue his football and lacrosse careers at Union College in New York next fall.

Ty McDonald – Senior Attack – Hingham

A standout attacker over the last two seasons, McDonald was one of the most reliable go-to men on the Harbormen squad...Scored a pair of goals en route to a 7-3 first-round victory over Catholic Memorial in the Div. 2 Eastern Mass. tourney...Added two more in a solid 9-2 win over Hopkinton, a team that scored 25 goals in its first round win...McDonald's great speed and skills helped the Harbormen compile a solid 10-8 record in what was a very difficult schedule...Big wins for McDonald and company came against St. John's Prep (8-7), who were unbeaten at the time, Lexington (6-5 in 2OT), Norwell (9-8)...McDonald also had a solid performance in a 5-2 win over Cohasset, which went onto win a Div. 3 state title...A three-year player and two-year Pilgrim Conference All-star, McDonald hopes to continue playing lacrosse in college.

Mark Flibotte was a standout in Cohasset's attack last spring and finished the season with 98 points.

Chris Bellucci – Senior (Capt.) Defense – Marshfield

As the lone returning starter from a season ago, Bellucci was looked toward to be a leader and he answered the call...Bellucci helped guide the Marshfield squad through a difficult Pilgrim League schedule, which pit it against heavyweights like Duxbury, Scituate, and Cohasset...Bellucci was the anchor of a defense that kept the Rams in every game this season...Of the squad's 10 losses, five were by three or fewer goals... Some of Bellucci's strongest games of the season came in overtime wins over Plymouth South (7-6) and Falmouth (8-7)...In perhaps the best defensive showing of the year, Bellucci was brilliant in a slim 4-3 loss to Cohasset, which went onto win a Div. 3 State Championship..."To hold a team like Cohasset to four goals, I think that's a real statement for our defense," coach Nate Balboni commented...The Pilgrim League All-star plans to attend college in the Fall.

Kyle Laffin – Senior (Capt.) Defense – Norwell

Kyle Laffin

Pilgrim Conference All-Star makes his second straight appearance on this team... Strong defender was lauded by coaches throughout the season for his play on the field and his leadership on and off of it...Was consistently assigned to defend the opposing team's best player...Says 9-8 loss to powerhouse Hingham was one of the most memorable games of the season, calling it "huge for the program"; also says early season win over Catholic Memorial was a notable one...Has played indoor lacrosse for the last several years, and has participated in the Bay State Games for three years...Also a key contributor to the 8-3 Clippers football team last fall as a linebacker...Will attend St. Anselm College in New Hampshire, where he will play lacrosse and major in international business...Norwell coach Jay Williams: "Kyle is probably the most solid defenseman we've had in the program the last several years."

Gary Crowley – Junior (Capt.) Midfield – Scituate

Gifted all-around athlete established himself as the Sailors' go-to player this season...Crowley finished the year with a team-best 78 points (54 goals, 24 assists)...Pilgrim Conference All-Star scored a career-high six goals in May 5 win over Barnstable...Scored four goals in state tournament win over Arlington Catholic...Could run the offense from the top of the zone and possesses a deft finishing touch around the net...Not afraid to mix it up and play physical...Also plays football for SHS, starting at both quarterback and wide receiver last fall...Scituate coach Rick Bagby: "When Sam Brigham went down against Hingham, Gary had to carry the load in our midfield, and he did that. He is definitely a Division 1 college middy."

Jake Gray – Sophomore Goaltender – Scituate

After a solid freshman season, Gray emerged as a star in between the pipes for Scituate this spring and was a major reason the Sailors reached the Division 3 semifinals...Allowed just one goal in the team's first two playoff games, then made 10 saves in semifinal loss to Cohasset...Gave up one goal and made 16 saves in back-to-back wins over Austin Prep at the end of the regular season...Pilgrim Conference All-Star made 12 stops in 6-5 overtime win over Hingham...On top of his goaltending skills, Gray has developed into a good passer from the defensive zone...Will serve as the backbone of the Sailors' defense for another two years... Scituate coach Rick Bagby: "He basically was the difference for us this season. Without Jake, we would probably be a .500 team this year."

Colby Hawkins - Senior (Capt.) Midfield – Scituate

The heart and soul of a successful Sailors team, Hawkins was a Pilgrim Conference All-Star this year, and with good reason...Was second on the team in scoring, but may have contributed the most in the face-off circle, where he remarkably won over 70 percent of the face-offs this season...An excellent passer, "Hawk" had a career-best six assists in Scituate's 17-16 win over Barnstable on May 5...Had a great postseason, highlighted by a four-goal, three-assist effort against Arlington Catholic and a two-goal, three-assist performance against Cohasset...A Marinerland All-Scholastic for football in 2004; was the SHS

Nick Stella – Junior Attack – Scituate

Emerged as one of the most dangerous attacking players in the area this season, and was rewarded with a spot on the Pilgrim Conference All-Star team…Can pass as well as finish, as evidenced by his final season totals of 34 goals and 26 assists…One of his most memorable goals was the game-winner in overtime against Hingham, giving his team a 6-5 victory that set the tone for the rest of the Sailors' season…Had four goals and two assists in April 25 win over Norwell…Scored three goals in Division 3 semifinal against Cohasset…Will be counted to help lead the Scituate attack next year…Scituate coach Rick Bagby: "Nick came into the season in great shape and had a real good year for us. He started the year scoring a ton of goals, and was able to adjust to being more of an assist guy."

Eric Walsh -Senior (Capt.) Goaltender - Weymouth

Walsh was a three-year starter for Weymouth... A Bay State League All-Star ...He was voted a captain in his senior year...One of the keys for the Wildcats return to the tournament after a year's absence…Posted his first career shutout against Brookline... His top game was against Hingham, where he had 19 saves in a 3-2 win over the Harbormen....Voted the top senior class athlete... Was voted captain for both the football and wrestling teams.... He finished second in the Div. 1 south sectional at 152 pounds... He finished third in the Div. 1 state tournament and fifth in the All-State Tournament and qualified for the New Englands.... He will attend Lasall College in Newton, where he will play lacrosse.

Ross O'Toole – Junior Attack –Weymouth

As a junior attackman O'Toole made a name for himself as one of the leading scorers for the Wildcats this season...He became a starter on attack during his sophomore year...He relies on his exceptional speed for his effectiveness...His best game was against Winchester as he scored three goals and added two assists. Also had a three-goal game against Framingham, and scored in the state tournament loss to Malden Catholic…An outstanding athlete as he is a captain-elect in both football and wrestling... A starting safety and wide receiver in football... He had seven pass interceptions, caught two touchdown passes and was third on the team in tackles... In Wrestling he is one of the fastest to win over 100 matches in his career at Weymouth...Won the Div. 1 south sectional as a freshman (103) and sophomore (112) and was second as a junior at 135 pounds...

"We evaluated their skills, overall athletic ability, speed, and personality during the selection process," said Peterson. "This group really gelled nicely right off the bat."

This group is comprised of players who had just finished a spring season competing against each other. Players from the state champion Duxbury and Cohasset teams joined kids from Hanover, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Hanson and Braintree.

"We started practicing last November and the kids played indoors all winter," said Peterson. "They couldn't play during the spring high school season because it's not permitted. But once the state championships were wrapped up, we started right back up again.

"It was pretty neat to see the variety of different schools we had represented on the team because they were all competing towns in the spring season."

Over the last two months, the Land Sharks competed against other AAU lax teams every weekend, while also sandwiching in tournaments. The group competed in the Greenfield Tourney, UMass Tourney, and Thayer Tourney, just to name a few.

After winning four New England-level tournaments this season, the AAU selected the Land Sharks to represent them at the Junior Olympics in Virginia. The squad played seven games in four days, powering off to a 4-0 start before recording their first loss. After locking up another win, the Land Sharks reached the finals, where they played a team from Virginia, comprised of mostly seniors.

"They were a real tough team and we played well," said Peterson.

The weekend in Virginia wasn't all work and no play, however, for the Land Sharks. The 22-man team spent the weekend staying on Virginia Beach, enjoying the sun and sand. They were also able to venture off to watch other Junior Olympic events.

"We had a great time and we're already looking forward to next year," said Peterson.

The members of the South Shore Land Sharks are: Jeffrey MacCune (Braintree, Thayer Academy); Charlie Czerkawski, Chris Mills, Jonny Wade, Andersen Lynner, and Mark Flibotte (Cohasset, Cohasset HS); Jake Harvey, Quinn Cully, and Matt Zaverucha (all from Duxbury, Duxbury HS); Steven Kahler (Hanover, BC High); Andy Garcia (Hanson, BC High); Matt Bak, Andrew Brown, Brendan Powers (BC High), Cody Knight, and Zack Triner (all of Marshfield, Marshfield HS); Brian Magner (Thayer), Sean Moriarty (BC High) (both from Norwell); Alex Cuomo, Jack Walker (Phillips Exeter Academy), Alex Ciessau, and Chris Yuknis (Scituate, Scituate HS).

petition; to be a good team, we had to beat good teams. The rest of the way we got good pitching and solid defense.

"This was my first time, so I can't compare it to anything else, but this was a huge, huge team effort. My assistant coach, Paul Eastman, and me got together after every game and went over everything. These 13 kids learned how to win against good competition. It wasn't just one kid that kept doing it; it was a different kid each game that came through for us."

The Seadogs program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country.

Fall Preseason Sports Information Night

Monday, Aug. 28 in the High School Gymnasium at 6:45 pm.

This is a mandatory meeting for all Fall sports student-athletes. We ask that students bring their $250 user fee and at least one parent/guardian to the meeting. There are a number of changes in our athletic policies that will be presented.

Also our principal, Mr. Joel Antolini, will be on hand to address our teams. Parents and students will then have an opportunity to meet with the coaching staff to discuss team rules and expectations for the Fall 2006 season.

Third Annual Freshman Athletic Summit

The athletic directors and principals of the South Shore League are excited about this program designed to promote sportsmanship in sports our schools. This is a mandatory event for all ninth grade athletes intending to play any sport during the 2006-07 school year.

This event will be hosted by Norwell High School on Monday, Sept. 25 at 3:30 p.m. Bus transportation will be provided from CHS at 3 p.m. A barbeque dinner and t-shirt will be provided for all participants. More information about this event will be distributed during the first week of school.

Physical Exams

Also remember that all student-athletes need an up-to-date physical exam performed by a physician within the past 13 months prior to the start of the season in order to participate in a high school sport.

No student-athlete will be allowed to participate in practices or games without a current physical exam on file at the Cohasset High School nurse's office. Dr. Steven Golden, the school physician, will provide free physical exams for student athletes on Aug. 21 at 7:30 a.m. at the Cohasset High School Nurse's office.

made up of 22 players from Hingham High School, Cohasset High School, Scituate High School, Boston College High School, Hanover High School, Tabor Academy and Thayer Academy. Despite never having the whole team together for any one of their five practices, the team gelled phenomenally well.

"Everyone contributed," said Bagby. "I'd hate not to mention everyone on such a special team, but a few efforts have to be noted. Dan Trendowicz was a warrior as a defensive middie, and in my opinion, the best defensive mid in the camp."

Bagby went on to say, "Jeff Brown was the best player on the field in every game we played. He simply changes the way the other team plays." Bagby noted that he had nine players who scored 10 or more points (Dan Trendowicz, Gary Crowley, Brendan Dickinson, Sam Brigham, Zack Gray, Mike Grimm, Nick Stella, Kyle Crowley, and Mike Bunstein).

The long poles and goalies were exceptional as they held the opponents to 3.2 goals a game, including five games in which the opponents scored two points or less. Only two teams managed six goals against this stellar group. They included, on defense, Jeff Brown, Ryan Kucinski, Ryan Woodford, Tim Wood, Alex Cuomo and Kevin Hannigan. The goalies, who were outstanding, were Max Vaickus and Roly St. Clair-Barrie.

According to Bagby, the unsung heroes and the backbone of any team are the middies that tirelessly transition the ball, set up the offense and play tenacious defense. This group included Austin Driscoll, Zach Clayton, Graham George, Jack Dings and Kyle Ewanouski. Bagby also noted the outstanding play of face-off specialists Austin Driscoll and Crowley.

Bagby concluded by saying, "This was a special group of young men who didn't know the meaning of quit. They personify what '21' and Trendo are all about. Simply put, they are winners … and hey, we had a lot of fun."

Program for writers offered at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys and Grub Street, Boston's only independent writing center, will present Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a program for writers. The workshop will take place Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m. The topic will be characterization, and the instructor is Shellie Leger.

Vivid characters are often what readers recall first about their favorite books. Regardless of plot, setting, voice and the like, if characters don't compel, seduce, astonish or even repulse readers, they likely are not going along for the ride. In this seminar, students will receive an overview of creating characters through the use of detail. They will learn about both direct and indirect methods of characterization, and have an opportunity to practice using both. Writing samples of characterization will be provided as well.

Leger teaches writing at the Germaine Lawrence School in Arlington. She is currently completing a collection of short stories, and revising a novel. She has recently heard from Quick Fiction, a journal that publishes short-shorts, that her story "The Green Swing" is being considered for their August issue.

This is a free event, but reservations are necessary. Call Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665 to register.

Jim Coggins of Hingham is president of Down East Dancers, Inc., founded in 1990. Housed in a hall at the Taunton Elks Club, the group specializes in Country dancing — a style that encompasses couples dancing, line dancing, and square dancing.

Country Western dancing comes 'Down East'

Popular group looks to expand

By Austin Breslow
CORRESPONDENT

To many, he might seem like a character out of the Wild West: he line dances, wears leather boots, organizes pot-luck dinners, and calls upon instructors like "Wild Willy" to DJ his events. No, Jim Coggins is not a cowboy. He is, however, a longtime Hingham resident and serves as the president of Taunton's renowned Down East Dancers, Inc.

Founded in 1990, and referred to by Coggins as "one of the best facilities of its kind around", this non-profit organization brings joy via country music to hundreds of people every month. Housed in a hall at the Taunton Elks Club, the group specializes in Country dancing — a style that encompasses couples dancing, line dancing, and square dancing.

"I hadn't heard much about this type of dance when I got started," Coggins recalls. "I was out on injury from work and heard from a friend that Country dancing would be a great source of exercise."

After testing the waters with other local dance groups, Coggins settled with the Down East Dancers as it stood out in his mind as an exemplary organization.

Past President Ernie Lavoie of Hull shares a similar story of his initial involvement: "I joined because my teacher from another Country dancing group was a founding member of Down East Dancers. I liked that it was founded by a group of dancers and instructors who wanted to expand this particular form of entertainment by working together and exchanging dance routines."

Lavoie took on more responsibilities with the group as the years passed; he desired to welcome new members to the dance community as a way of reciprocating the enjoyment he himself had experienced. Lavoie points out Down East Dancers, Inc. has always worked first and foremost as a community service, providing an inexpensive source of activity for people of all ages.

For just $5 at the door, anyone is welcome to participate in the monthly dances, and, after paying basic expenses to rent the hall and DJ — the group donates a portion of its proceeds to charity. In fact, Coggins and his colleagues awarded the Brockton Veterans Hospital with $5,000 in January.

Undoubtedly, what makes Down East Dancers, Inc. so successful is its devoted officers.

Bringing Country Western dancing 'Down East'

Publicity director Nancy Kramer explains, "We are always working hard to update the club and make it more modern." While Down East Dancer's Inc. was originally comprised of older members, it now regularly opens its doors to teenage participants as well. With a younger crowd, she explains, the club is well maintained and advertised by word-of-mouth. Many dancers who frequent the club are attracted by a membership opportunity that entitles them to a copy of "The Navigator" (the club's bimonthly newsletter), free admission to regular monthly dances, and advance notice of Down East sponsored workshops — all benefits that no other local Country dancing groups offer. Coggins says that, at one point, he was dancing up to seven nights a week, and that he took advantage of the membership so as to keep up to date with all of the organization's events.

Hull resident, Mimi Leary, a director of Down East Dancers Inc., has been dancing since the age of three and joined the club in 1999. Leary was enticed by what she read in the newsletters and eventually started teaching line dances at some of the monthly events. She describes the dancers at Down East as social and enthusiastic — the round-table setup, potluck dinners, and "country" attitude makes for a warm and hospitable environment.

"Everyone is extremely welcoming to new members and whenever someone sees a new person, they try to help them."

— Mimi Leary, Down East Dancers, Inc.

"Everyone is extremely welcoming to new members," she says, "and whenever someone sees a new person, they try to help them." Observing that inexperienced dancers often seem confused and self-conscious, Down East Dancers Inc. does its best to provide them with workshops and classes. Once they take a step sheet and practice on their own, Leary promises that, "it's easy! They'll be doing the grape vine and the shuffle in no time."

The group plans to pursue the possibility of opening new branches of Down East Dancers Inc. on the South Shore to reach out to prospective Country dancers who are unable to travel to Taunton. Until Labor Day, some members of club will offer free line dancing classes from 2-4p.m. on Sundays at Nantasket Beach in Hull. Coggins feels that the decision to expand the organization would permit people of all ages to share in the excitement of Country dancing.

Until then, Coggins says, "You won't hear many of us talking about dancing because we'll all be too busy actually doing it!"

To find out more about Down East Dancers Inc., visit their website at www.downeast-dancers.com or email Nancy Kramer at downeastdancers@yahoo.com. The group meets at the Taunton Elks Club at 119 High Street in Taunton, MA and usually holds its main dances on the second Saturday of every month.

Guzasky directs music school in Hingham

Conservatory Teaching in Your Community, an organization originally begun as a satellite school of the Boston Conservatory some 10 years ago, is now an independent music school opening a new location at Hingham Music at Lincoln Plaza, Route 3A, Hingham.

Still managing the school is director Dr. G. Fredrick Guzasky, along with a staff of professionals, all with master-level-plus degrees in music. Guzasky teaches at MIT in Cambridge and Bridgewater State College, and also performed and taught in Russia. He has a large private studio of students of piano, organ, harpsichord and cello.

All ages and levels of instruction are given – from the 4-year-old beginner to the 84-year-old retiree, with instruction for professional performing musicians in between. Music of all periods and styles is taught – from Bach to blues. In addition to individual instruction in piano, organ, voice, cello and flute, various seasonal classes are offered in music history, music theory, church organ for pianists, The Glory of the Arts in Russia, African drumming and Opera 101, among others.

The conservatory's staff at its various locations, includes: Guzasky, Sargis Karapetyan, Sarah Brady, Evelyn Czaja, Kathy Planeta and Maureen Connolly.

The new location is having open registration in the areas of piano, organ, voice, cello, violin, flute and one or more of the aforementioned classes. The teachers are all professionals with training in pedagogy as well as their own musical instruments. Conservatory Teaching in Your Community makes musical training available to everyone.

Arc of the South Shore recently completed a $700,000 renovation and expansion project. The agency has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951.

Arc completes expansion project

Acting executive director of the Arc of the South Shore, Anne Holton, announced the agency recently completed its $700,000 expansion and renovation project of its headquarters located at 371 River St., No. Weymouth. The agency, located in picturesque Weymouth Harbor since the 1970s, now boasts a 1200-square-foot addition that will allow for growth and expansion of the non-profit organization and its services. Arc of the South Shore serves over 1500 individuals and families each year throughout the South Shore, greater Boston and Cape Cod.

Former executive director David Calhoun oversaw the renovation that not only equips the facility to become handicap accessible, but also represents a major step forward for the organization. "The new building provides ample office space for agency administration and will offer additional space to enhance programming," Calhoun said. "We hope to expand our Day Rehabilitation program from 40 to 60 individuals." Some other features include a beautifully designed entrance way and a courtyard to greet visitors and clients.

"The renovation has already enhanced our organization," Calhoun said. "It's boosted the morale of our members and staff, re-energizing our mission to provide the highest quality services and advocacy for children and adults with developmental disabilities."

The non-profit organization relies on support from state and local community. The cost of construction was raised through private funding, various donors, grants and foundations. Arc of the South Shore raised over $1.5 million for the project. Fundraising programs, such as its annual golf tournament, dinner dance and annual campaign, allow the Arc of the South Shore to provide supplemental funding to enhance its programming.

"We greatly appreciate all of the hard work and gracious support of our board members," Calhoun concluded. "We are especially appreciative of the consummate dedication of Richard Frye of Braintree and James Lawson of Norwell, as they were the influential architects of the capital campaign."

The Arc of the South Shore has provided advocacy, support, training and services to South Shore children and adults with developmental disabilities since 1951. The organization provides vocational support and employment opportunities at its Harbor Industries site; early intervention services for eligible children from birth to three-years-old; day habilitation to improve independence levels and functional abilities; residential supports to provide housing options; recreation and family support; and personal care attendant services. Programs are funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Department of Mental Retardation, Medicare, Mass. Health, Social Security, HUD and other agencies. Most services are entitlement programs for individuals who qualify.

The Arc of the South Shore will host an Open House on Sept. 21, to welcome friends, family and supporters to the new building. For more information call 781-335-3023 or visit www.arc-southshore.org.

Beach Boys still having fun, fun, fun

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

What's a lawsuit between longtime friends, or cousins for that matter?

Nothing personal when it comes to The Beach Boys, at least according to Mike Love, who filed a November 2005 lawsuit against cousin Brian Wilson, a fellow founding member of the seminal 1960s California rock band. Love's lawsuit contends that Brian Wilson and the Mail on Sunday newspaper misused the Beach Boys' name and Love's image on a promotional CD that was given with the paper to promote the 2004 release of Wilson's album Smile, resulting in lost revenue for the band. For Love - who will be front and center on lead vocals when The Beach Boys play the Music Circus in Cohasset on Friday - it is just the latest in a long string of lawsuits involving him and the legendary Wilson. In the 1990s, Love was granted $13 million of a $25 million settlement won by Wilson concerning copyrights on the group's song catalogue.

The Beach Boys will play the South Shore Music Circus August 11.

"Once again the people around Brian, my cousin and collaborator on many hits ("Good Vibrations," "Help Me, Rhonda," "Fun, Fun, Fun," and "Surfin' USA," among others), whom I love and care about, have used him for their own financial gain without regard to his rights, or my rights, or even the rights of the estates of his deceased brothers, Carl and Dennis, and their children. Unfortunately, history repeats itself. Because of Brian's well-documented mental issues he has always been vulnerable to manipulation. I simply want to stop the infringers and stop the deception."

What Love, 65, does not want to stop, however, is the music which keeps him and longtime Beach Boy Bruce Johnston, along with a seasoned group of musicians, on the road for some 175 concerts each year. Love stepped off the road briefly, however, in June when Capitol Records celebrated the 40th anniversary of the release of the landmark Pet Sounds album and the success of 2003's Sounds of Summer compilation. The event, held atop the historic Capitol Records building in Los Angeles, brought together the surviving founding members of the Beach Boys - Love, Wilson and Al Jardine - as well as guitarist David Marks, who played on the group's first five albums.

"When I look out and see people enjoying our music along with their children it just thrills me."
Mike Love

"Al Jardine and I still have our issues, but they have nothing to do with Brian. My one-to-one relationship with Brian has never been bad," Love explained by telephone from his home outside Las Vegas last week. "I have complete respect for Brian's musical abilities. The Capitol Records reunion was recognition of all of our success. That's why it was so great to have David there, too."

While Love is credited with the sequencing of The Sounds of Summer, and may have the same role on the upcoming release The Warmth of the Sun, Love says he prefers a concert stage to a recording studio.

"I'm very lucky that I still love performing live. The studio is a necessary tool, of course, but concerts are where it has always been at for me. We do about a two-hour show that is designed to satisfy a lot of tastes. We try to appeal to everyone from our hardcore fans to first-timers. We play now to many multi-generational families. When I look out and see people enjoying our music along with their children it just thrills me."

Love even has fans in his own family.

"My 10-year-old daughter, Ambha, came home not too long ago and told me that her fourth grade class had chosen 'Wouldn't It Be Nice' as their favorite song because they just loved the words," says the proud father and lyricist. "That was a song we first released 40 years ago and it's still popular today. My daughter loves Usher and many other hip hop artists, but she likes us, too."

The Beach Boys will perform at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Friday, Aug. 11. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

"World Trade Center" becomes an inspirational story of brave men facing extraordinary circumstances.

'World' finds triumph in tragedy

"World Trade Center" (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Is the world ready for an Oliver Stone movie in which Jesus makes an appearance? Terrifyingly real and ultimately uplifting, Stone's "World Trade Center" takes the tragedy of the 9/11 attacks and transforms it into a solemn tribute.

The film will be criticized by those who were hoping for the "JFK" of 9/11 movies for being not provocative enough and by others just for having been made by Stone.

But the truth is "World Trade Center" is a gut-wrenching ode to American grit and bravery, an inspirational choral about ordinary people whose duty is to ride into the jaws of death.

Based on the true stories of John (Nicolas Cage) and Donna McLoughlin (Maria Bello) and Will (Michael Pena) and Allison Jimeno (Maggie Gyllenhaal) and others, the film begins like "United 93" with the start of an ordinary workday.

It's dawn over the Hudson River, and Port Authority Police Sgt. McLoughlin is handing out tours of duty to officers Will Jimeno, Dom Pazzulo (Jay Hernandez of "Hostel") and others.

News of the attacks prompts McLoughlin's officers to head to Ground Zero, where, standing within that nightmarish whirlwind of smoke and paper, he asks for volunteers to go into a tower. In the concourse between the buildings, the men are caught in the collapse. John, Will and Dom survive, but two of them are trapped beneath crushing debris and the third cannot free the others alone. Selfless rescuer Scott Strauss (an impressive Stephen Dorff) describes the shifting mountain of debris as "a pile of pick-up sticks."

Stone's "World Trade Center" takes the tragedy of the 9/11 attacks and transforms it into a solemn tribute.

Weaving the narrative with great skill, Stone and screenwriter Andrea Berloff counterpoint the men's hellish ordeal with the plights of their loved ones at home.

Allison, who is five months pregnant, is almost convinced Will is dead. Donna refuses to consider the possibility John is gone. One of their young sons demands they drive to the plume of smoke to pick up dad.

The injured, immobilized and hallucinating men are in a living hell. Flaming, molten debris hurtles past them. An officer's handgun goes off, spraying bullets. Flames lick closer. Crushed stone pours into their eyes and mouths.

As it gets dark, an outraged Marine (Michael Shannon) risks his life to comb the wreckage, and a recovering alcoholic paramedic (Stone regular Frank Whaley) seeking redemption leaps into the fray.

Featuring an anguished score by Craig Armstrong, "World Trade Center" recalls Stone's "Platoon" (1986), another semi-mystical parable about the bonds made under duress, and that's really the point. "World Trade Center" is a war movie, a film about uniformed men and women risking their lives for the sake of others. By making it, Stone, who was once described as a troublemaker and "the most dangerous man in America," has found a way to celebrate one of the darkest days in our history.

Rated PG-13. "World Trade Center" contains frightening scenes and bloody images.

Lucas is surrounded by ants in "The Ant Bully".

THE ANT BULLY (B+)

Undersized preteen Lucas (Zach Tyler) is known by the ants of the colony in his suburban front lawn as "The Destroyer" because of his tendency to lash out at them after he has been bullied by kids at school. But due to a spell cast by ant wizard Zoc (Nicolas Cage), Lucas is reduced to ant size and taught to be less human and more ant. Yes, it's another one of those character-building animated films. "The Ant Bully" aspires to be the "Lion King" version of "Microcosmos," the 1996 documentary with the bug's-eye point of view. (Rated PG)

THE DEATH OF MR. LAZARESCU (A-)

In the Kafkaesque "The Death of Mr. Lazarescu," Dante Remus Lazarescu (Ion Fiscuteanu) wakes up with a headache and a sore belly and can't keep anything down. He's taken by ambulance to a nearby hospital, where the staff has been swamped by the victims of a horrendous bus accident. What follows is a bleak, admittedly overlong, modern-day, picaresque tale of an ordinary man's last hours being shuttled from hospital to hospital until he succumbs. Clearly, this is not a feel-good film. But co-writer-director Cristi Puiu eerily captures the reality of the experience, and he has an ear for dialogue and black humor. In Romanian with subtitles. (Rated R)

JOHN TUCKER MUST DIE (D)

MIAMI VICE (A-)

In this ultraviolent fever dream, Michael Mann's famous, MTV-bred TV cops Sonny Crockett (Colin Farrell) and Ricardo Tubbs (Jamie Foxx) travel from Miami to Havana, Haiti and South America as they plan to take down Jose Yero (John Ortiz), a drug dealer with a reputation for "killing everything," and the white supremacist thugs he uses to do his dirty work. This film version of the trend-setting 1980s series remains a rock-music-driven celebration of boys' toys. But it's intoxicatingly photographed and among the most ravishing crime thrillers I have seen. (Rated R)

SCOOP (A-)

If you can imagine Woody Allen's "Match Point" transformed into a screwball comedy with Hitchcockian flair, you can imagine the profound pleasures of "Scoop." Scarlett Johansson is Sondra Pransky, an American journalism student in London with a talent for getting into trouble. She's after a scoop for the ages: proving that Peter Lyman (Hugh Jackman), the financier son of Lord Lyman, is the notorious Tarot Card serial killer. "Scoop" is Allen's 41st film and proof that his artistry has not faded. While much of the humor will be familiar to his fans, Allen's command of language and timing remain remarkable and impeccable. (Rated PG-13)

Cohasset residents may have been shocked to see former Mötley Crüe drummer Tommy Lee's tour bus parked outside Stop and Shop a few weeks ago. In fact, from time to time residents may see unusual promotional vehicles such as the Victoria's Secret Pink humvee driving about town, thanks to Beach Street resident Paul Tedeschi.

Tedeschi is the Chief Executive Officer of Mr. Youth, a non-traditional promotional marketing company on Lincoln Street in Hingham. His business targets the younger audience, with a "sweet spot" for the 18-24 age bracket. Together with business partner Matt

School dept. says accounting systems are not up to par

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Both the School Committee and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh say the accounting system currently being used by the school department isn't up to snuff. Both said it would benefit the school district to work with the town to potentially purchase a new software system which would have both budgets linked via computer and make reporting information easier.

During the Aug. 9 meeting of the school budget and finance subcommittee, members of the School Committee said finding out about a $430,000 surplus from fiscal 2006 after the close of the fiscal year and after the money was already used to prepay items for fiscal 2007 warrants taking another look at the district's financial reporting system.

"This is not a reflection of Dave (DeGennaro, business manager) at all. This may be a reflection of the tool kit he has available to him," said School Committee member Steve Fusco.

Walsh said when she came to Cohasset, she was very concerned about the reporting system in place at the schools. "It wasn't giving me the information I needed on a regular basis," she said. However, she said things have slowly been getting better through the work of the three business managers she has had on board during her tenure. At the end of August, the system should have some additional updating.

"I doubt it will give you what you're looking for," she said, as Fusco has specific qualifications he would like to see on a report and Walsh said the current system at the schools cannot produce a report like the one he wants due to software restrictions. Fusco has repeatedly said he would like to have a Warrant, or school financial report, display the total amount budgeted for every line item as well as how much has been spent to date and how much is left to spend. Fusco has not signed a Warrant since May.

Walsh said if the school department gets a new accounting system, the town will need a new system as well, which could be costly. However, School Committee member Rick Flynn said perhaps a better system would save the town money in the long run.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz agreed with Flynn and said not only could an updated system potentially save money, it could help the School Committee receive more information.

"The system, over the last two years, has worked pretty well for you because we've had a surplus," he said. "However, we're not getting the same level of information because we were

Selectmen have had enough of trying to negotiate with Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority representatives and are going straight to the top. Dispute resolution discussions are going nowhere, and Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said Tuesday the board is pushing to meet with MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas.

Up until now, "We've been relegated to the second tier," during dispute resolution negotiations, said Dormitzer, which has gotten the town nowhere. Dormitzer added he and the board are working with state Rep. Garrett Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund to see if they can help set up an introduction between Grabauskas and the town.

"This may be the only way we'll get this solved," said Dormitzer.

The MBTA is pushing back against the selectmen, and says it will only have dispute resolution discussions in open session. Currently, the town and the organization, which is building the new Greenbush commuter rail line, are butting heads about the number of parking spaces to be constructed in the municipal parking lot behind the shops on South Main Street, and have entered into a phase-two dispute resolution process.

Both parties, as well as members of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction were scheduled to meet July 26, but on the day of the meeting,

Line item transfers come into question

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee voted at the Aug. 9 meeting of the school budget and finance subcommittee to draft a policy to establish "cost centers" to give the board the right to approve transactions between line items. However, not all members agreed the board doesn't already have that power.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said if the School Committee would like to give the final approval for the superintendent to transfer funds from one line item to another, the board must draft and adopt a policy. She said if the board establishes cost centers, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh would have to ask the board's permission before making transfers from one cost center to another, whereas currently she does not.

MacCarthy said the School Committee can either choose to give the superintendent "All the pot, or have a policy that divides the pot and has cost centers."

However, School Committee members Steve Fusco and Alfred Slanetz made their voices heard and said they think the exact opposite is true. Both said they believe the School Committee automatically has the jurisdiction to approve all transfers and noted it can choose to give up some of its power, up to a certain dollar amount, as designated by the committee.

"If you look in the MASC (Massachusetts Association of School Committees) guidelines, budget development and monitoring are our legal responsibility," said Fusco. "Legally, there can be no transfers without the School Committee being notified."

According to Massachusetts General Laws, it looks as if Fusco and Slanetz are right. M.G.L Ch. 71 section 34 states the power to transfer amounts between line items in the school

Wednesday, Aug. 30 will be the last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the Sept. 19 state primary. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Wednesday, Aug. 30 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections. For more information, please call the Town Clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

Spofford wants school discussion

At the Aug. 7 Board of Selectman's meeting, Selectman Rob Spofford said he would like to discuss why the School Committee cancelled on the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee concerning a joint meeting set for July 24. "How are we going to resolve this impasse and get the information we need?" without meeting, he asked. Spofford said he did not understand why the School Committee did not want to attend the meeting.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he believes the School Committee had a different view of what should be included on the agenda for the meeting.

Spofford said he believes the board should put the item on a future agenda for discussion. "We can't leave it out there. They didn't come and we need to respond back to that message."

Never leave children unattended

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Sometimes parents might think it's OK to leave a baby or toddler asleep in their car seat for a minute while they run in to do an errand. However, Police Chief James Hussey warns, it only takes a minute for the unthinkable to happen.

A concerned citizen called the police department Wednesday, Aug. 9 about a baby locked inside a car at the Cohasset Post Office on Ripley Road. The car was running and a 2-year-old little boy was asleep inside. Hussey said two officers arrived at the post office and saw the boy in the car and eventually found the caretaker, who is not a Cohasset resident. The officers determined the baby was left alone for a period of time they were very uncomfortable with and wrote a report to notify the Department of Social Services of the incident.

"Sometimes people think, 'My baby's asleep, I don't want to wake them up,' or that they're only going to be gone for a minute. But you never know what's going to happen. Suddenly a minute long trip turns into 10, 12, or 15 minutes and you don't know whether your air conditioning has shut off or if someone has stolen your car. There are all kinds of potential situations," said Hussey. "It's not a good idea ever to leave a baby who can't defend themselves unattended."

Missing person found

The Cohasset Police Department began investigating a missing persons case Saturday, Aug. 12. A Cohasset mother called the department to report her daughter had been missing since Thursday and was believed to be with a man wanted by the Cohasset Police Department. "As things played out, we discovered the man was in Burlington, VT," said Chief James Hussey.

Officer Ed Bagley did follow-up work with the police in Burlington and together, the two departments were able to track down the man and the Cohasset girl. Burlington police questioned the man, Michael Doherty of Scituate, about the reason he was in Vermont and what he was doing there with the girl. Police eventually arrested Doherty for providing false information to police and harboring a minor. Vermont authorities may take Doherty back to Massachusetts to face charges, as there were warrants for his arrest prior to the incident in Vermont. The juvenile was held in Vermont and her parents went to retrieve her and bring her home.

Dog gone wild

A Rottweiler was running loose on North Main Street Sunday, Aug. 13. The police department received a few calls that the dog was chasing joggers down the street and being aggressive. An officer was sent to check on the situation and found the dog sitting on the owner's front lawn. The officer knocked on the door and spoke to the owner who had been sleeping. The dog is licensed and is up-to-date with shots, but had gotten his collar off and escaped from the house.

Chief Jim Hussey said the owner is working with Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy to ensure the dog does not get loose again or intimidate any more residents in the future.

Hummer hits guardrail

A Cohasset resident driving north on Route 3A Wednesday, Aug. 9 drove his 2003 Hummer off the road and into a guardrail. While driving, he observed a group of people at the Mobil Mart at the bottom of Sohier Street and thought they were his friends. He took his eyes off the road for a minute and crashed into the guardrail. "Fortunately for him, he was not traveling very fast," said Chief James Hussey, adding both the guardrail and the Hummer were minimally damaged. The driver was cited with failure to stay in his lane.

Lock your doors

Tuesday, Aug. 8 a Margin Street resident came into the station to report someone had entered the unlocked vehicle parked in her driveway and stole a part of the car's radio system. The car has satellite radio and the stolen part had a value of $12.

A car left unlocked in the parking lot of the Pizza Zone on Route 3A was broken into Wednesday, Aug. 9. The incident happened around noon, and someone entered the car and stole $1,000 in cash. "This is a perfect reason why you should never leave your car unlocked," said Chief James Hussey. "This one will be a tough one to follow up on, but we're seeing if we can find anyone who saw anything. So far, we've had no luck yet."

Route 3A crashes

Route 3A continues to have a number of motor vehicle crashes every week. There was a crash on King Street Monday, Aug. 7. A 2005 Toyota Corolla was heading northbound when it hit a 2000 Dodge Durango, which had stopped at the lights at Stop and Shop. The driver of the Corolla said she hit the brakes and her car slid into the Durango. The driver of the Durango was transported to South Shore Hospital with non-life threatening injuries. Chief James Hussey said the operator of the Toyota was cited for driving too close to the vehicle in front of her.

A second motor vehicle crash happened by the Shaw's Supermarket on Wednesday, Aug. 9. A 1998 Honda Civic was heading south on Route 3A when a 2002 Volkswagen Passat came out of the driveway at Shaw's and attempted to take a left to head north on 3A. The Passat cut in front of the Civic and the two collided. There were no injuries but both cars needed to be towed. The driver of the Passat was cited for failure to use caution while entering a roadway.

Speeder gets summonsed

A routine stop for speeding Tuesday, Aug. 8 on Route 3A led a juvenile to receive a court summons. An officer saw the car going fast on Route 3A and clocked the speed with a radar gun. The officer found the juvenile was traveling 65 mph in a 50 mph zone. The car was pulled over and it was found the driver did not have a current license. The police department therefore sought a criminal complaint against the operator of the vehicle for both speeding and driving unlicensed.

Credit card fraud

A Cohasset resident may have been the victim of credit card fraud. The police received a call Thursday, Aug. 10 from a resident who found someone had used their credit card at a location in Cohasset where they had not made any purchases. Hussey said Det. Garrett Hunt is investigating the case and it will take some time to get to the bottom of it. He said it will have to be determined whether the credit card number was called in to the business, or whether it was actually swiped. "We need to find out what exactly was the case," said Hussey.

Jumping jitters

Bridge jumpers are still a problem at the Border Street Bridge. During the week of Monday, Aug. 7 through Sunday, Aug. 13, the police department dispersed groups of bridge jumpers 12 times. "I have instructed the officers to take a vigilant approach to bridge jumping," said Hussey, adding the main concern of the department is that no one gets hurt. "I know this has been going on a long time in Cohasset and other South Shore towns with similar situations. Children and adults tend to want to jump when the weather gets warm," but it is still not a safe situation, he said.

Hussey said if youths in the preteen age bracket are caught, parents will be notified of their activities so they may take appropriate action. If the police find repeat offenders, parents will be called as well, regardless of age. "We need to let youth and adults in the community know there is a potential for danger there. There could be kayakers below and there are rocks. Safety is our main concern," he said.

Car targeted

Thursday, Aug. 10 a caller reported vandalism to her son's car, which took place in their Pond Street driveway. Rocks were thrown at the front and rear passenger windows, which caused them to shatter. "With an incident like this one, we're trying to look for a specific motivation," said Hussey. "Sometimes you have a group of kids who, for whatever reason, choose to go on a damage spree," he said, but added this was an isolated case and is being treated differently.

Renter gets slapped

A man renting a house on Beechwood Street heard glass breaking in a wooden building on the property, similar to a barn, Friday, Aug. 11. He went out and started yelling to the youths who had gathered in the building to leave and they began to scatter and run in different directions. Hussey said when the man entered the building, he encountered one of the youths who had been there with his friends. "He attempted to stop the person from leaving, but they struck him and continued on their way," said Hussey.

Police officers followed up with the incident and were able to identify the youth who were there and the department has filed a criminal complaint of Assault and Battery against one of the youth. All individuals involved were minors in the 15 to 16-year-old range.

Water plant is toast of town

Aquarion facility celebrates milestone

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Rain is looked upon favorably when it comes to replenishing the water supply, but Aquarion Water Company Vice President of Operations Larry Bingaman was pleased that there was lots of sunshine.

July 31 marked the 10th anniversary ceremony and rededication of the Hingham water treatment facility on Main Street that also serves North Cohasset.

"I arranged for this weather especially for this event," Bingaman quipped. "It's a wonderful summer day for such a celebration. Ten years after the first dedication we are here to rededicate this facility to its mission of providing quality water to all of our customers."

About 13 billion gallons of water have been treated and delivered to more than 12,000 homes and businesses in Hingham, Hull, and parts of Cohasset and Norwell since the plant was first dedicated on July 31, 1996.

Hingham resident James Connelly, lead Commissioner for water issues at the Dept. of Telecommunications and Energy (Aquarion's economic regulator), was at the ceremony and recalled attending the earlier dedication. "I'm still drinking the water!" he said with a laugh.

The rededication was a gala event, complete with a special toast using wine glasses engraved with the water company name and anniversary date filled with bottled water straight from Aquarion's community water supply.

"We're turning water into wine," quipped Bingaman. He offered the toast by quoting Henry David Thoreau: "Water is the only drink for a wise man," which amused the guests.

The bottle labels read: "Enjoy the cold, crisp, clean taste of Aquarion water right from the tap. Refill this bottle often as a handy way to get your eight glasses of water a day! Use water wisely."

The labels further stated the water "meets all state and federal drinking water quality standards." The George W. Johnstone Water Treatment [and filtration] Facility, named after the then-president of Massachusetts American Water Company, Aquarion's predecessor, was built to comply with the federal Safe Drinking Water Act. Filtration not only protects against water-borne diseases but also removes undesirable elements such as iron and manganese.

"We have not only reached out to the towns we serve, but we have strived to become part of the fabric of their communities," Bingaman said. "Rotary Club, Chambers of Commerce, July Fourth parades, Earth Day scholarships, water supply committees, and customer advisory councils are just a few of the efforts we are part of in our service towns. And we are always on the lookout for other ways to serve and partner with our communities."

Bingaman introduced Roger Sullivan, chairman of the Hingham Water Supply Committee, which Bingaman noted is "working to preserve our valuable water resources and to ensure there is enough water at a reasonable cost."

"This is not just a rededication but also a celebration . . . of what was and remains a state-of-the-art water treatment facility," Sullivan said. "Before we had the plant, I recall the swampy smell of the water and stains in the sink. That is no longer a problem. The water quality and taste are unsurpassed, and the capacity is more than adequate to meet the current demand."

At the same time, Sullivan asked, "Where do we go from here? The population of Hingham and Hull is growing, requiring more police officers and firefighters and more water," he said. "While there's been more efficiency in the way we use water, how our future water needs are handled will determine whether we have another celebration 10 years from now."

During the ceremony, the facility was renamed the Hingham/Hull District Water Treatment Facility to reflect the towns most widely served by the plant. A plaque engraved with the new name was unveiled.

Prior to bringing the new plant on-line, there were many complaints about the quality of water and then about its subsequent cost, Bingaman said. "During my two years on the job, I've heard minimal complaints. This treatment facility is clearly doing its job."

> "Before we had the plant, I recall the swampy smell of the water and stains in the sink. That is no longer a problem."
> — Roger Sullivan, Water Supply Committee

Bingaman acknowledged the controversy over water rates. "Due to project delays and other factors, this facility cost almost $40 million to build, which resulted in a more than doubling of water rates," he said. "However, through the diligent efforts of Sen. Robert Hedlund and others at the time, funding from the Water Pollution Abatement Trust is allowing each of our customers to save about $1,000 on their water bills over 10 years."

Aquarion is looking into filing for another abatement to provide additional relief once the current abatement expires in 2008.

Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley were scheduled to speak at the ceremony but were called into legislative session at the last minute. Both the Senate and House of Representatives issued proclamations in recognition of the 10th anniversary of the treatment plant.

"We are appreciative of [Hedlund's and Bradley's] keen interest in water-related matters," Bingaman said.

The event, attended by Hingham Selectmen John Riley and Melissa Tully, Water Supply Committee representatives Roger Sullivan, William Schrader, and Carolyn Nielsen, and a number of other officials, also included a buffet lunch and a tour of the water treatment plant.

Hull Selectwoman Joan Meschino called the ceremony "very fitting" and thanked Aquarion and Bingaman for their "commitment to water quality, customer service, and the community of Hull and their willingness to work with our town. You have a good feel for what's important to individual residents and you listen to the town's perspective of what's good for our community," she said.

Open communication is important, Meschino noted, as Hull continues to look into desalinization possibilities. "Aquarion has shown it could be a willing participant," she said.

Bingaman noted that Aquarion has invested more than $3.2 million to upgrade and improve the quality of water delivered by the facility. In January, rates were reduced by about four percent by redeeming some debt.

Bingaman brought the ceremony to a close with a Rachel Carson quote: "In an age when man has forgotten his origins and is blind even to his most essential needs for survival, water along with other resources has become the victim of his indifference."

Bingaman went on to "publicly declare that Aquarion, through a relentless commitment to excellence, will never be indifferent in the provision of high-quality water or service."

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, with our Papa Jack hitting clinics for disabled children, in partnership with the Red Sox. Hope, in the form of nearly $8 million raised for ALS research. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

Dancing couples have a ball!

Love to Fox Trot, Cha Cha or Tango

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Just because you have two left feet doesn't mean you can't learn ballroom dancing — the Waltz, Foxtrot, Rhumba, Tango, Viennese Waltz, Polka, or Cha Cha.

"In a case like that, we try to match the dancer up with one who has two right feet," quipped Roger Vaka, who has been teaching social ballroom dancing with his wife, Claire, since the 1970s. "Anyone can learn to dance."

They believe that learning to dance should be fun. "We try to make our students laugh so they feel comfortable," Claire said. "Roger has a gdancreat sense of humor. He's the comedian." He looked dapper dressed in a suit and a tie imprinted with footprints — a gift from one of his students.

About 90 men and women are enrolled in classes the Vakas offer throughout the South Shore, including about 40 students at Hingham Community Center, where the Vakas have taught for five years. While their students are mostly adults, two 17-year-old couples are taking the Hingham classes.

Roger and Claire gracefully demonstrate the Tango, Foxtrot, and other dances. The other couples follow in varying degrees of accomplishment, but they are all obviously having a good time and are making progress.

The Vakas taught classes at South Shore Community Center in Cohasset for a number of years and currently teach at the Dance Shop in Holbrook. They live in Marshfield and teach private and class lessons in Kingston, Marshfield, Plymouth, Scituate, and surrounding communities.

"This provides an opportunity for people to do something together as a couple — husband and wife or girlfriend and boyfriend," Roger said. "Partner dancing is new to some people, although the older generation has always enjoyed it."

Claire added that most people love, and want to dance to, music that has good rhythms. "They also like meeting others who enjoy dancing."

The Vakas are patient with their sometimes-apprehensive new students. "We take our time teaching them so that they have patience with themselves," Claire said.

One of the advantages of teaching as a couple is that Roger and Claire can swap off with other couples as dance partners, which helps their students get a feel for the right way to do it.

"The one doing the leading has to accept responsibility for all the mistakes," Roger said facetiously.

Susan and Andrew Willard of Cohasset are in their third dance session at the Hingham Community Center. "This gives us something to share that we both like to do, especially on these rainy Fridays we've been having. It's a lot of fun," Susan said. "Roger and Claire are very patient and good teachers. You watch them do the steps and hope that someday you can do the same thing."

Knowing how to ballroom dance comes in handy for weddings, anniversary celebrations, reunions, proms, dinner dances, cruises, and other social gatherings. "At these types of functions, people sometimes want to get up and dance but don't know how," Claire said. "It helps to take lessons."

Gina Rossano and Steve Patterson of Braintree recommended the Vakas' class to another couple, Nancy Patterson and Jim Ziegenmeyer of Marshfield, a while ago. They took the other couple's advice and are now in their second session at Hingham Community Center. Gina gave the lessons to Steve as a Christmas gift. "He likes to dance but didn't know how," she said. Thanks to the Vakas, that is starting to change. "They are always positive, so you never get frustrated. If you wait long enough, you might see us on television!" Steve quipped.

Nancy and Jim liked to dance anyway, but decided it would be nice to learn some dance techniques. "It's not intimidating, but a lot of fun, even for novices," Nancy said.

Ballroom dance instructors Roger and Clair Vaka show onlookers how it's done during a recent session at the Hingham Community Center.

Soon-to-be brides and grooms often come to the Vakas for instruction so they will feel comfortable leading the dancing at their wedding. "We teach them dance steps that go with their own special wedding song," said Claire, "whatever fits with the song a couple falls in love with."

TV show

While ballroom dancing has been popular for many years, it made a comeback recently due in large part to the popular "Dancing with the Stars" television show, which debuted last summer, the Vakas note.

The program offered 10 couples the opportunity to perform either a ballroom or Latin American dance and to be judged by both professionals and home viewers. The show also featured professional dance demonstrations, performances by top musical acts, and behind-the-scenes footage. "Dancing with the Stars" averaged 16.8 million viewers weekly and is the American version of the international hit series, "Strictly Come Dancing."

The movie "Take the Lead" about a famous dance instructor, Pierre Dulane, who started a citywide high school dancing program for a bunch of troubled and at first reluctant kids in New York City, also peaked people's interest in ballroom dancing. By the end of the movie, the young dance students are actually enjoying themselves.

The Vakas recently participated in a 13-year-old's all-girl birthday party. "The kids figured out ahead of time which girl would partner with whom," Claire said. "They did swing and salsa dancing. Even the parents and grandmother joined in. The girls were all dressed up and adorable, and the dining room table was set up to the hilt."

The Vakas' dance experience spans decades. Roger started dancing when he was five and began teaching all styles of dancing in 1962 after graduating from high school. He attended the Boston Conservatory of Music, Dance and Drama from 1962 to 1966. Claire started dancing at age eight and began teaching ballroom dancing after meeting Roger in the early 1970s. The Vakas taught ballroom and line dancing on the South Shore for social and fraternal organizations from 1976-1979.

The couple took a break from a long stretch of teaching from 1980 to 2000 while performing throughout the world in three original musical production shows – "The Roger & Claire Vaka Show," "The Roger and Claire Las Vegas Revue," and ""Bon Voyage with the Vakas."

They went back to teaching social ballroom dancing fulltime in 2001.

Looking back, Roger recalls teaching ballroom dancing at the Fred Astaire Dance Studio in Utica, N.Y. and at the United States Air Force Officers Club while stationed in Germany with the Air Force from 1966 to 1970.

Roger was an active member of the Dance Teachers' Club of Boston and the Dance Masters of America for several years in the 1970s.

Claire and Roger met when he was her dance teacher at the Anna Garrity/Brad Erwin Dance Studio in Weymouth in 1973. They were married three years later.

"At first I didn't pay any attention to anything but her feet," Roger recalls with a smile. "I was 31 at the time and thought I was destined to be a bachelor. In fact, I was planning on it." At the suggestion of the owner of the dance studio, Roger groomed Claire to become his assistant.

Two years later, while preparing for a children's dance recital, Roger looked beyond her feet and his bachelorhood plans changed. "I went to look for Claire in the parking lot, and when I opened the door and caught a glimpse of her, I couldn't keep my eyes off of her. Cupid shot an arrow through my heart at that moment."

All levels

The Vakas now teach beginner and intermediate ballroom dancing at Hingham Community Center for all levels of dancers on Thursdays and Fridays.

They also offer in-home private instruction as well as lessons for various social groups. "We come to you," Roger said. "We haven't gotten traveling out of our system yet," quipped Claire.

The Vakas help new and more advanced dancers build their confidence levels and abilities while learning the necessary steps for social gatherings and help them improve their leading and following skills. They teach beginner, intermediate, and advanced social ballroom dancing throughout the South Shore area.

Some of the couples the Vakas teach attend local dances, where they can put their newly acquired skills to good use. For instance, Moseley's on the Charles in Dedham, which has a recently renovated ballroom with 1940s décor, offers dancing to live bands Sunday afternoons and Wednesday evenings.

"It was fun trying out what we've been learning and seeing if we could dance without Roger and Claire," Susan Willard said. "We did okay."

The Vakas own a fully restored 1930 Model A Ford Briggs body 170B Deluxe, once owned by Roger's grandmother and affectionately named "Chug," which they ride in during Hingham's traditional Fourth of July parade. In some of their free moments they go out for joy rides.

"Judy Volungis, [director of HCC] has made us and the other couples feel welcome," Claire said. "She even suggested we offer a Latin/salsa dancing class [held Thursday evenings] due to the high number of inquiries she received."

For further information about the dance programs the Vakas offer, visit www.hometown.aol.com/thevakas; call (781) 837-4943; or email TheVakas@aol.com. To register for fall ballroom dancing classes, which begin Sept. 14 and 15 at Hingham Community Center, call (781) 749-9786.

Britton, who runs the Manhattan office of Mr. Youth, the company is conquering a new kind of territory with its innovative promotional approach.

"Our philosophy is, if there is a crowd and you can stop them and energize them, you have a better shot at selling the product," said Tedeschi, adding the bigger the crowd, the easier it is to gain media coverage. Depending on the product, Mr. Youth has coordinated everything from trampoline acrobats to huge pajama parties to free concerts in the middle of a mall to drum up interest in a product.

What makes Mr. Youth so intriguing is the fleet of vehicles it has used as a promotional tool. Case in point, the Tommy Lee tour bus, which was used to help promote the CBS reality show Rock Star: Supernova. The show is narrowing down contestants eager to be the front man (or woman) of the group, which includes Lee, Metallica bassist Jason Newsted, and Guns'N'Roses guitarist Gilby Clarke.

Tedeschi said the bus was on the South Shore to help promote an event in Boston at the Paradise, and it even traveled as far south as the Cape. He said it draws a lot of attention, as it serves not only as a "home base" for on-the-road marketing, but also as a traveling billboard. "We'll sometimes use it for interviews. It has a crew that travels with it," said Tedsechi.

Many of the vehicles which come to the South Shore are stored behind Good Sport on Route 3A, as there is a locked parking lot behind the building. He said in 2004, just before the launch of the Victoria's Secret Pink line of clothing, the Pink humvee came to town, as the company got ready to launch its new line. Other companies have their own signature vehicles, such as "Blue Betty" the large air stream bus which promotes Jet Blue airlines, and the big yellow ambulance used for the Center for Disease Control's "VERB" campaign, which encourages youth ages 9-13 (tweens) to be physically active every day. "It is a very good cause. It gets kids off the couch and exercising," said Tedeschi.

The ambulance, which traveled to the promotion site, was painted bright yellow to complement the yellow dodge balls used as a marketing symbol for the campaign. With the lights and sirens, it brought a lot of attention to the cause and caused quite a crowd to gather.

Due to the fact that Mr. Youth is a small company, Tedeschi and Britton are able to have a real hands-on approach to their events. "When we do spring break or launch a tour, I'll go or Matt will go. Between the few senior staff we have, someone is always there," he said. In addition, Tedeschi is able to bring his family along, which includes wife Jill, daughter Brittany, 11, and son Trevor, 10. Tedeschi said Brittany loves the marketing world so much, someday she would like to begin her own business — Mrs. Youth.

While Tedeschi said he has a fun time doing his job, "It sounds glamorous, but there is a lot of hands on work." He has had to build the company with Britton from the ground up, which has depended on a lot of word-of-mouth advertising. In fact, seeing the success it has brought his company, he has implemented the same strategy for Mr. Youth, hiring individuals who contact the company who really believe in a product to work as members of his "street team" promoting the product at events or on college campuses.

Mr. Youth's innovative marketing campaigns have earned it some of the most prestigious awards in the promotions industry, including "Best use of event marketing in the world," at the 2004 GLOBES. The company has also been featured on the Daily Show with John Stewart.

But at the end of the day, despite his company's success, Tedeschi said he is happy to come home to Cohasset. "I love to do it, it's fun and there is always a new obstacle," and the icing on the cake is being able to work so close to home. While he travels all over the country doing promotions, having lived in Cohasset for the past 13 years, nothing is quite like it.

attorney for the MBTA William Mitchell sent a letter to the town asking the meeting be held in executive session at a later date. Town Counsel ruled because the mitigation agreement requires all five members of the board to be present for dispute discussions, and there are no exceptions under the Open Meeting Law, the meetings would need to be held in open session.

The MBTA remains disappointed the selectmen will not meet in executive session, as it feels the discussion would be more productive without the public and the press present. It suggested the board declare an impasse at the second stage and proceed to the next stage, which would be for the town to take legal action against the MBTA.

"We want to avoid litigation," said Dormitzer as it is a very expensive route to take and will hardly expedite the process.

While at the board's Aug. 7 meeting it was suggested two members of the board participate in an exploratory meeting outside the mitigation agreement with the MBTA to discuss how to come to an agreement about their disagreement with the dispute resolution process, that meeting was called off. Dormitzer said a citizen came forward with concerns that having two members of the board would constitute a quorum of the board and the meeting could be considered a sub-committee meeting. Holding the meeting in executive session could have been a violation of the Open Meeting Law. While Dormitzer said he could have gone alone, he would prefer to have more than one member present during discussions.

Dormitzer said the bottom line is, while the town would like to come to a resolution, "We don't want to have these discussions in executive session. The public has a right to know. It's better to have it in the open."

At the time the Mariner went to press, the board had not yet scheduled a meeting with Grabauskas. Selectmen meet again Monday, Aug. 28 at 7 p.m.

Buttonwood Books keeps school shelves stocked

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Betsy Detwiler has always had her heart in education. A former teacher turned bookstore owner, she understands the importance of exposing children to reading at an early age, and uses her shop, Buttonwood Books and Toys, to partner with local schools to help spread the reading bug.

Recognizing the tough financial situation facing Cohasset's schools, Detwiler said she is happy to provide myriad events to help ensure new books are always in the hands of Cohasset's children. Her store has been instrumental in bringing events such as pro bono author and illustrator talks, book fairs and weekly book groups for students to the schools.

"Education has always been an important part of my life. I believe there's a lot of teaching, if you will, in running a bookstore," she said, adding she taught both middle school English at Thayer Academy in Braintree as well as classes for students with learning disabilities at Hingham High School for many years.

Having the hands-on teaching experience, Detwiler, a Norwell resident, has been able to cater to the needs of South Shore schools. In Cohasset, she has a very good relationship with the teachers and librarians and is therefore able to customize book fairs to what is appropriate for the community. "We also do a 20 percent discount for the books we contribute to the fairs for that week," she said.

There are always plenty of deals for teachers in the school system as well, to ensure when it comes to purchasing reading materials, students and teachers are able to have the latest trends in children's literature available in the classroom.

In a small community like Cohasset, Detweiler said not only is she able to get to know school staff, she is able to work directly with the parents and students in the community. She said her customers seem to prefer shopping in a small, independent neighborhood bookstore where the interaction is one-on-one. For her, "The fun of that is the personal aspect of getting to know our customers."

Even though the store might be independent, that doesn't stop it from bringing nationally and even internationally known authors to town. "Cirque de Freak" writer Darren Shaw, a British writer whose upper elementary to middle school age level children's horror stories have caught on immensely in the United Kingdom as well as the United States, has paid a visit to Buttonwood, as has children's picture book author and Caldecott Award winner Eric Rohmann. Jane Dyer, an author and illustrator who has created many picture books has come to Buttonwood as well. "Buttonwood funds the author/student talks through our connections with the publishers," said Detwiler, which works out very well for Cohasset schools.

When it comes to helping teach the curriculum, Buttonwood doesn't shy away. "When teachers in the Cohasset schools have projects involved with biographies or historical fiction, we gather together and supply the book resources. We also stock books for the schools' summer reading lists," said Detwiler. She added, the schools recently had a very successful Read-A-Thon at the Osgood, Deer Hill and middle schools, for which the class that read the most books was able to choose a new book for its school library. "The schools asked Buttonwood to donate the books, and with the overall success of the event, it will now be an annual thing," said Detwiler.

Finance director says systems merge in everyone's best interest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the School Committee recently decided looking into joining the town and school department's accounting systems might be in everyone's best interest. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she would set up a meeting with those in charge of software updates as well as representatives from the town, including Director of Finance Michael Buckley to discuss the matter.

At the Aug. 9 school budget and finance sub-committee meeting, members of the School Committee said they do not want any more budgetary surprises, and would like the school district's budget reporting system upgraded. The School Committee recently found out the department had a $432,000 surplus after much of the surplus funds had already been spent for the next fiscal year. With the upgrade, the school committee said the town's system should be upgraded as well, to enable everyone to be on the same page.

Buckley said Tuesday he had not been contacted about the meeting as of yet, but he was encouraged by the prospect of meeting to discuss the software. "I've been trying to get this done for five years," said Buckley of conjoining the two accounting systems. He added in the past, the two systems were connected, but that fell by the wayside under former Supt. Edward Malvey.

However, he said he likes the current software system the town and schools are both using and it has worked well for him over the past 12 years.

"It is one of the best ones out there for our needs," he said. Buckley said whenever there has been a problem or he has wanted to suggest improvements, "The firm has been more than helpful."

While the School Committee has been told it is difficult to generate the kind of report it is asking for with the current system, Buckley said he would be able to provide a report detailing money spent to date, the total budgeted amount and how much is left to be spent in a report for the selectmen. In fact, he said he was asked to provide such a report to the board and he did.

"I can either get the report from the system, or if I can generate a better report by exporting it into Excel for a more customized report, I'll do that," he said.

But by joining the systems, it would save the town time and money.

"The vendor would only have to support one application rather than two," which would help consolidate costs. Due to the fact that the current systems don't mesh, he and school business manager Dave DeGennaro have had to spend considerable time trying to communicate back and forth, rather than having the numbers right in front of them.

Currently, the town and schools do have the same accounting software, but there is a slight difference in the way the charters of accounts are broken down. The town has roughly 12 characters while the schools have 18 for account names, to allow the school's reports to be compliant with the Department of Education.

School dept. says accounting systems are not up to par

pre-purchasing in April, May and June and we didn't know until July."

Walsh said school districts are allowed to pre-purchase materials and supplies for the next fiscal year when funds are left over and it is legal only if the pre-purchased materials arrive at the school by June 30, the end of the fiscal year from which the funds came.

"It still warranted discussion," said Fusco.

Walsh said if the school district changes its accounting system, it will have to see if the town is willing to look at other systems as well to ensure the two are compatible. Fusco said there would need to be some analysis done to find the kind of software that can provide the kind of report the School Committee is looking for.

Slanetz said there must be a major change in the way financial information is disseminated to the board right away, adding pre-purchasing of materials was taking place in the spring, "and we didn't know the full information until July."

"You're right," said Walsh.

Flynn said he thinks the entire School Committee was caught by surprise by the surplus because the number was so big. "Denise has done a wonderful job, but we need to know how big these numbers are going to be. We need to say, 'I want to know if we're going to be X amount over budget,' and nothing leaves the district until we know how much it is," he said.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the board needs to vote to adopt a policy, which will establish cost centers.

"If she wants to spend outside, she comes to us," she said. MacCarthy added that might mean the School Committee holds more meeting in May or June to approve the transfers, but it is something that will have to be done.

Flynn suggested the School Committee get together with the person who designs the accounting system as well as representatives from the town to get the ball rolling.

Line item transfers come into question

operating budgets belongs exclusively to the School Committee and it cannot be delegated to any other municipal board or officer. This means the superintendent cannot move any amount of money from one line item in the budget to another without the consent of the School Committee.

Slanetz said taking the recent surplus funds and pre-paying for fiscal 2007 should have been something the School Committee was well aware of, and in the future, transfers should be brought to the committee's attention.

"Not that we wouldn't approve it — it's good to pre-pay — but we made decisions in a different philosophical context," he said, adding the School Committee did not know how much of a surplus there would be at the end of fiscal 2006 or what was purchased with the money and the board should have been told at one of its meetings.

"If you want, we could meet every day," quipped Walsh.

Slanetz said it is troubling that transfers were taking place in the late spring, perhaps as far back as April, which means Walsh had to have known about the surplus months before the School Committee was informed and went ahead and made the transfers. The School Committee could very well have been out campaigning for the override for fiscal 2007 at the same time Walsh was pre-paying for supplies for fiscal 2007 with fiscal 2006 funds.

School committee member Rick Flynn said the School Committee needs to draft a policy that will establish and track cost centers for money movement.

"We are tracking cost centers," currently, said Walsh.

"Then it was illegal," said Fusco of transferring the money. "I'd back away from saying you have cost centers. If you do, you're moving money illegally," said Fusco.

MacCarthy said she disagreed with Fusco and Slanetz.

"Call Jim Hardy tomorrow," she said, as Hardy works for the MASC and has held workshops for the School Committee before on its roles and responsibilities.

Absentee ballots are now available

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Tuesday, Sept. 19 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 18 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only: absence from the twon during the hours the pools are open; physical disability; religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of eth voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, which ballot is requested, Democrat or Republican, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is enrolled in a political designation they may not vote in any state or presidential primary.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter, sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate family member to the Town Clerk's Office by Sept. 19 to be counted.

The town will be using the AccuVote optical scan system. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check-in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Landmark bill protects elephants

Our senators on Beacon Hill deserve a standing ovation for passing a landmark bill to protect elephants from abuse from cruel devices such as bullhooks and chains.

Senate Bill 2457, sponsored by state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, passed the Senate with Hedlund at the helm.

The bill is supported by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA) and a coalition of groups including the Animal Protection Institute (API), a national animal advocacy organization

The bullhook is a part of circus life that the public seldom sees when sitting out on the bleachers eating popcorn and enjoying the performance.

Used to train, punish, and control elephants, the bullhook is an implement with a sharp steel hook at one end that can puncture an elephant's skin

Videos exist showing elephants being stuck will bullhooks on the side, on the knees, and behind the ears, leaving long bleeding wounds.

The USDA currently has four open investigations into the treatment of elephants at the famed Ringling Brothers Circus, including documentation of an incident in which a Ringling elephant handler beat a chained elephant with a bullhook.

The elephant protection bill approved by the Senate prohibits the use of chains to restrain an elephant, unless for medical treatment

Conditions at circuses and some zoos are dramatically different from the elephant's natural habitat.

In the wild, these highly intelligent animals wander for hundreds of miles in well-structured social groups.

These magnificent creatures do not belong trapped in a circus, where all too often they are chained, forced to endure long hours in cramped quarters while being transported from show to show, and subjected to cruel physical punishments to coerce them to perform

Elephant mothers in their natural habitat keep their young by their sides for years. Forced separation of the baby from its mother can be one of the cruelties of circus life.

If elephants must be in circuses, let's do what we can to make their treatment more humane Elephants cry real tears.

Hedlund introduced Senate Bill 2457 because "it is clear that the use of the bullhook and the practice of chaining elephants are cruel and unnecessary.

"Massachusetts cares about animal welfare and these are practices our society can no longer tolerate," Hedlund said.

We agree with Nicole Paquette, director of Legal and Government Affairs for API, when she stated: "S. 2457 addresses the most egregious training methods employed by elephant handlers.... We need a solution to this problem and Massachusetts has stepped up to the plate for these animals. It... is a great example for all states to follow."

Let's keep the legislative ball rolling.

We hope our state representatives will support this much-needed bill to protect elephants from abuse.

HEALTH NOTES

Beware of contaminated water

In June, we discussed the sampling and assessments of the water to be found in our stormdrains during and after rain events. Measurements show high bacteria levels in most of our storm drains. However, during periods of heavy rain, this stormwater tends to overflow and reaches places where people may come in contact with it such as ponds in back yards, etc.; places heretofore considered clean and harmless. We concluded that dogs drinking or walking through, and children playing in seemingly harmless puddles may now be at risk. Just as we've become more suspicious and protective in our personal relationships, we have to become more vigilant in our hygiene.

Generally, the illnesses contacted from exposure to contaminated water are seldom severe because of the personal care and precautions we've been taught naturally; things like washing your hands, keeping eating surfaces clean and hygiene in the bathroom. Recently, because of the presence of more widespread contamination of our stormwater and its existence in many more locations, it is necessary to develop considerably more vigilance about where we apply good, healthy hygiene. Most standing water and much running water can now be considered suspect. Certainly pools in ones back yard may contain high bacteria counts. Swimming pools are generally tested and treated, however, if left to stand without treatment for more than a week, they can be considered suspect. Sprinkler runoff can eventually become contaminated. Damp and wet areas of lawn can also be suspect. We contact illnesses from contaminated water by drinking or getting it on the skin and in open cuts or rashes.

The possible diseases caused by exposure to contaminated water

The most commonly reported illness associated with oral exposure to contaminated water is generally called gastro-enteritis. Gastro-enteritis is an infection of the gastrointestinal tract. It can also result from aerosol exposure to contaminated water (breathing contaminated mist). Oral exposure can also cause hepatitis, an infection of the liver. Open cuts or rashes can also be infected by contact.

Gastro enteritis can affect different parts or the whole of the gastro-intestinal tract. Symptoms include vomiting, pain in the abdomen, and/or diarrhea. Sometimes accompanied by a fever, the illness can cause severe dehydration (loss of water and electrolytes) due to the vomiting and/or diarrhea. This condition is especially common in little children or persons already sick with other conditions.

Hepatitis can appear similar to gastro-enteritis. Severe cases cause skin to become yellow or jaundiced, because the liver is not able to clear out its own bile containing the liver's waste products.

Infected cuts or rashes appear swollen, red, and may contain pus. Pain at the site of the rash or cut and fever are not uncommon. Eyes and ears can also become infected.

Several studies of the effects of exposure to contaminated recreational water on human health have reported a dose-related increase of health risk in swimmers with an increase in the indicator bacteria counts in recreational water. In both marine and freshwater, the increased risk of gastrointestinal illness was associated with water quality values ranging from only a few indicator counts/100 ml to about 30-indicator counts/100 ml. "US EPA 1999 Progress Report: Detecting and Characterizing Fecal Contamination and Its Sources in Ground and Surface Water (Watersheds and Aquifers)." These values are low compared to water qualities frequently encountered in Cohasset stormdrains, but much higher than those encountered in the Cohasset Sewer outfall.

Preventing sickness from contaminated water

Maintain good hygiene and make sure that you drink safe water, even for teeth brushing.

Wash hands frequently and when handling food, use conventional food sanitation rules including those listed on the packaging.

The world over, people live in places in which the water supply is very little better than our stormwater. And each year between 20-50 percent of international travelers, an estimated 10 million persons, contact some symptoms from ingestion of contaminated water. It's prudent to use and teach good hygiene to your children.

We'll all feel better for it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Deceptive Financials Create Questionable New Fees

TO THE EDITOR:

At last week's School Finance Sub Committee meeting the first item on the agenda concerned the lack of timely and accurate financial information.

This is very troubling news since there were two Municipal Finance bylaws passed at the April 2005 Annual Town Meeting requiring our elected officials receive accurate and timely monthly financial reports which are to be shared with the community.

For FY'06 there is no excuse of lack of personnel or inadequate salary in the school department to do the work. The business manager position was expanded to full time and he had a 'consultant' business manager working with him from the time he started in Cohasset in mid August '05 through February '06. The business manager also has a full time assistant.

School salaries for FY'06 had also received some significant increases. For those who remember, employees on the town side received no raises in FY'05 and with the dire financial situation, it was strongly suggested that the school employees followed suit for FY'06. When the override failed, one would presume that the top priority would be the students' need for textbooks, programs and critical teaching staff. Instead the Superintendent decided to take a generous $10,000 raise, increase the business manager's salary $15,000 above the budgeted amount, maintain a second 'consultant ' business manager, add a new $70,000/yr. administrator's position plus insure that the remainder of the administrators and employees receive raises.

Even with all of this money expended for professional salaries, it appears that we were unable to employ personnel capable of doing some simple math and truthfully answering questions. At a May school committee meeting Vice-Chair, Alfred Slanetz, questioned the surplus he noted in the utility budget. Instead of receiving an accurate answer, Dr. Slanetz was informed by the business manager that the utility company was behind in billing. If the school did not receive an actual bill, someone could read the meter and look at the long term contract to determine the year to date costs - it's not rocket science.

In early spring, textbooks and supplies were pre purchased for FY'07, without the school committee being informed. Instead

No progress on Greenbush

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Dispute Resolution — There is still no real progress to get the MBTA to honor their procedure to meet with us. In summary the items in dispute are:

•182 Public Parking spaces in the Town Parking Lot

•Provide sidewalk to connect Pleasant St. to Depot Court

•Provide a traffic light at the Cohasset station on Route 3A

•Provide pedestrian crossing at Lower King St. (The MBTA said they were supplying the hardware at all crossings, yet we are being asked to pay for this hardware from our mitigation funds).

Town Parking Lot — The Town Parking Lot has been graded and has received its base coat of asphalt. CBB continues to do work around the perimeter of the lot. At some point in the future, it will be closed again for the final coat of asphalt. But, we don't know when that will be happening.

The Balance of the Project — CBB continues to work like busy beavers from the Hingham line to the Scituate line. The main emphasis is on getting track laid and operable. Grading, drainage, and wiring are all being done simultaneously.

In some areas as they dig trenches along side of the track for drainage or wiring conduits, CBB has encountered buried ledge. Much to their consternation, abutters have been subjected to a nearly constant pounding as this buried rock is removed. In some neighborhoods this has continued for several weeks. This has not been a fun time for these families. We empathize with them, since one of these areas was near our home. We have been asked if all of the rock at the bottom of Pond Street is to be removed. We asked CBB about this and they explained that some of Sunset Rock, as it is called, will be removed for the new road opening. It looks like about half of the rock will remain.

From time to time we get complaints from residents about CBB starting before 7:00 a.m. Under no circumstances is this permitted. If you hear work starting before 7:00 a.m., please tell us when they started and where you live. We'll make sure that it doesn't continue. CBB is generally working overtime. In some cases they have worked daily until 6:00 p.m. and weekends on Saturday. They have also done a little bit of work on Sunday, but have told us that Sundays are restricted to quieter work such as electrical. Also, please keep in mind that all work in Cohasset is not necessarily from the Greenbush project.

The Downtown Revitalization project has the Village looking much nicer than it used to. One of Cohasset's citizens took pictures of Cohasset Village in its "before" state, and the "Greenbush Guys" say they are very happy with the way it is now.

With the rapid proliferation of wireless home computer networks, today more people than ever are able to surf the Internet from their bathrooms. But many of these amateur network administrators don't realize they need to secure their wireless routers, otherwise any fool with a laptop computer within range of their house can join their network and violate their privacy.

This is where I come in. I just got my first wireless laptop! And like most people in a small town, what little I don't already know about my neighbors and friends is enough to drive me nuts. So come with me now as I drive slowly around town, ferreting out all the juicy tidbits you won't hear about at the Stanislawzyks' next cocktail party, which is apparently set for the 27th.

Let's all welcome Chris Coco Jr. back from college! He's home for good after only one year, but none of us knew why. Well, let's just say the private sale and possession of desoxyephedrine still isn't legal, even at a state school. To my knowledge no formal charges were filed, but Chris is now urgently looking for work at various family-owned businesses in the area. Good luck Chris! Just remember to spell-check your resume before you print out the next batch.

Here's something I didn't know. The Anderssens both work for the CIA! I always thought their fluency in Persian was a little odd, given their Icelandic roots. Are they really such big Bjork fans? Now I don't know what to think.

Note to self: stop bragging to Göran about distant relation to Castro.

Remember that cryptic entry in the police blotter a few months back? The one about a "disturbance of the peace" at 1:30am on Sandy Beach? Well, wonder no more about the source and nature of that disturbance. It was those two love birds Jackie Qualley and Doug Weiman! They're always getting into trouble with Jackie's husband Alex, and I guess that night some gunshots were fired.

No one was hurt, thank goodness! But judging by the prenuptial I found in Jackie's email in-box, come October she might wish her husband had better night vision.

Stay tuned!

The Lamberts Lane Kidmans have a new puppy! The reason they haven't told anyone is because it's supposedly some kind of fugitive. Honestly though, why anyone would keep a border collie puppy under wraps is beyond me. They're so cute!

Until this morning I had no idea there were connections between organized crime and certain Big Dig cement contracts. I'm telling you this laptop and I know things that would make your hair curl. Suffice it to say that shoplifting from Cohasset News would be a really, really bad idea.

Okay, could one of Adrianne DiCenso's friends please give her the following message: Girl, he's just not into you. Guys don't use the term "basket case" affectionately. And trust me, any boy you want to go out with does not list

The Jonas Brothers as one of his favorite power-pop bands. They're peppy-punk. Duh!

Hmmm. Looks like Ed Hodge's recent trip to Foxwoods didn't go as planned. How a retiree can afford to blow eight grand in Connecticut so soon after nearly losing his house to the override has to be a comeback story for the ages. I'll piece it together and get back to you.

Only one more item to report this week — I've just noticed that an embarrassing video of me dancing by a pool is missing from my laptop. If anyone on King Street, Lamberts Lane, Pond Street, South Main, or Red Gate Lane finds such a video on their home network, I hope they'll do the right thing and return it to me. Thank you.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, blissfully unaware that he is currently under investigation for wiretapping, public slander, and thwarting the CIA's recent attempt to assassinate Fidel Castro using radioactive Jelly Bellys.

COMMENTARY

JIM DRYSDALE

Mr. Beck from the Sewer Commission misquotes me in saying that storm water runoff in James Brook was not a factor in the last sewer overflow. I did, however, say that my analyses of bacterial counts indicated it was not the major factor. I still think so.

Most folk know about runoff contamination. Mr. Beck's statement is the more remarkable because I have been studying this very problem in town waters, including James Brook, for the past two years. I have identified several "hot spots" and shared my information with the Board of Health and other town officials. Since these contaminations had nothing to do with the sewer plant, I did not discuss my findings with the Sewer Commission, hence, perhaps, Mr. Beck's lack of information and erroneous impressions.

We didn't need bacterial counts that day in May to know where most came from. I was sloshing around in Jacob's Meadow (thankfully in waders) and saw raw sewage flowing out of the door of the treatment plant. These pictures of the plant and a backyard give some idea of the mess. This glop was about 2 inches thick and formed a border about thirty feet wide along nearby yards. The noxious puree spewing from the plant door certainly did not come from animal or bird droppings in storm waters. With about 500 million c.f.u of fecal coliform per ounce (Delgado et al. Dig.Dis.Sc, 51,737, 2006), this raw human sewage was regrettably the clear winner in counts that day, hence my flip comment about dinosaur poop. More importantly, unlike storm water, it was retained in yards for many days and continued to pose serious medical risks. I sent this information and pictures to town officials, including Mr. Beck, but received no replies.

Our concerns now must be to ensure that this situation never arises again. It has been proposed that future overflows be dealt with by maceration and chlorination. Neither are good options. Maceration will only disperse the pathogens further. Chlorination of waste flowing out a door or through a pipe will be difficult to regulate and would be a potential biological disaster for the harbor.

It would be better to bypass the plant when its capacity is exceeded and let the sewage flow through the present outfall to the harbor. Although this is neither desirable nor presently legal, it is the lesser of two evils. We should therefore try to persuade the state to allow such a bypass until the situation is corrected. This will certainly require reducing the multiple effects from storm water and also identifying any sump pumps illegally connected to the sewer. It is good that both issues are now being vigorously pursued by the town.

Jim Drysdale is the former chairman of the Harbor Health Committee and the Cohasset representative on the South Shore Coastal Watershed Alliance.

These photos were taken during the "Mother's Day Storm," which caused the town's wastewater treatment plant to overflow. Jacob's Meadow, right, has become an essential holding tank during rain events, and bacteria levels in the meadow have been extraordinarily high.

It's official! It's hoops!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I suppose you read last week, as did I, that we now have an even 50 official state do-dads and do-hickeys.

Gov. Mitt Romney visited Massachusetts long enough, doffed his orange vest and hardhat long enough, and paused for a photo op long enough to sign into law a bill making basketball the official sport of the Commonwealth.

He did this at the behest of Laura Mullen's third grade class at the Joseph P. Mulready School in Hudson.

I'm not sure what the connection is between Hudson and basketball, although Bob Pryor, one of the hoop stars at Braintree High in the '40s, did move there and became publisher of the daily paper.

Basketball apparently was chosen over baseball because it was invented in the Springfield YMCA in the winter of 1891-1892 by its physical director, a Dr. James Naismith, whose classes were becoming bored with just doing push-ups all day.

I hate to disillusion Mitt, but old Doc Naismith is not only dead but a Canadian, born in Waterloo, Ont., besides and thus a non-voter in 2008.

If the kids in Ms. Laura's class were looking for a home-grown sport invented by an American, they could have chosen volleyball, which sprang from the fertile mind of William Morgan in the YMCA of nearby Holyoke in 1895 as a rougher rival to that "sissy" game of basketball.

Ironically, basketball caught on right away, while volleyball had to wait until it moved to the beach and dressed the players in Speedos and bikinis to become popular with the masses.

Like I say, basketball is the 50th official state thing on a list that includes Henry St. Clair, better known as Taj Mahal, as the official state blues artist, duly crowned last Feb. 8, and an official state flower, the mayflower, the first official anything, adopted in 1918.

For a while there, I was sure that fluffernutter would be elevated to the status of the official state sandwich and thus become number fifty, but apparently its sponsor, Rep. Kathi-Ann Reinstein, did not have the clout of Ms. Laura's third graders.

But there will be other opportunities.

For instance, we do not yet have an official state fugitive. Who better than Whitey Bulger? Has anyone created more publicity for a state simply by not coming down for breakfast at the state Senate table?

Nor do we have an official state tunnel. (Hey, don't turn away now! Listen!) The state is as well-known for the Big Dig as Louisiana is for Hurricane Katrina or San Francisco is for that earthquake

For those of us who thought baseball was slighted in naming basketball the official state sport, there's still a chance to right that wrong.

We have six state songs. There's an official song, an official folk song, an official patriotic song, an official glee club song, an official polka song, and an official ode.

What's wrong with an official state outdoor sport?

LETTERS

they were misled by the Superintendent about the true financial picture. In my opinion this situation occurred because the school committee has ignored the report of the School Budget Investigation Committee of April '05. They still do not exercise sufficient oversight or involvement in the budget.

These omissions and distortions of information led the school committee to be unaware of a large $432,000 end of year surplus leading to uninformed decisions which in turn caused the parents of Cohasset to be the victims of increased fees.

Still with this surplus, School Committee Chair, Adrienne MacCarthy and the business manager went to the Advisory Committee on July 13 seeking an additional $109,000 in Town Reserve Funds to spend. When the business manager was questioned by the Advisory Committee as to the amount of their surplus, he was 'unable' to disclose the surplus. Guess he forgot the nearly $200,000 he already spent in prepurchases for FY'07.

The second item on last week's agenda dealt with the financial needs and goals of the committee going forward. Committee member, Steve Fusco recommended searching for a new software system for the schools and the town. He considers the current system antiquated and unable to give timely reports. Rather than expending tax dollars trying limp along and band aid the current system, he suggested looking to bite the bullet and buy a new system.

In response to Mr. Fusco's suggestion, I would respond that garbage entered into the system gives garbage information out. Any system is only as good as the data used in compiling reports.

It is apparent that we have a long way to go before we can say that Cohasset taxpayers are receiving transparent budgets and financials from our school department.

Terror plot took over the news of the week

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

recap and analysis of the week in state government)

...It didn't used to be like this.

In the old days, August was rather sleepy, and in that somnolence, if the Senate President and House Speaker appeared on the verge of agreeing with the governor that there ought to be a special fall session, why, that would be the top of the news, however un-monumental it might seem from the perspective of Anywhere Outside The Building.

It was unnecessary for people at the State House to worry about the scenario in which the governor suddenly felt compelled to order the State Police detail at Logan Airport to strap on automatic weapons. Members of the general public didn't need to worry that, even if no part of the highway fell on them as they were trying to get to the airport, they would get so delayed by the detours necessitated by the falling highway, and the need to check whether their Aqua-Fresh was actually liquid explosive, that they would miss their flight. If it weren't cancelled.

These are not the old days. Nowadays, all those considerations can suddenly impinge on the flow of news, and the flow of business on a summer day.

Gov. Romney's reaction to the British terror plot — and no doubt some will accuse him of overreacting for political reasons, calling out the National Guard simply because Logan was a staging ground for 9/11 — took over the news of a week which, until last Thursday, had been dominated by a dawning realization that when the Legislature finished business, it left a lot of unfinished business.

Leadership had already been hearing the echoes of hallway confabs, that bills like the extension of the statute of limitations for sex offenses against children and defining new finance mechanisms for higher ed ought to have been dealt with, and still could be if members reconvened. Romney did a lot more than mutter — he had already all-out insisted that the House and Senate come back in to act on a $1 billion capital-spending plan, amplifying the suggestion already floating around the building. And the administration kept the pressure up last week. By last Thursday, the special-session idea had moved beyond the suggestion stage — it was the preferred course of action of the Senate president, who said in a statement: ""I am hopeful that the Speaker of the House and I can agree upon a date when we can reconvene formally to address these important legislative issues." Discussions with the Speaker's office about a potential session intensified the next day.

...and no doubt some will accuse him of overreacting for political reasons.

The thread of the capital bond bill/special session story spun out in parallel with the quasi-permanent top issues on Beacon Hill: health care and the Big Dig:

This is getting way undercovered, but the board of the Connector, the authority writing the rules for Massachusetts' unique-in-the-nation health coverage system, was told it's proposing guidelines under which insurance will be priced out of reach of most of the target group. The comments came from health-care activists and provider groups in a public hearing. At a separate hearing, business leaders looked for flexibility on new health care surcharges and contributions and health care activists said another key revenue source seemed to be shrinking.

On the Big Dig, the state treasurer warned the Commonwealth is already liable for $133 million in extra Big Dig costs because of the I-90 tunnel disaster, and the cost of the project overall should be re-estimated. "Even with a cost of $14.625 billion there is a legitimate concern, considering additional repair costs, that the Turnpike Authority has not budgeted enough money to fully pay for the finished Central Artery Project," Cahill wrote. Administration and Finance Secretary Thomas Trimarco responded with what could only be termed a smackdown, writing icily, and publicly, to the treasurer: "I must confess that I am concerned that you raise these matters in a manner that suggests they are surprisingly novel to you," meaning Cahill either is more ignorant about the project's finances than he should be, or is for whatever reason deliberately ignoring what he knows and making suggestions unhelpful to the fiscal health of the project and the state. Meanwhile, the first sign of progress on the ground for the project's remediation: "Ramp A" from South Boston to I-90 reopened Wednesday at midnight.

So: the big news from Beacon Hill didn't go away. It just got smaller.

• Johnston urges party faithful to align with Lamont — Without question, the top political story of the week was the victory south of the border by Ned Lamont, who rode anti-war sentiment to a stunning victory over Democratic superstar Joe Lieberman in the Connecticut primary for US Senate (though it was no surprise by Primary Day). That Massachusetts Democratic Party Chairman Philip Johnston issued a pro-Lamont statement and said the result showed that voters this year want to go in a new direction. "That bodes well for Democrats in Massachusetts and around the country," Johnston said.

• Appellate tax brouhaha winds down and Hopkins sworn in — A nasty fight over the leadership of the Appellate Tax Board got nastier, yet less relevant; Donald Gorton, a member of the board that hears millions of dollars' worth of tax-assessment appeals from all over the state, got to plead the case for his job before a special meeting called by a single governor's councilor. The council confirms all ATB appointments. Gov. Romney passed Gorton over for reappointment earlier this year, enraging Councilor Marilyn Devaney, who set up the special hearing for Gorton. That session surfaced a new wrinkle: was he replaced because of his sexual orientation? A governor's spokesman denied the accusation, which has been raised in calls and emails to councilors by Gorton's supporters. In any event, the council clearly is moving on; Gorton's successor, Thomas Mulhern of Needham, was confirmed on a 5-2 vote. Another once-controversial nominee is now a Superior Court judge, after her swearing-in: Merita Hopkins, chief of staff to Boston Mayor Thomas Menino. Her nomination triggered some grumbling about political patronage, and spurred Menino to make the only appearance of his career before the Council.

• Basketball now an official bay state icon — To some it seemed a slam-dunk, to others an airball: Gov. Romney signed legislation making basketball the official sport of the Commonwealth. The game was invented in Springfield in 1891. The new law was celebrated by members of the Boston Celtics family, along with the Hudson school kids who successfully lobbied to include b-ball on the roster of the state's official talismans.

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

$31 MILLION FOR ROSE KENNEDY GREENWAY (H 5210)

House 132-21, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of $31 million to fund the Rose Kennedy Greenway. The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority's website describes the project as 30 acres of parks and green space that extend primarily in the path of the old elevated Central Artery from Chinatown through the Wharf District and North End to the Fleet Center. Supporters of the $31 million said that the money is an integral part of the funding to complete the greenway that will include open space, pedestrian walkways, museums and other community buildings. In his veto message, Romney said that it may be necessary to use these funds to make repairs to the Big Dig. He also noted that taxpayers across the state should not be forced to pay for a project that would be primarily enjoyed by residents of the city of Boston. (A "Yes" vote is for the $31 million. A "No" vote is against the $31 million).

Y Y

$3 MILLION FOR SCHOOL-TO-CAREER PROGRAM (H 5210)

House 139-15, Senate 36-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $3 million for the School-to-Career program. The program is aimed at helping students gain experience and knowledge in future career fields through a variety of endeavors including internships and job shadowing. Supporters of the $3 million said that this program is a very successful one that connects schools, students and businesses to help prepare students for their future after high school. Opponents of the $3 million said that this program was originally funded at $4.1 million and noted that the Legislature a month ago already added $3 million to it. (A "Yes" vote is for the $3 million. A "No" vote is against the $3 million).

$500,000 FOR JUNIOR ACHIEVEMENT (H 5056)

House 144-9, Senate 37-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $500,000 for grants to Junior Achievement organizations. The Junior Achievement website describes the organization as the leading in-school/after-school, learn-by-doing business education program in the world. Supporters of the $500,000 said that Junior Achievement is a very successful and worthwhile group that offers learning programs from kindergarten through high school and teaches students the basic concepts of business and economics. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the $500,000 because it is for a program that was not recommended. (A "Yes" vote is for the $500,000. A "No" vote is against the $500,000).

N Y

$200,000 FOR COUNCILS ON AGING AND $50,000 FOR GAY AND LESBIAN AGING (H 5000)

House 149-0, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $200,000 for grants to local councils on aging and $50,000 for the Lesbian and Gay Aging Project. The project's website states that the group works to ensure that gay and lesbian elders and their caregivers have equal access to the same benefits, protections, services and institutions that heterosexuals enjoy. Supporters of the $200,000 said that local councils on aging depend on this funding. They also argued that the $50,000 for the Gay Aging Project is crucial to help aging gay and lesbians deal with unique problems. They cited a recent survey in which a majority of service providers admitted that gays and lesbians would not be welcome at senior centers unless they hid their sexual orientation. In his veto message, Romney said that the funding for the Gay Aging Project was not recommended and that the $200,000 for the councils on aging is not necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $200,000 for grants to local councils on aging and $50,000 for the Lesbian and Gay Aging Project).

USE $75 SEX OFFENDER REGISTRY FEE TO HELP VICTIMS (H 5000)

House 155-0, Senate 38-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a provision earmarking the $75 fee paid by convicted sex offenders when they register with the state's Sex Offender Registry. The money currently goes into the state's General Fund. The provision would require that the funds be used by the Sex Offender Registry Board to expand the victim services unit. Supporters of the earmarking said that the funds should be used to help the victims of sexual abuse including providing referrals and crisis intervention. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the provision because it was not consistent with his original budget proposal. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring that the funds be used to expand the victim services unit).

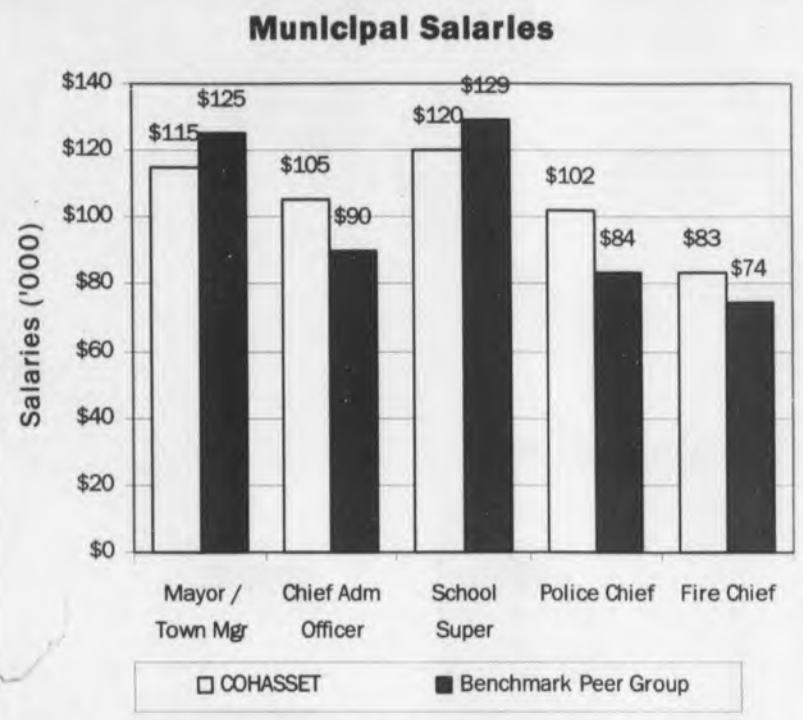
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (ww.municipalbenchmarking.com). A result of zero indicates that either the municipality did not have that position or that the data was not available. Salaries reflect the averag of the high and low salary for the position.

This chart shows the average salary by position for five of the more senior positions in Cohasset's government. Salaries for municipal officials can be related to the size and complexity of the government and the affluence of the community. This chart also show the same information for Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 1 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests und the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. This is the last of six benchmarks about the fire department.

Program for writers offered at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys and Grub Street, Boston's only independent writing center, will present Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a program for writers. The workshop will take place Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m. The topic will be characterization, and the instructor is Shellie Leger.

Vivid characters are often what readers recall first about their favorite books. Regardless of plot, setting, voice and the like, if characters don't compel, seduce, astonish or even repulse readers, they likely are not going along for the ride. In this seminar, students will receive an overview of creating characters through the use of detail. They will learn about both direct and indirect methods of characterization, and have an opportunity to practice using both. Writing samples of characterization will be provided as well.

Leger teaches writing at the Germaine Lawrence School in Arlington. She is currently completing a collection of short stories, and revising a novel. She has recently heard from Quick Fiction, a journal that publishes short-shorts, that her story "The Green Swing" is being considered for their August issue.

This is a free event, but reservations are necessary. Call Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665 to register.

Volunteers sought for budget committee

The Board of Selectmen is asking for volunteers to serve on a Long Term Budget Committee. The committee will develop a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations. The model shall include income statement, balance sheet and cash flow modules. The income statement shall include the town's payroll list and the different components of fringe benefits, all suitably classified by department, job level, etc., so the Town Manager can test potential wage, salary and benefit scenarios. It shall also include line items of revenue and expense corresponding to the Town Manager's annual budget breakdown, at the level of detail needed to test different scenarios such as the effect of a rise in fuel prices. Level of detail shall be as recommended by the Town Manager. The goal is to have the model tested and ready for use by Sept. 1, 2007, so it may be applied for the 2009 budget and upcoming union negotiations.

Interested residents should send a letter of interest and résumé to the Selectmen's office, Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., or via e-mail to Town Manager Bill Griffin at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org.

Burning up the competition on the national stage

Local hoops squad has strong showing at AAU nationals

By Nick French
NFRENCH@CNC.COM

Adversity was a common theme for the South Shore Heat this season even before the annual AAU summer basketball season started this spring.

The Heat were originally part of the well-respected Coastal Pops program, but just before the season began they were without an affiliation.

"They were all caught off guard some were very angry," said Heat head coach Doug Kirby. "So before we left I asked the kids what they wanted to do. They told me that they wanted to have a team. They wanted to finish their AAU together as they started."

The team quickly regrouped and went 4-0 at the Boston Jamfest. Later in the spring they finished second at the New England regionals to qualify for the under-17 Division 2 nationals in Orlando.

The next bit of adversity that the Heat were forced to endure was much more real, as four days before the Nationals were to begin star center Ronny Dunn of Abington broke his foot in a summer league game for the Green Wave.

Dunn is a load in the middle, and losing a big man, is especially hard to endure when you're already undersized and undermanned.

With only eight players able to play the Heat barded a plane for Orlando and tried to make the best of things, while not using any excuses.

"When Ron got hurt I wasn't sure what to expect," said Kirby. "But I didn't want the kids to get down on themselves too much. We talked and the kids understood they had their work cut out for them. I told the kids that some may be out of position sometimes but we have to take on the task of rebounding and defending the middle as a group. We have to do it all together.

Dunn did make the trip with his team, and joined his father on the bench as an assistant coach under Kirby for the week and saw the game from a different viewpoint. One Kirby was sure he did not enjoy.

The tournament began rather inauspiciously as the Heat came out flat in the opener with the Columbus Destroyers, and lost

Gridiron Club seeks support

The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to ask all Cohasset football alumni to help support us in our efforts this year to fund junior varsity football.

The Cohasset Gridiron Club awards thousands of dollars in scholarships to our outstanding student-athletes who plan on attending college. This year, however, the Gridiron Club has been asked by the athletic department to fund JV football.

In order for the Gridiron Club to maintain its scholarships and support the coaching staff in everything that they do, and now to fund JV football, it has dedicated a page in our Football Program Book that will be coming out in September of this year, to honor those former football players who would like to see their name once again in the spotlight.

And so, for a $25 contribution to the Cohasset Gridiron Club, your name, the year that you graduated from Cohasset High School and the position you played, will be showcased in our Gridiron Football Program.

Thank you for your consideration in helping the Gridiron in their efforts to keep a winning tradition alive and well in Cohasset football. If you would like to help, please send a check for $25, made out to the Cohasset Gridiron Club, P.O. Box 223, Cohasset, MA 02025, along with your date of graduation and the position that you played. If you would like to call, please contact Al Snowdale at (781)383-9131.

If anyone would like to advertise in the book this year, please call and the Club will gladly help you in getting an ad for your business or just an ad to encourage our team.

Swimmers finish undefeated

The Cohasset swim team recently finished an undefeated season in the South Shore Swim League.

The team – consisting of boys and girls in five age divisions from 8-and-under to 17-and-under – won all seven of its meets, most of them in convincing fashion.

First-year head coach Sean Sullivan – who was assisted by Meredith Nelson and Casey Anderson – said a big reason for the team's success was the way it came together as the season went along.

"The kids were a tighter group by the end of the summer," Sullivan said. "It was good to see them figuring out drills and techniques in practice and then applying them in races."

The team is awaiting the results of the league's "virtual championship," in which league organizers take the best times compiled from every team in each event and determines an overall winner.

55-50. After the game Kirby and the team held a meeting to determine how they wanted their week to go. The team didn't want to be playing in the consolation bracket, so therefore the next two games were must wins.

"When we lost the first game the kids and I all knew we had played just awful," said Kirby. "I coached awful and they played like I coached. Most of this group has been together since the 6th grade, I don't have to tell them when they play bad, they already know. We really believed that we could win the next two games. We knew we played badly and now it was out of our system."

The bounce back was evident early in the second game against Lafayette, La. according to Kirby.

"This was the basketball team that I had coached all year. They showed up, ready to play, ready to defend and rebound."

The Heat led by as many as 12 before their opponents made a valiant comeback to get back into the game. But a pair of clutch free throws by Abington's David Patti allowed the Heat the breathing room it needed in a 71-66 win.

The win did not come without a price as Scituate's Mike Steele injured his shoulder early on forcing the team to play with only seven guys.

Steele recovered quickly though in time for the third game of pool play against the Tar River, N.C. Raptors. He drilled a pair of threes early on as the Heat raced out to a 12-1 lead. The Raptors fought back to cut the lead to one at halftime, and the third quarter was played to a stalemate.

"In between the third and forth quarter I told the kids that someone needed to step into the middle of their penetration and take a charge," said Kirby.

His troops heeded the charge as Dan Atkinson took a charge early in the quarter and Weymouth's Nick Schmiemann did the same to slow the Raptors momentum a bit.

Pembroke's high scoring guard Corey Donahue contributed with 11 points for the game, and was also great on the defensive end guarding the Raptors best player, as the Heat went on to win again by sinking clutch free throws down the stretch, 57-54.

The team needed a little bit of help as the Louisiana team needed to beat Ohio for the Heat to finish tied for first in the pool. They managed to get lucky and earned the top seed and a bye into the round of 16.

The next game was for the right to get into the final eight. The Heat were slated to play Lone Peak, Utah, in what would prove to be a stalemate much of the way.

"This game was so evenly matched we could have played all night," said Kirby.

Utah was led by a frontline all 6'6" and led the game most of the way by using their size advantage of the much smaller Heat.

Facing a size disadvantage Kirby needed to come up with something to disrupt Utah's guards in order to exploit his team's quickness.

"We had to turn up the heat because we were outmatched inside," he said. "We had to get the guards to throw the ball away. We had worked on the run and jump full court press before we went down to Florida. We had used it in the previous two games, but this game was special."

Kirby rotated five different guys with Steele, Patti, Alex Danowski, and Mike Guerrera of Scituate, and Hanover's Kyle Joyce.

The result was effective as the Heat kept it close, and trailed by seven heading into the fourth when the tables turned. Atkinson drilled three straight jumpers from the elbow, and Danowski and Donahue chipped in with a couple baskets to spark the offense.

The Heat led by four with a minute to go, but nearly blew it after allowing, a basket and a quick turnover with 45 seconds left.

Utah came out and scored to tie the game, but the scoring player knocked the ball out of bounds and was whistled for a delay of game technical foul.

Atkinson made one of two free throws, and then Patti was fouled on the ensuing possession and made both to stretch the lead to three. A game tying three was missed, and the Heat escaped with a 58-54 win.

It was at this point that the Heat's small roster and lack of size came back to haunt them. In the next round against a team from Indiana, the Heat was faced with a front line of 6'5", 6'7" and 6'8". Schiemann at 6'6" was the Heat's tallest player, and without Dunn the rest of the line only goes 6'3".

"We knew we had to hit the glass hard and take care of the ball in order to win this game.," said Kirby. "We did neither."

The result was a lopsided loss putting them into the losers bracket.

Height was again a factor against the Charlotte Aces. A win would have given them a chance to play for fifth place; a loss put them in the 11th place game.

The Heat led almost the whole game and led by eight with five minutes to go, but fatigue set in in a big way, and Charlotte turned it on running away with a 10 point win.

In the 11th place game, the Heat caught a break as the team from New Jersey had already gone home and forfeited.

"This was by far the best defense we played all week. We didn't even let them get a shot off," Kirby said with a chuckle.

In all the veteran coach was happy with his team's effort for the week, and was proud at the heart they showed despite all the adversity to team overcame throughout the week.

"These kids deserve all the credit. They never quit and they wanted to stay together. We did it on our own, We finished 11th in the country, division 2, no one can take this away from the kids."

Kirby also wanted to thank everyone involved that help make the trip happen, from donations, raffle tickets, and the car wash. He also wanted to thank the parents for their unwavering support. And lastly he was thankful for the coaches, some of which he's coached since the fourth grade.

"When the chips were down they stuck together like a true TEAM does, and finished 11th in their division. I love these kids like they are my own."

SPORTS NOTES

Punt, pass and kick competition

Millions of kids compete nationwide each year, but only 32 make it to the NFL Pepsi, Punt, Pass and Kick National Finals. Boys and Girls compete separately in four age divisions (8-9, 10-11, 12-13, 14-15). All participants launch one punt, one pass and one kick, with scores based on distance and accuracy (in feet).

Pembroke Football and Cheerleading is hosting the local qualifier this year on August 27, 2006 from 12-3p.m. at the Pembroke Community Center Fields. The competition is open to all children in Pembroke and children in the OCL programs in other towns

International basketball tours

The New England Colonials International Basketball Club invites applications for its April 2007 tours to Europe. These tours are open to boys in the 8th - 10th grades who have had significant basketball experience.

The Colonials' '07 Ambassadors tour for 10th graders will include visits and games in Austria, the Czech Republic, and Germany. The '07 Rovers team for 8-9th graders will travel and play in Scotland and Ireland. As on all the team's tours, Colonials' players will be hosted by the families of their basketball peers at each stop on the tour. Several stipends are available for players with financial need.

Colonials' teams do not hold tryouts and rely on references and an assessment of the applicant's commitment to school, community, and basketball. Founded in 1980, the New England Colonials International Basketball Club is a non-profit program that has as its central purpose the support and encouragement of international friendship and understanding between New England student-athletes and their peers around the world.

Jeffrey Richardson Power

Retired investment broker

Jeffrey Richardson Power, 82, of Cohasset, died Aug. 11, 2006, at his home after a long illness.

Mr. Power was born in Chicago, graduated from Wells High School in Maine in 1941, Bowdoin College in 1945 and Harvard Business School in 1953. He served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Air Forces during World War II, where he graduated from MIT's meteorology program.

He was employed as an investment broker in Boston until he retired as vice president of Detwiler, Mitchell, Fenton & Graves Inc. in 2005.

Mr. Power was a resident of Cohasset for 49 years. He was an avid golfer and an active member and past treasurer of Cohasset Golf Club. He was a devoted parishioner at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and served on the vestry for many years. For more than 20 years, he participated in the Good Friday Walk in Hingham, which addresses the needs of rural children, and in 2004 was honored as the single largest fundraiser in the history of the walk. In the aftermath of the 2004 tsunami disaster, he donated a community water purification and desalination system to the victims in India.

Marita Ott Railsback

Awarded Carnegie Medal for Heroism

Marita "Mitzi" Ott Railsback died Aug. 14, 2006, at her daughter's home in Marshfield.

Marita Ott Railsback

Born in Boston, she was the daughter of the late Max and Marita Ott. Mrs. Railsback grew up in West Newton and attended Beaver Country Day School and Finch Junior College in New York. In 1942, she married Walter "Bud" Railsback at age 19. She moved from West Newton to Cohasset in 1952, where she enjoyed watching the tides and bird life from her sitting room overlooking Little Harbor for 54 years.

Her caring and generous nature kept her busy providing loving service to her family, friends and a long list of Cohassetites. Mrs. Railsback was awarded a Carnegie Medal of Heroism for her effort to save a drowning man in the "run" at Little Harbor in March 1963. Her modesty prevented anyone whom she met later in life from knowing this aspect of her life.

Mrs. Railsback was an active member of the Cohasset Garden Club and a trustee of the New England Hospital, where she contributed to patient care and hospital governance for many years. She also tended the historic granite trough at the intersection of Beach Street and Atlantic Avenue. She loved her family, her dogs, gardening, a boat ride anywhere at anytime, the month of October in Cohasset and the month of March in Great Exuma.

She leaves her husband, Walter "Bud" Railsback of Norwell; her daughter, Susie Railsback Fowler of Marshfield; her son, Rick Railsback of Hingham; her grandchildren, Piper Sheer, Mitzi Johnson, Spencer Jacobs and Peter Railsback; and three great-grandchildren, Sam, Jake and Max.

A memorial service will be held on Friday, Aug. 18, at noon, at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to the North and South River Watershed Association, P.O. Box 43, Norwell, MA 02061.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

Historic quilt exhibit at Old Ordinary

A new exhibit of historic quilts is on display through Sept. 2 at the Old Ordinary, Tuesday through Saturday, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. MassQuilts, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the identification of historic quilts in Massachusetts, inspired the exhibit after visiting the Historical Society last fall and providing information about more than 40 quilts owned by the Society.

One of the most surprising facts revealed about the quilts was their age. Several of them are from the late 1700s and made with roller printed fabric, common at that time. Other attractions are fabrics from France and unusual quilting designs. One of the quilts on display is a Friendship quilt made for a bride from Newburyport before 1850. This quilt has individually designed squares made by many friends to give as a gift. Friendship quilts first appeared around 1840, when so many families migrated west, knowing they might never see home again.

An additional highlight of the collection is its connection not only to Hingham and its inhabitants, but also to events of national significance, demonstrated by the Abolitionist Quilt, made by Mary Lincoln Hersey of Hingham for an abolitionist fair in Boston in 1840.

. For further information call Julianne Mehegan, heritage educator, at 781-749-0013 or 781-749-3125.

Voyager of the Seas

It's a shore thing cruising with the clan

By FELICITY LONG
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

POMPEII, Italy -- There is nothing like a dead body to capture the imagination of teens.

"You can tell he was a slave by the belt he is wearing," said Antonio, our guide, as we studied a well-preserved antique body crouching in perpetuity before us. Our brood, ages 13, 14 and 16, were visiting this ancient site with my husband and I as part of a Mediterranean cruise aboard Royal Caribbean's megaship Voyager of the Seas. And the kids were fascinated.

They'd cruised before in warm-weather climes, but when we booked the one-week round-trip cruise from Barcelona on this 3,114-passenger vessel, we wondered if our teens would find happiness on all-day sightseeing tours steeped in musty antiquity. The answer was yes.

But sure, there was some complaining.

For instance, to optimize sightseeing time, shore excursions at European ports start early. So your teen who likes to sleep in may get cranky by midweek after days of 6:30 wake-up calls.

That said, the shore excursions we experienced in Europe were both the challenge and the reward of our cruise. Operating on the assumption that less is more, we took pains to mix up our activities and build in as much free time in the ports as we could.

Voyager of the Seas

It also pays to choose the cruise ship wisely. We opted for the Voyager of the Seas, one of the largest cruise ships in the world, because of its kid-pleasing features -- an ice-skating rink, a rock-climbing wall, a well- established kids and teens program, a mini-golf course, a Johnny Rockets burger restaurant. We also liked the ship's interior Promenade feature -- much like a main street -- lined with stores, bars and cafes, and perfect for wandering (there is even street entertainment including clowns and jugglers).

Veterans of Caribbean cruises, we knew the kids would feel at home with the mainstream pleasures of an American ship, including the opportunity to partake on their own of the swimming pools, video arcade, teen program, self-serve ice cream machines and poolside pizza and burger buffets.

For accommodations, we booked two cabins, one with a balcony (for us), and the other less expensive but with ocean-view windows (for the kids).

We flew into Barcelona a day early so we could explore the city -- including checking out Antonio Gaudi's amazingly flamboyant Sagrada Familia church -- before boarding the ship.

At our first port of call, Marseilles, we decided to explore on our own, hopping the ship's bus ($50 each) to Aix-en-Provence, where we had a half-day in the charming and very manageable city. We took in a Cezanne exhibition at the Musee Granet and indulged in crepes au chocolates at a creperie.

The next day found us in Villefranche, France, where the majority of passengers disembarked from tenders straight onto buses to tour Nice, Cannes and Monaco. We opted instead to spend a leisurely morning in the tiny town of Villefranche itself. Surprisingly unspoiled for a cruise port, there's a swimming beach, seaside restaurants, tiny shops and an inexpensive tourist train that took us on an hour-long scenic ride.

Our next three ports -- Livorno (for Florence), Civitavecchia (for Rome) and Naples (for Pompeii) -- were more challenging. We chose the Taste of Florence excursion in Florence ($88 per person) to give the kids a sampling of the main sites, including the Duomo and the replica of Michelangelo's David, followed by lunch and shopping on our own.

The tour lasted nine hours, and the only sound you could hear on the hour-and-a-half bus ride back to the ship was snoring.

In Rome (two hours by bus from the port), we booked the Imperial Rome tour ($166 per person) that included the Forum, the Colosseum and St. Peter's Basilica, with a break for a surprisingly nice group lunch. The guide was first-rate, bringing the murder of Caesar, the horrors of the gladiator fights and the creation of the Pieta to life in a way that kept all three of our teens spellbound.

That said, the heat and the crowds on both excursions were unrelenting. We frequently were herded single file through pressing throngs of other tourists, straining to keep sight of our guide and -- more importantly -- our children (I wouldn't recommend this tour for those with younger kids).

On our three-hour tour of Pompeii, our middle child, Shane, drew alongside the guide and addressed him.

"He's probably asking him where he can buy a Coke," I whispered to my husband. To our surprise, the topic instead centered on whether we would be going by Caccilius' house. "I see it on the map," Shane said, "but it's not on our route." It turns out, he had been studying Pompeii in school and had learned a surprising amount of minutiae about this ancient Pompeiian bigwig.

With all the daytime touring, there was little time for things like the ship's spa, but our older son worked out at the fitness center every day while I did the early-morning stretch class in the gym in hopes of working off the gelato and crepes we consumed onshore.

Our together time in the evening was dinner in the dining room.

The dining experience on Voyager is all-American, which suited us just fine. Among our three teens we have a vegetarian, a meat-and-potato eater and a salad devotee, and all were happy with the ship's culinary offerings. The kids also managed to hit Johnny Rockets almost daily for onion rings and shakes, and they enjoyed late-night room service orders of milk and cookies.

After our family dinners, my husband and I sampled the ship's elaborate show productions and enjoyed late-night coffees, while the kids watched in-room movies, checked out the Promenade, hit the video arcade and used their laptops from the comfy chairs of the ship's Internet cafe/library.

Used to having to reel them in at night on Caribbean cruises, where there is much more party activity, we were surprised to find our teens rather laid-back on this cruise. Although they would never admit it, we suspect they were worn out by the daytime touring.

The last day was spent at sea without a port call, giving the kids a chance to sleep in and my husband and me time to enjoy a leisurely breakfast in the dining room and a stroll on deck as we glided between Sardinia and Corsica. The kids also checked out the teen club, the rock-climbing wall, hung out at the pool and took a few turns at the skating rink.

"What did you like best?" we asked them over breakfast. "Well," said daughter Chloe, "I liked Barcelona and Aix and everything, but what I really liked is Rome. It's so . . . in your face."

European family cruise: Mission accomplished.

Voyager of the Seas is based in Europe through Nov. 11, and then heads to the Caribbean for the winter season. Per person prices for one-week cruises from Barcelona are from $919 per person.

What's happening on the South Shore

AUGUST 17-25 2006

Romano's got the cruising blues

Fourth annual event sets sail Saturday

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

No this is not a reunion of the guitar/vocal legends from Led Zeppelin, but since 2002 it's built a steady reputation as something almost as good.

It's the Page n' Plant Rhythm and Blues Cruise, which embarks on its fourth annual musical journey this Saturday, Aug. 19 from 4-8 p.m. from the Hingham Shipyard on Route 3A. Produced by musician and promoter Bob 'Satch' Romano, of Braintree, this year's cruise jam features live dance music by Romano's own HouseRockers, plus well-traveled Boston-based blues diva Michelle 'Evil Gal" Willson and versatile horn-driven local club favorites The Soul Ambition Band.

Bob 'Satch' Romano

" I have a motto for most of the events that I produce, which is feed them and they will come."
Bob "Satch" Romano

The name of the annual cruise might cleverly play upon the famous names of Jimmy Page and Robert Plant, but it actually represents those of two popular bar/restaurant nightspots on the South Shore — The Next Page Café, of Weymouth, and The Purple Eggplant, of Abington —which each year complement the cruise's hot rhythm & blues with full courses of what the promoters call sumptuous hot/cold buffet. The rockin' R&B late afternoon trek around the bay will also feature games, prizes, and raffles.

"The Cruise is sponsored by The Next Page and The Purple Eggplant. And it's a chance for the restaurants to showcase to more customers what's on their respective menus. All of it, of course, served up with some great live music for the four-hour trip," said Romano.

"I like to make the Page n' Plant Cruise an overall experience, from the food to the music to the games and other features. I have a motto for most of the events that I produce, which is feed them and they will come," Romano said.

Romano, a fine blues harpist and occasional vocalist, also hosts The New Blue Revue weekly open mike blues jams with the HouseRockers at both the Page and the 'Plant. 'Satch' formed The HouseRockers with his lead guitarist and co-frontman 'Slick' Jim Murray, of Weymouth, in the Winter of 2001. Others from the rotating cast of HouseRocking members include such local, Boston and Rhode Island based players as sax men 'Uptown' Clay Brown and Bruce McGrath, bassist 'Chick' Deptula and drummers Joey Sullivan and Dave Baker.

The HouseRockers will rock the boat on Saturday at the the Page n' Plant Rhythm and Blues Cruise

Michelle Willson has recorded numerous independent-label albums as a blues/R&B vocalist since the early 1990s and performed internationally with the Evil Gal Orchestra. Just this past weekend, the singer was one of the highlights of the successful Blues On the Bay festival held at WaterWorks in Quincy's Marina Bay, as a guest vocalist with ex-Roomful of Blues saxophonist Greg Piccolo's band.

The Soul Ambition Band is a sure bet to have the cruise boast jumpin' throughout the upper and lower decks, delivering a horn-powered, high-energy blend ranging from blues, jazz, rock, reggae to funk, fusion, soul and R&B.

Romano added that, new for this year's event, his production crew will rig the overall sound system so that the music can be listenable at all levels of the three-decker cruise boat.

"This cruise event has had the highest sell-out rate of any event of its type over the last few years. And we're expecting this one to sell out as well," Romano said.

Tickets for the Page n' Plant Cruise are $30 per person including the buffet and are available at the Next Page Café in Weymouth and the Purple Eggplant in Abington. Boarding for the cruise will take place beginning at 3 p.m. at the Hingham Shipyard. For more information call 781-258-5232.

Movie review

Faith (Eva Mendez) puts the moves on Tobey (Billy Crudup) in the amusing "Trust the Man."

'Trust'-worthy

"Trust the Man" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In the uneven but frequently raucously funny "Trust the Man," writer-director Bart Freundlich makes a credible bid to be a new Woody Allen.

In the film, Julianne Moore (also known as Mrs. Freundlich) and David Duchovny play Rebecca and Tom. She's a — hmmm — movie star who also takes turns appearing on the New York stage. He's a Mr. Mom who reads Camus in bed and used to be in advertising. He's also smart and funny and loves their two children. The family, not unlike the Freundlichs, lives in unostentatious comfort in Manhattan's legendary West Village.

Rebecca and Tom's best friends are her younger brother Tobey (Billy Crudup), a writer of some sort and professional smart aleck, and Elaine (Maggie Gyllenhaal), an aspiring author of children's books. Tobey and Elaine have been together for seven years, and she wants to get married and start a family.

The action begins inauspiciously with a couple of fart jokes and involves the meltdown of Rebecca and Tom's marriage, caused in part by his out-of-control sexual urges and her unexplained sexual indifference. It also charts the slow breakup of Tobey and Elaine's relationship due to his obsession with mortality (a well-known Allen concern) and his — argh — refusal to commit.

Yes, it's nothing new in terms of romantic comedy plots. The comedy in "Trust the Man" springs as it should from dialogue, characters, situations and performances, and these things work often enough to keep you seated and laughing. As the horndog Tom, Duchovny especially rebounds from his 2004 semi-autobiographical catastrophe "House of D," and I can't help but wonder if he's the most interesting character in the film because he is its creator's obvious alter ego.

Some of the fun of watching "Trust the Man" comes from playing: Is it real or isn't it? Both male leads are men outshined professionally by the women in their lives.

Coincidentally or not, Moore's acting career has thrived, while Freundlich's work - "The Myth of Fingerprints," "World Traveler" - has been met with some scathing reviews, although granted he has bravely soldiered on in spite of them.

A large part of "Trust the Man" does not work, including the title and a contrived climax set at Lincoln Center. But scenes in which Tom meets with a sex-addict support group are amusingly raunchy, and Ellen Barkin is terrific in a bit part as a sexy publisher who makes a pass at Elaine. Also in the supporting cast, James LeGros and especially Glenn Fitzgerald are memorable. Notably, Freundlich's script hints that Tom's waywardness is a subconscious attempt to lash out against his more famous and successful wife. Are you listening, Julianne?

Rated R. "Trust the Man" contains raunchy dialogue and situations.

TREES...UNFOLDING VISIONS JURIED ART EXHIBIT at Mass Audubon's Moose Hill Gallery. A juried art exhibit dedicated to the connection we have with trees and how they impact our relationship with nature. Is it the beauty of a languid branch swaying in the breeze, the majestic and imposing stance on a frigid winter day or the warmth and protection we feel on a mountain hike that intrigues us? Exhibit will open Sept. 14th and run through Oct. 29. Deadline for submissions is Aug. 31. Send or deliver original artwork entries, no slides please, to Moose Hill Wildlife Sanctuary, 293 Moose Hill St., Sharon, MA 02067. Nora (Jenna Dewan) wraps herself around Tyler (Channing Tatum) in a new dance move in "Step Up."

New Releases

BEOWULF & GRENDEL (B+)

Shot on location in vast, primordial Iceland, "Beowulf & Grendel" features British actor Gerard Butler as Beowulf, the legendary Scandinavian warrior immortalized in the oldest surviving English-language epic. At a time when Christianity is making inroads into pagan Nordic culture, Beowulf and his warrior band arrive at Danish King Hrothgar's Mead Hall to defend his people from a marauding monster, a troll known as Grendel (Ingvar Eggert). "Beowulf & Grendel" is a modest but successful - and even at times spectacular - attempt at retelling this classic tale. (Rated R)

LOWER CITY (A-)

What the majestic "City of God" was for the shantytowns of Rio de Janeiro, "Lower City" will be for the Salvador, Brazil. Young, naive prostitute Karinna (Alice Braga) is headed to Salvador, when she meets buddies Deco (Lazaro Ramos) and Naldinho (Wagner Moura). The two have grown up on the street together and think of each other as brothers. But what good would the film be if a woman couldn't ruin it all? As each man finds himself falling for Karinna, their relationship begins to implode. Adding to the problem, Karinna wants them both and expects them to decide who will win. (Rated R) -Chelsea Bain

QUINCEANERA (B+)

The title of this Sundance crowd-pleaser denotes a young Latina's coming of age at 15 years and the traditional, relatively lavish, prom-like party thrown for her by her family. Magdalena (Emily Rios) dreams of her own quinceanera. But after she discovers she's pregnant, Magdalena is thrown out of her house and exiled to live with her older, gay cousin Carlos (Jesse Garcia). This film about family ties, adolescent traumas, changing neighborhoods and loss proves that you don't need Hollywood to make a terrific coming-of-age tale. All you need is a good story, the means to tell it and a lot of heart. (Rated R)

STEP UP (B)

"Step Up" is a moderately appealing flick, considering we've seen it a thousand times before. Tyler (Channing Tatum), a delinquent teen, breaks into the Maryland School of the Arts and causes major property damage. Sentenced to community service, he starts mopping the floors of the crime scene and catches the attention of Nora (Jenna Dewan), a cute, ambitious senior in desperate need of a twinkle-toed partner. The decent, formulaic script continues with: Boy meets girl. Boy dances with girl. Boy refuses to wear tights. But the eye-popping dance sequences are hard to resist. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

THE ANT BULLY (B+)

Undersized preteen Lucas (Zach Tyler) is known by the ants of the colony in his suburban front lawn as "The Destroyer" because of his tendency to lash out at them after he has been bullied by kids at school. But due to a spell cast by ant wizard Zoc (Nicolas Cage), Lucas is reduced to ant size and taught to be less human and more ant. Yes, it's another one of those character-building animated films. "The Ant Bully" aspires to be the "Lion King" version of "Microcosmos," the 1996 documentary with the bug's-eye point of view. (Rated PG)

BARNYARD: THE ORIGINAL PARTY ANIMALS (D)

The crudely animated, gender-confused and visually loud "Barnyard" takes place on a farm where animals walk upright, talk and refer to one another as "men" and "women." Otis (voice of Kevin James) is a young party animal whose father, Ben (Sam Elliott), wants him to shape up and guard the fence to protect the barnyard from a marauding band of evil coyotes. Otis would rather not. But after Ben is attacked by the coyotes and later dies, what's a party animal to do? Do you smell another generic, by-the-numbers, kiddie-movie script featuring that obligatory, insincere life lesson? (Rated PG)

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

CLERKS 2 (B+)

Dante (Brian O'Halloran) and Randal (Jeff Anderson), the original "Clerks" from Kevin Smith's 1994 film, are now 33-year-old men working at Mooby's, a fast-food restaurant with a Western steer motif. Dante is about to leave New Jersey for a new life in Florida, with his fiance Emma (Jennifer Schwalbach). But, unknown to Emma, he's also fathering a child with Mooby's manager Becky (Rosario Dawson). "Clerks 2" — and its homophobic, racially insensitive geeks with a fondness for bestiality humor — is not for everyone. What Smith does is extremely limited, but no one does it as well, or as surprisingly poignantly. (Rated R)

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

HEADING SOUTH (B+)

Set in late-1970s Haiti, "Heading South" explores the relationships among the middle-aged women who come to a seaside resort each summer to have sex with Haitian beach boys. Wellesley professor Ellen (Charlotte Rampling) reigns as queen bee of this colony, until nervous, sweet Brenda (Karen Young) arrives. Both women are besotted with Legba (Menothy Cesar), one of the young Haitian men. In this place where love is never meant to complicate the arrangements, rivalry and tragedy ensues. In French, Creole and English with subtitles. (Not Rated) -Stephen Schaeffer

Students will pay to ride

School board keeps the fees

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

To date the schools have had 367 students sign up for fee transportation and $66,170 has been collected.

The School Committee has decided it will keep bus fees intact for the 2006-2007 school year. While a surplus in the amount of $430,000 for fiscal 2006 led some members of the committee to rethink implementing the fees for fiscal 2007, not having that revenue from the fees is a risk the committee is not willing to take.

At the Aug. 9 meeting of the Budget and Finance Sub-committee, School Committee member Jamie Williams made a motion to rescind an earlier vote taken by the School Committee to implement fees for transportation and student parking. Williams felt the committee had repeatedly told the community it was in a crisis situation and would barely be able to open its doors without passing an override. As it turned out even without the override, the school department was left with a $432,000 surplus.

Williams received support from the board to reconsider the fees, but was voted down 4-1 when it came to rescinding fees altogether that night. To that end, the board agreed to think it over and come back to a vote if necessary Wednesday.

At the board's Wednesday meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said two months into the fiscal year, the district is already facing a deficit of $170,176 in its fiscal 2007 special education budget for out-of-district placements. The district has placed a number of students in out-of-district placements, which it is required to pay for, to the tune of $1,088,502. On top of the students the district knows it must place, there are four addi-

Cohasset bond rating threatened

Reserve account needs beefing up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Standard and Poor's is also concerned with the town's amount of debt service, but not as much as its lack of reserve funding.

For the past 5 years in a row, Cohasset has continually received a AA+ bond rating from Standard and Poor's, one of the two leading bond rating agencies. The designation puts the town within the top 10 percent of the state in terms of financial stability. However, while the town's bond rating remains consistent, it recently received what Town Manager Bill Griffin would describe as a "warning" from Standard and Poor's, as the town's financial outlook has been changed from "stable" to "negative."

Griffin came before the Advisory Committee Tuesday to explain what that change in designation means.

"We still have a very good bond rating. Anyone in the nation would be happy to have it," he said. However, he said the town should heed the company's warning, as it feels although Cohasset has a continued healthy property tax base growth and high wealth levels, its decline in reserve funds is a big concern and could affect its bond rating in the future.

A municipal bond is essentially a certificate of debt. In other words, it is a promise made by a town to pay back borrowed money. When towns need money, they cannot go to the bank and take out a loan, they instead issue bonds. That means a town issues an official statement to the bond market, which can be anyone interested in purchasing a bond, which lets people know the town wants to borrow a certain amount of money. Lenders then bid on the bond, letting the town know what they

Senior lunches are just divine

Good food draws big hungry crowd

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Council on Elder Affairs is abuzz with excitement during lunchtime every Wednesday, thanks to the volunteers from the Angel Food Project. Every week, volunteers purchase, prepare and deliver meals to the Community Center, where seniors eagerly await their "heavenly" meals.

With dishes such as Mediterranean pizza, vegetable quiche, Napa Valley chicken salad and peach-blueberry cobbler, it's no wonder the number of seniors from around Cohasset who attend the luncheons weekly continues to grow. Diners jumped from nine or 10 per day to a full house of 32 including a waiting list, since the inception of the program.

"Our goal is to provide delicious, healthy, beautiful food to our seniors and still work within a stringent budget," said Patricia Johnson, project coordinator. She said looking at the numbers, it is obvious there was a need for the program, which she and her fellow volunteers were able to fulfill. "It's really a win-win for everybody."

The Angel Food Project started last May, when a group of women gathered together to find a way to make a meaningful contribution to the Cohasset community. That core group has continued reaching out to other women in the community, which has formed a diverse group of volunteers. Each week, Johnson chooses the menu and does the food shopping to get everything ready for volunteers who cook the meals at St. Anthony's Parish Center. The meals are then delivered to the Community Center at lunchtime.

"I'm thrilled when Wednesday comes, to see the looks on the seniors' faces when the food is served," said Director of the CEA Linda Elworthy.

Medical problem causes erratic driving

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police are grateful to two callers who reported a blue minivan being driven erratically around town last Wednesday (Aug. 16) at about 9:30 a.m. because they were able to help an older woman who had a medical problem, Chief James Hussey said.

Two calls came into dispatch at about 9:30 a.m. Minutes later police had located the car that had stopped on Highland Avenue and were able to call for an ambulance. The woman was transported to the hospital.

"A friend took custody of her car and drove it from the scene," Hussey said.

Hussey explained that in this case, it turned out the operator of the vehicle was in need of medical attention; often erratic driving is the result of operating under the influence of alcohol.

"The important thing is to get the driver off the road to keep the streets safe," Hussey said, adding police appreciate the public being their eyes and ears in these situations.

He cautioned however that motorists trying to call the police should pull over before using their cell phones.

False name given

Police arrested a Scituate man following a traffic violation on South Main Street at just past 4 p.m., last Wednesday (Aug. 16). An officer stopped the car after the operator failed to use a turn signal, Chief Hussey said. Stephen J. James, 23, of 16 Colonial Way, is facing charges of operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, giving a false name to the police, and failure to signal before turning. Police said James initially gave police a false name (the name of his brother) but the officer became suspicious when James could not recall his Social Security number. Further investigation revealed James was driving on a suspended license.

B&E's in progress

Good alarm systems may have foiled attempted larcenies last Thursday (Aug. 17) at Good Sport and JJ's Dairy Hut, both on Route 3A. The alarm companies alerted police at 1:35 a.m. and 1:52 a.m. respectively. Police found doors had been kicked in and entry was gained at Good Sport, but nothing appeared to be missing. At Good Sport, the perpetrators had piled some items near the door, Chief Hussey said.

The incidents are under investigation. Anyone with information should contact the police.

Money stolen

The manager at Atlantica reported the theft of money from several persons' pocketbooks during a wedding reception last Sunday (Aug. 20). Chief Hussey said the money was taken sometime during the course of the evening. The thefts are under investigation and it is not clear if someone walked in off the street or if someone attending the event took the cash. A total of $540 was stolen, Hussey said.

The common garter snake (Thamnophis sirtali) that usually measures 18-26 ins., could become the official state reptile. The snakes have been turning up in the Cohasset Police Log lately.

Man airlifted

At 11:30 a.m. last Thursday (Aug. 16), a worker fell off some staging at a home on South Main Street. Chief Hussey said the man's ankle was so badly broken and it was determined that he should be taken by Medflight to Beth Israel Hospital in Boston.

Street sweeper mishap

Last Monday (Aug. 14) at about 10:30 a.m., the driver of a street sweeper that was cleaning up in the vicinity of N. Main and Cedar streets reported he had driven into a ditch.

Police Chief Hussey said the sweeper got too close to the edge of the road and was in danger of tipping over into the ditch.

Police shut down the road and a tow truck was called to remove the sweeper. The driver hit his head on the windshield but was not seriously injured, Hussey said. The sweeper was cleaning up after Greenbush railroad construction in the area. A tree was damaged and had to be removed.

No trespassing

On Monday (Aug. 14) at about 8:30 p.m., a resident walked into the police station to complain about neighbors' kids loitering and throwing trash in his backyard. Chief Hussey said the resident had already talked to the kids' parents and asked police for extra patrols. Hussey explained that once people have been warned to stay off private property, they could be arrested or summonsed to court on trespassing charges if don't heed the warning.

MVA in parking lot

On Tuesday (Aug. 15) at about 6:30 p.m., a caller reported her car that was parked in Cohasset Plaza was hit. Chief Hussey said the driver of a 2005 Nissan Altima, who was trying to turn into a space, hit the passenger-side, rear quarter of a 2005 Toyota Sequoia with the side front bumper of her car.

Hussey said no alcohol was involved and no citations were issued. "The driver of the Nissan was at fault," he said. "She apparently misjudged the distance when she tried to park."

Stolen bicycle

A bicycle was stolen at about 7:20 p.m., Tuesday (Aug. 15) from the rear of Stop & Shop, police said. The bicycle was unlocked. When the owner returned, the bike was gone. "Whether bikes, cars or houses – it is always a good idea to err on the side of caution and secure your property," Chief Hussey said. The incident is under investigation.

Seagull unhooked

A seagull is back flying the skies thanks to a good Samaritan and local police. Last Wednesday (Aug. 16) at 11:43 a.m., dispatch received a call about a seagull with a fishhook in its mouth; the gull had also become entangled in fishing line.

Police with the assistance of the caller, who used gloves and wire cutters, were able to remove the hook and free the bird from the twine.

"The seagull ended up flying away," Chief Hussey said. He explained police contacted the Animal Rescue League but cancelled the call once the bird was freed.

Beer cans dumped

Police alerted the harbormaster via radio to a report about males in a Boston Whaler throwing beer cans off the boat near Cunningham Bridge at about 7 p.m. last Wednesday (Aug. 16). However, the harbormaster went out and could not locate the boat.

Vandalism

Police are investigating incidents of vandalism that occurred at about 12:15 a.m. Saturday (Aug. 19) on Parker Avenue. The caller said kids were pulling up flowers in a couple of locations and fled toward the Lightkeepers Residence. It was also thought the kids headed toward Bassing Beach in a boat.

The incident is under investigation.

State snake

At 11:54 a.m., Sunday (Aug. 19), a Jerusalem Road caller reported a seven-foot snake in her apartment. The animal control officer responded. It was a garter snake that was actually three-feet long, Chief Hussey said.

Earlier this week, the state House of Representatives passed a bill that would designate the garter snake as the official reptile of the Commonwealth, the State House News Service reported. The idea was proposed by Kingston fourth-graders. The bill still needs Senate approval and the governor's signature before the garter snake would be awarded the official designation.

Garter snakes are making the rounds in Cohasset. Two weeks ago, a garter snake revealed itself twice at JJ's Dairy Hut, causing a bit of a stir; employees there called police. Then Sunday, a garter snake turned up in a Jerusalem Road apartment.

tional pending special education placements. Cohasset is estimating those four additional cases could cost as much as $225,268, for a total potential deficit of $395,444.

With the uncertainty in the special education budget, having funds from bus and parking fees could provide a cushion to help soften the blow. To date the schools have had 367 students sign up for fee transportation and $66,170 has been collected. Seventy-seven parking spaces have also been reserved by students with cars, which has brought in an additional $13,860, for a total of $80,030 in fees collected to date.

"Somewhere, that's got to be paid," said School Committee member Rick Flynn of the pending special education costs. He added the district has collected a good amount of money from the fees. "It's a larger amount than I thought we'd get, with all the buzz out there," he said.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he has received phone calls from parents who are holding off on paying their fees until the School Committee votes, which means more money could soon be coming in.

Flynn noted while there has been some talk around town from residents who think it is not fair for them to have to pay fees when there was a surplus last year, the two have nothing to do with each other. He said the deficit the school department is currently facing for fiscal 2007 would have been much worse had there not be available funds from fiscal 2006 to help make pre-payments.

However, School Committee member Steve Fusco said the department has a trend of coming up with surplus funds for two years in a row, which might lead some parents to believe paying fees is not necessary. Walsh cautioned Fusco, "two years is hardly a trend."

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz noted the fiscal 2007 budget is based on figures from fiscal 2006, and the line items, which experienced a surplus for fiscal 2006, could have an even bigger surplus for fiscal 2007. "We've budgeted a potential $240,000 surplus for next year," he said.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy asked the board whether knowing what it does now about the potential special education deficit, is it still thinking of rescinding its vote to implement transportation fees.

Flynn said with the school department currently in a deficit situation and more charges on the way, he does not want to put the board into a situation where it has to come back to the town in the spring and ask for more money. "That's not a good position to be in," he said. "I'd rather have a surplus and be able to go back on implementing the fees next year."

Fusco said he agreed with Flynn, but said he would like to continue monitoring the budget and perhaps take a look at the amount of the fees charged in the future.

Slanetz said until the district is more certain about its special education costs, if the board is comfortable keeping the fees, he is too. He said at this point, to take the fees out of the equation would only likely shortchange the children.

Flynn said he didn't understand why the department felt it had to defend having a surplus. "We're putting money back into the system. We bought books, paper and supplies with it," just as a company might do, he said.

Fusco said he doesn't believe anyone thinks having a surplus is necessarily a bad thing. "What is bad is not knowing you have one," he said.

MacCarthy noted, "We knew we had some, we just didn't know everything."

No action was necessary as the board decided to keep fees the way they are.

Planning Board gets the dirt on Cedarmere construction

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cedarmere construction is temporarily paused, and the Planning Board wants to make sure when things pick back up again, plans continue on they way they were approved.

The board invited developers from Leggat McCall Properties, LLC to its Aug. 16 meeting to discuss the project and clear up the many rumors circulating around town. The company assured the board it remains committed to building 105 units of mixed-income senior housing on the 44-acre former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street and Route 3A as was permitted, and the construction pause is only temporary.

Due to marketing and technical issues, Leggat McCall said it has had to take a step back and think of another strategy for approaching its build out and sales campaign. Principal for Leggat McCall, Mahmood Malihi, said the housing market is much slower than anticipated; buyers feel restricted by the town's bylaw which dictates children may not stay for more than two weeks on the property; and getting enough units up and running to provide adequate flow for the on-site wastewater treatment plant when units aren't selling, are all challenges to overcome.

"No one has a bigger incentive to get it going than us. I think it's on the record what we paid. We just don't want to come out of the gate without all the answers," said Malihi.

"We have started construction and marketing" of the units, he said, adding close to 200 brokers and prospective buyers have come through the property to date. However, the housing market has taken a turn and if units aren't selling, money isn't coming in to support construction costs.

Malihi said one of the reasons many prospective buyers say they are hesitant to put down money on a unit is the language in the town's bylaw that does not allow a resident to have a child stay with him or her for more than two weeks at a time. Cedarmere was filed under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which allows housing to be built more densely than the town's bylaws allow in exchange for developers building affordable housing. One of the stipulations in the bylaw, which was added to discourage families with children, which could tax the school system from moving to SMROD projects, only allows children to visit for two weeks at a time. "A good number of quality, prospective buyers were hesitant to go forward due to that language," he said, adding residents who might want to invite their grandchild to visit for a few weeks or a month in the summer would be in violation.

"No one has a bigger incentive to get it going than us. I think it's on the record what we paid. We just don't want to come out of the gate without all the answers."
— Mahmood Malihi, Leggat McCall

Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt said because Cohasset's bylaw was based on samples from other communities, Leggat McCall should have come in contact with similar bylaws before. "Is our language more restrictive?" he asked, and Malihi indicated it is.

Pratt said if the company could go through the language in the bylaw and find the actual details which are making it restrictive, the board might consider supporting a change, provided it doesn't hurt the overall goal of the bylaw. Member Stuart Ivimey agreed and said he thinks the intent of the bylaw was to keep the development from encouraging families to move to the area, which would place a burden on the school system. He said the bylaw is not intended to keep families from visiting over the summer, and he would support a language change provided it does not bring children into the school system.

Chairman Al Moore agreed, but reminded those in attendance changing the bylaw would take a Town Meeting vote, and there is no guarantee voters will give their consent to change the language. The date for the fall Special Town Meeting has not yet been set, but in an interview after the meeting, Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would be bringing it up with the Board of Selectmen at its Aug. 28 meeting.

Finding a wastewater solution for the site will also be a large obstacle to overcome. While the project is permitted for an on-site system, "We need a certain number of homes up and running (to run the treatment plant) and we don't have enough people signed on" to purchase units, to ensure there will be enough flow to run the plant, Malihi said. "We're trying to figure out how to operate the plant and we've had an engineer look at it," he said, but due to the fact that Cedarmere is a condominium project, the documents signed by the buyers must allow for an agreement for the disposal of wastewater. "They need assurance the plant is viable," he said, and it will take some time to first figure out how to solve the problem, then to draft language which will be agreeable to buyers.

Ivimey asked how many dwelling units it would take for the wastewater treatment plant to run efficiently.

"We're trying to figure that out," Malihi said, adding there are many factors which will come into play, including the seasonality of the residents. "If residents are gone for the winter, it will be a different story than those who are here year round," he said, adding another possibility the company is looking at are temporary septic tanks while the treatment plant waits for more volume.

Pratt reminded Malihi the special permit his board awarded for the Cedarmere project gives priority to the construction of affordable units, none of which have been built to date. He said the bylaw does not allow the development of the affordable units to be stalled until a majority of the 81 market rate units have been built and sold, and therefore, it would be in the company's best interest to begin building the affordable units as soon as possible. He asked whether it would be feasible for the company to move ahead with construction of those units first and get them occupied. "That one building may generate the flow you need" to operate the plant, he said.

However, Malihi said from a financial standpoint, it makes more sense to build the market rate units first. "We want to build the market rate units first to help underwrite the affordable units," he said.

Important project

Ivimey said it is important for developers to understand Cedarmere is the largest development ever planned for the town, which makes it a very important project. Couple that with its affordable component, which residents have deemed a priority, and it becomes even more important. "We'd like to see a great deal of emphasis placed on getting that building built and occupied," he said of the affordable building. "It needs to come to fruition as soon as possible."

Pratt then asked whether ING is still the company's financial partner in the deal, and Malihi said it is. "We remain fully committed," to the project, he said of both companies, adding Leggat McCall has a good reputation and is trying to make the best project it can for Cohasset.

Pratt said the board is willing to work with the developers to resolve the issues. He said Bill Gause, Malihi's business partner, is trustworthy and has roots in Cohasset, as his grandfather Daniel Cotton is well-known in town as he is a longtime former Planning Board member and resident. However, with that being said, Pratt noted none of the members of the board would want to live next to the Cedarmere site today as it currently stands, as the construction pause has left the grounds a mess. "You have a waiver to go into the buffer zones and you need to restore them for the benefit of the abutters," he said.

Malihi said the company intends to begin stabilization of the site in September. He said representatives have already been in front of the Conservation Commission regarding the wetland buffers. He said he would submit a plan to the board for the site prior to any stabilization work being done to be sure it approves and is comfortable with the measures being taken.

Moore cautioned time is of the essence and said he doesn't want the frost to start coming in and nothing completed in terms of stabilization of the site. He suggested developers come back before the board Sept. 13 to provide an update on progress being made.

Moore said while there are some issues to be worked out, the Planning Board remains supportive of the project. "As concerned as we are, we want to approach this in a helpful manner. We want this to work for you," he said.

Developers from Leggat McCall will be back before the Planning Board again Sept. 13. The meeting begins at 7 p.m. and will be held at Town Hall. For more information, please call the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Water Dept. wants $346K payment

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Water Commission is not happy with the lack of communication between it and developers building the Cedarmere project. Not only is it concerned the recent pause in construction might indicate changes for the site, which would affect plans for connection to the water system, but Leggat McCall Properties did not pay the necessary fee when it submitted its application for connection to the water system.

Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt came before the Planning Board Wednesday, Aug. 16 while members of the development team from Leggat McCall were present, in an effort to address why the commission has not received payment in the amount of $346,000. The Water Commission assesses fees based on the expected amount of units to be built, as stated in the plans approved by the Planning Board, and the size of the water mains needed to service the residents.

"They have not paid to date, and therefore, no connection to our system has been allowed," said Glenn Pratt in an interview after the meeting. He added based on the site plans, the water department has constructed mains on Sestito Lane and required the developer of Highland Estates (off Beechwood Street) to construct his water mains, to meet and tie into the approved Cedarmere pipes. "Now, we may have to require that anything developed on the Cedarmere property stay with the original approved plans," he said.

Principal for Leggat McCall Mahmood Malihi said his company never anticipated having to pay the full cost up front. "This has been somewhat of a shock," he said. However, Vice Chairman of the Planning Board Peter Pratt said billing for the entire project at the outset, "has been a practice in this town for one-quarter of a century."

Malihi said it is very expensive for a project of this size to pay for all the water connections before units have been sold. However, Peter Pratt reminded Malihi when the special permit was granted for the project, one of the conditions states the requirements of all other pertinent boards must be met, and that includes the Water Commission.

Glenn Pratt said the Water Commission is also concerned without water service, there are two houses built at Cedarmere which currently have very little fire protection. "Only one fire hydrant works out there," he said. Malihi noted there are no certificates of occupancy for the houses, which were built for marketing purposes. Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey said perhaps it is better to leave the concern in the hands of the fire department. "At the end of the day, if their houses burn down, their houses burn down," he said.

As an aside, Glenn Pratt said when the Wheelright Farm development was being built, developers encountered a similar situation and they too anticipated water for fire extinguishing purposes would not be necessary at the outset of construction. However, he said one night, vandals torched two school buses down the street to draw firefighters to that scene, then burnt down an entire block of newly built homes in the development.

Glenn Pratt said he has spoken with members of the department who say they would like to see fire protection available for Cedarmere, as well as lights on the premises, to ensure if their services are ever needed at night, they will be able to see well enough to do their job properly.

Cohasset provides 'Fresh Air' for city kid

By Austin Breslow
CORRESPONDENT

Deshawn Wilson has a blast during an Arsenault family outing at Rye Beach in New Hampshire last month.

Leaving the stifling heat and the overcrowded sidewalks behind, eight-year-old Deshawn Wilson of New York City temporarily exchanges the chaos of urban life for tranquility when he vacations in Cohasset each summer.

Courtesy of the town's Asnault family, Deshawn has been treated to life along the New England coast for the past two years.

"I have always been interested in helping those who are less fortunate than my family and I are. A few years ago, a neighbor of mine had mentioned a New York-based program that sends underprivileged urban children to spend a few weeks away from home," Beverly Asnault explains. "I could not pass up the opportunity."

After some careful research and networking, Beverly zeroed in on the Fresh Air Fund. Working with more than 60 social service leagues in New York City, the organization aims to provide opportunities for city children to enjoy vacations in various "fresh air" communities across the country.

While the concept of hosting a child appeared to be the type of opportunity Beverly was searching for, it was the setup of the Fresh Air Fund that inspired her to follow through.

"What struck me about this organization was that I could actually donate my time and see immediately how my work was being put to use," she says. "In most charities, people can only give money and they never know where the funds are going to and they never see any progress being made."

Soon, Beverly, her husband Tom, and their three children committed to volunteering and invited a local area representative to interview them. Jenny Morganthau, the program's executive director, explains that the process "aims to find altruists with love in their hearts and room in their homes. There is no specific type of family that the Fresh Air Fund singles out."

Although Beverly was ecstatic when the Fund finally accepted her family's application, she experienced some initial anxiety.

"Naturally, we weren't quite sure how it would all work out," she says. "It took a little while to sort through the details, but once Deshawn arrived and we were able to start spending time with him, there was no doubt in our mind that it was a worth while experience for everyone involved."

Beverly recalls her first impressions of Deshawn as being somewhat contrary to what she expected. "He is not your typical eight-year-old," she says. "He is extremely funny and awfully high spirited. Up until the time that he moved in with us, he had been living in a tiny apartment in the city with his grandmother who adopted him and his three brothers, and it was quite a relief to see him be able to spread out."

At the beginning of his first stay, Deshawn seemed satisfied with watching a movie or spending time in the house, but Beverly felt it was important to introduce him to activities he had not previously participated in.

"We are part of such a fortunate and privileged community," Tom Asnault notes. "Hosting Deshawn was an eye-opening experience because I realized what I had taken for granted and was able to teach him about it all."

When Deshawn returned this summer for his second visit with the Asnault family, he learned to play baseball, throw a Frisbee, and swim. Tom's and Beverly's youngest son, Sam, continues to be impressed with the skills his new friend has acquired while in Cohasset. "It has been a good experience so far," he says. "I have enjoyed his time here because I am learning how other people live."

Elated with the success of Deshawn's first two visits to Cohasset, the Asnault family plans to continue to offer their home in the future. Beverly adds that, even though she never intended to get something out of the process for herself, her family has bonded and gained a newfound appreciation for their time spent together.

"The Fresh Air Fund is, of course, a great opportunity for city kids to go to the beach, but it also allows Cohasset kids like ours to appreciate what they have," Tom says. "Cohasset parents get to see life outside their town and it's an added, unexpected bonus."

Many families are often apprehensive to host a child because of their misconception of the process. Morganthau explains that vacation stays are flexible, with the average lasting only two weeks.

"We never ask hosts to go out of their way to spend money or book travel excursions," she says. "The family should do what they normally do and, for a New York City kid, that's enough."

More than 5,000 New York City children are hosted by Northeastern families each summer. To inquire about becoming a host family, or to donate money to help fund future vacation opportunities, visit the Fresh Air Fund's website at www.freshair.org or call (800) 367-0003.

Angel Food Project coordinator Patricia Johnson shares her cooking secrets with Cohasset residents who attended this week's luncheon at the Council on Elder Affairs.

Volunteer 'angels' provide heavenly meals for seniors

This Wednesday, seniors were treated to a roast beef wrap sandwich with lettuce and tomato as well as a pear slice and homemade brownies. There was a full house as usual, and everyone in attendance raved about the food, how healthy it was, and the variety experienced from week to week.

"It's wonderful, it really is," said Maria Peroncello, who looks forward to dining with her friends on a weekly basis. "There's something different every week and the presentation is pretty," she said. For instance, this week's pear slice was served on a lettuce leaf with a dollop of sour cream and shredded cheese and sprinkled with paprika.

Nancy Snowdale agreed with Peroncello and said while she did enjoy this week's wrap, one of her favorite meals was the chicken salad they had a few weeks back. "There are always lots of healthy choices and it's always nice and fresh," she said.

Johnson said the experience has been a positive one for the seniors and volunteers who participate in the program as well as the overall Council on Elder Affairs. She said with the amount of seniors showing up for the lunch, the CEA is able to provide other activities to get seniors involved, as there is an audience ready for activities already at the center for the afternoon. She said it has been wonderful getting to know the seniors who come to lunch weekly.

"They dress up and there's always excited chatter" as they arrive and get ready for lunch, Johnson said. She added most of the seniors who attend are the town's eldest residents, who really appreciate having a full, home-cooked meal prepared for them.

The Angel Food Project not only provides the food for seniors every Wednesday, it will be preparing food for the CEA's upcoming Skinner Antique Appraisal Fundraiser. On Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., residents may bring up to three items to be appraised by Skinner, Inc. Appraisers (please omit coins, jewelry, stamps and musical instruments). There will be a silent auction, raffles, children's entertainment day care and food, provided by the Angels.

The Angel Food Project has a number of volunteers including: Bernadette Crawford, Janeen Culhane, Courtney Culhane, Connie Darcy, Mary Grayken, Jean Jones, Marianne Lynner, Connie Noon, Joanne Pecca, Susan Reagan, Dolores Roy, Sue Thompson and Janice Todd. However, it is always looking for volunteers to help prepare meals. Johnson said the more volunteers helping prepare the meals, the more seniors will be able to attend, as currently they can only accommodate 32, and a waiting list has been started. With more hands in the kitchen, more food can be prepared, which means the CEA can accept more "lunch reservations." Johnson said volunteers are asked to donate two hours of their time for the food preparation, once per month. Volunteers cook the meal for the day at St. Anthony's Parish Center and deliver the meals, and CEA volunteers serve those who attend.

To donate your time to the Angel Food Project, please contact Patricia Johnson at (781) 383-8285. The CEA is always looking for volunteers to drive vans, work in the office, or help with escort shopping. Residents interested in donating their time at the CEA should contact the office at (781) 383-9112.

Council on Elder Affairs Director Linda Elworthy meets with seniors during this week's Angel Food Project luncheon at the CEA.

Maria Perroncello is a regular at the Council on Elder Affairs' Angel Food Project luncheon. Every week she says she looks forward to getting out and socializing with her friends over great food.

CEA to host petrifying picnic with 'Eastwick' theme

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The filming of "The Witches of Eastwick" in Cohasset 20 years ago this summer was a fun and exciting time for the town. To help bring those fond memories back, the Council on Elder Affairs has decided this year's fifth annual End of Summer Picnic will have a witches theme, with guests invited to dress up in their favorite spooky garb for the afternoon — and keep their eyes open for some "movie stars."

On Thursday, Sept. 7 from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., locals may see some celebrity look-alikes, as those who attend the picnic are encouraged to dress up as the characters in the film, or in their own creative witch costumes. Perhaps there will be some Jack Nicholsons in attendance as those in town 20 years ago will remember seeing him working on several scenes in the village, as the devilish, yet charismatic, leading man Daryl Van Horne. Or maybe there will be some Susan Sarandon, Michelle Pfeiffer or Cher impersonators, as the three spent the summer of 1986 as the witches, who for a brief time turned Cohasset upside down.

To further add to the celebration, the CEA has been reaching out to members of the community who served as extras in the film, asking them to attend and share their memories of what it was like to have a taste of Hollywood in Cohasset.

"Even if you've never attended one of our events before, this is the perfect place to start," said CEA Director Linda Elworthy, adding the picnic is a success every year and she is looking forward to seeing many new faces as well as the "regulars."

Guests will have the option of dressing in costume for the occasion and will be treated to lunch at the Cohasset Sailing Club as well as a pontoon boat ride around Cohasset Harbor. Those who attend are asked to bring folding chairs, and a healthy appetite, as they will eat at picnic tables by the water. Elworthy said there will be plenty to eat and drink at this year's picnic, including hamburger sand "witches," frightening franks, creepy chowder, and to drink: witches brew. While last year's "Gilligan's Island" themed picnic attracted between 40 and 60 attendees, dressed in island attire for their "three hour tour," Elworthy said this year, "I'd love to see that number increase." She said just like the seniors who attend the picnic, every year the event gets better with age. "It's a really fun event. People so enjoy it, it just keeps getting bigger and bigger."

Guests will have to check their brooms with the harbormaster before boarding for this year's specialty cruise. Tying in with the "Witches" theme, the boat will sail by portions of Cohasset Harbor featured in the movie, including the house on Bassing Beach owned by Jane Spofford (Susan Sarandon), and the house owned by Alexandra Medford (Cher), located by the Border Street Bridge.

"A lot of the people who attend have never been out on Cohasset Harbor," said Chairman of the Elder Affairs Board Anna Abbruzzese, even though many have lived in town their entire lives. Thanks to Abbruzzese's grandson who captains the ship, many of Cohasset's longtime residents are able to see the town from a new perspective.

Those interested in attending the lunch and boat cruise should call the Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112. There is no charge for the lunch or cruise.

OPINION

Five years after 9/11

My roommate called me at about midnight that Tuesday night, telling me New York City had been bombed, and Washington D.C. had been attacked.

Shortly after planes were flown into the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001, into the Pentagon in the nation's capital and into a field in Pennsylvania, my roommate Eric learned about the 9/11 attacks while watching a TV screen in a barroom in China.

In the summer of 2001, both of us — Eric from Colorado, and myself from Weymouth — were teaching English in Shenyang, a city in China's northeast.

Our information, as you can see, was a little foggy at first.

In those first few hours after the attacks — while noon and then afternoon arrived here in the United States — we weren't quite sure, in China, what had happened.

Eric and I woke up the other American teachers we worked with at the Shutong Foreign Language Training Center, and we all got together in one apartment to learn more about what happened from the Internet, to contact our families and to talk about it.

It was a surreal and difficult experience.

We were confused, out of reach of most of our families and friends, and as the clock struck 2 a.m., 3 a.m. and then 4 a.m., Beijing time, we were literally in the dark, on the other side of the world.

The next day, I would learn that my cousin Paul Gill, a firefighter working with Engine 54 in Manhattan, did not come home Tuesday night.

He died that day while working to rescue survivors in a building near the World Trade Center.

He was 34.

Paul was an artist, he liked tattoos and he was a former high school wrestling star.

He was a son, a brother, a father of two, a friend to many and he was my cousin.

He's my family's hero.

It's been five years since 9/11, and five years since Paul was taken from us.

The FDNY t-shirts I purchased when I returned home from China in the summer of 2002 now have holes in them.

The shirts are worn thin.

The logos are wearing off.

It's been five years.

Can you believe it?

Writing about Paul's death, and the more I've learned about his life since he died, has been, I feel, a positive thing for me. It's allowed me to try to put into words how our national tragedy affected my family very personally.

Talking about what happened, writing about it and remembering Paul, has helped me, and I believe my family as well.

—Matthew Gill

Matthew Gill is editor of the Norwell and Hanover Mariners, two of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers.

In the Cohasset Mariner edition of Friday, Sept. 8 — our last before the fifth anniversary of 9/11— we would like to publish the thoughts and memories of you, our readers, about that tragic day.

Where were you on 9/11?

What did you do that day?

And how, in the five years that have gone by since, have the events of 9/11 changed your life, if at all?

Some of these memories and experiences may be too tender to share. And that's ok. It was a struggle to write the words above.

Having said that, we would like to provide the opportunity for readers to express themselves about what happened on 9/11, to themselves, their families and their country, if they so desire.

For more information, or to submit a story, call Mary Ford at (781) 741-2933 or email mford@cnc.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Captain John Wilson House to open

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Historical Society, I would like to thank the residents of Cohasset and all the history buffs who have waited so patiently for the reopening of the Captain John Wilson House. Had it not been for Community Preservation funding, the restoration of this 1810 historic home would have been even more delayed and it would have suffered from far greater deterioration.

On Thursday, Aug. 31 from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., we will have a reception and tour of the Wilson House. This will be a preview of next summer's official opening, with displays and information on why and how the building was restored and some of the objects that belonged to the Wilson family or typified domestic life in 19th century Cohasset. In September, the house will be open on Saturdays from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Next year we will once again have both the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum open from June through September with updated facilities at both Elm Street museums. Please plan to join us on the 31st. We look forward to sharing this Cohasset treasure with you.

President Cohasset Historical Society

Hurt at train grade crossing

TO THE EDITOR:

I had a biking accident this weekend in Cohasset while riding with my family up North Main Street on our way to the swimming pool. I was riding a cross bike with my 4-year-old son Samuel riding the pedal trailer attached to the back.

As I followed my daughter across the newly laid railroad tracks, the front tire of my bike slipped into the groove paralleling one of the rails and I was thrown over my handlebars. In those short seconds I thought about Sam getting hurt and then my head and face hit the pavement followed by my left shoulder and knee.

Thankfully we were both wearing helmets but my face, neck, shoulders and knee took a beating on impact. I have abrasions on the left side of my face and required stitches in my jaw. Considering the impact of my fall, I am lucky that I did not sustain facial, cervical or wrist breaks/fractures (Sam got abrasions but escaped other injury). Unlike the other rail crossings in town where the tracks are perpendicular to the road, the tracks on North Main Street cross the road at a 65-75 degree angle. My son and I landed directly in the middle of the traffic lane and were lucky the cars coming up behind us had sufficient time to stop.

This is a widely traveled road for both cars and bikers. I would like to have this printed in the Mariner to warn both bikers and drivers approaching bikers about the danger the tracks pose before someone else is hurt.

HEALTH NOTES

Infectious microbes are bad bugs

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week, we talked about the localized changes in our environment, which affect the health aspects of water, for drinking, swimming and just sitting there. We concluded that new conditions require increased vigilance in personal hygiene.

This week, we'll start a series on infectious diseases; a topic the Feds (FDA, CDC, EPA, etc) calls bad bugs.[1] We're going to expand the scope of the discussion to cover almost anything which makes one sick, because that's what the CDC (Center for Disease Control) has as its primary mission: to protect the health of the U.S. population. It turns out that the CDC, one of the more efficient branches of our government has had a strategy for dealing with infectious diseases for years. It's been unusually effective in stopping or slowing their spread in this country and, because it's easier, quicker and less costly to attack diseases at the source, it's work has been of huge benefit to many countries all over the world.

In an age of expanding air travel and international trade, infectious microbes are transported across borders every day, carried by infected people, animals, and insects, and contained within commercial shipments of contaminated food. "Old" diseases such as malaria, measles, and foodborne illnesses are endemic in many parts of the globe, and new diseases such as AIDS — as well as new forms of old diseases such as multidrug-resistant tuberculosis (TB) — can emerge in one region and spread throughout the world. A disease that emerges or reemerges anywhere in the world can spread far and wide. Accordingly, U.S. citizens and foreign governments alike have come to rely on the CDC for assistance and information.

Protecting the health of U.S. citizens at home and abroad — The United States participates by invitation in many parts of the world in addressing infectious disease problems associated with famines, pestilences or other disasters. Much of this work has been funded and coordinated in association with other governments and private organizations while the CDC's primary focus has remained on domestic health. Nevertheless, U.S. citizens — as well as foreign governments — have come to rely on CDC to provide outbreak assistance and public health information whenever a new or reemerging disease threat is detected anywhere on the globe.

The CDC's six tasks — Essentially the CDC has adopted a strategy to couple domestic disease protection and management with a global program of surveillance, assistance and support.

Bikes and grade crossing don't mix

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

North Main Street crossing, a dangerous place for bicycles – Within the last week there have been two serious bicycle accidents at the new North Main Street rail crossing. This crossing has been constructed so that the tracks are at a narrow angle to North Main Street. Bike tires can catch in the tracks, turning the front wheel abruptly and stopping the bike very fast. This causes the bike to flip and throw the rider over the handlebars. The MBTA has placed large electronic bulletin boards on either side of the crossing as a warning. They are also working on a long-term solution. In the meantime, we caution bicycle riders to Stop, Get off of Your Bikes, and Walk Across the Tracks.

Greenbush dispute resolution – There have been reports in some publications that the Town of Cohasset is unwilling to meet with the MBTA. Nothing could be further from the truth. The rules that the MBTA set require a majority of the Board of Selectmen to meet with MBTA and Department of Transportation Senior Executives for the second stage of Informal Dispute Resolution. But, the laws of Massachusetts require that whenever a majority of the Board of Selectmen meets, they do it in a Public Meeting. This has been confirmed by Town Counsel. The MBTA is just not willing to meet in a public meeting. Imagine — they won't follow the rules they wrote. So, that's the real skinny.

General stuff – Cashman, Balfour, Beatty (CBB), the MBTA's contractor, has been working feverishly to construct the rail bed. Working hours have been extended from 7 a.m. to about 6 p.m. and Saturdays are work days as well. Since most of this work is not visible to the casual observer, we thought we might take some time to give you a few of the hidden details via a brief photo tour.

Sestito Lane — The first photo was taken this week at Sestito Lane, which is a private (single lane) grade crossing. As you can imagine, the rails must be laid so that they are a precise distance apart. This photo shows two workers setting the distance between the rails. (In rail terminology; this is called the "gage" of the railroad.) Here, workers are using two special tools. The one on the right measures the distance between the rails. The tool on the left actually allows the workmen to make adjustments until the distance is correct.

Rails being adjusted – The next photo shows how the rail bed is constructed on bare ground. The ground has been prepared by smoothing and has been compacted by a large vibrating roller. Then a woven porous plastic fabric mat is laid on the ground. This keeps the ballast from mixing with the soil. (Ballast is another name for crushed stone manufactured to precise specifications to act as a base for the rails.) The mat also allows rainwater to permeate the ground rather than run off into the drainage system. A strong open plastic grid is laid on top of the mat. This grid serves to hold the structure of the rail bed together and provides stability. Then the ballast is laid on top of the grid and compacted. Cement ties and track rails are ultimately laid on top of the compacted ballast.

Rail bed construction – The rails themselves arrive at the MBTA job site in short pieces, approximately 60 feet long. They are then welded together to form sections about 1000 feet long. Then, rollers are laid along the track bed and the rails are moved on the rollers to their final destination. The last photo shows a stack of these rail rollers sitting near the Beechwood crossing awaiting use.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It was 50 or more years ago when Sen. Joe McCarthy visited Boston, probably to snuff out a communist uprising at Harvard. Since he was hot stuff in those days, I was sent down to the hotel to cover his speech on the off chance he might let slip the names of some of the 200-odd communists he found in the State Department.

He didn't but he held a news conference after the speech and Eddy Martin of the Post and I hatched a plan. Eddy would engage him in conversation while I attempted to slip a copy of the Harvard Crimson into his hands. The Post's Frank Kelly would then snap his picture and we would have a photo of the Red hunter reading a "Red" paper.

Unfortunately for us plotters, the wily senator was more wily than we thought and he refused to grasp the paper and all I got out of it was a glare like I was the guy who promoted Peress. (Unless you reached puberty by the time Nixon was president, you may need your folks' help to understand that one.)

It all started, of course, during the 1988 presidential campaign when Mike Dukakis was pictured in the turret of a tank to demonstrate his commitment to the armed forces

I thought of Joe and Eddy and the Crimson the other day when I read that Kerry Healey, our lieutenant governor and candidate for the corner office, refused to let photographers accompany her on a campaign visit to a New Bedford seafood plant because for health reasons she had to wear a hair net.

Having made the acquaintance of a number of women, including one wife, who would sooner be photographed by Playboy or Penthouse than pictured in a hair net, I can understand Kerry's reluctance, particularly since she is still trying to live down the nickname of "Muffy" hung on her by a Herald columnist.

It all started, of course, during the 1988 presidential campaign when Mike Dukakis was pictured in the turret of a tank to demonstrate his commitment to the armed forces. Unfortunately, he was wearing a helmet that was too small for him and he had a grin on his face that made him look like he was having fun in Disneyland.

It was intended as a Democratic campaign ad but instead it was co-opted by Roger Ailes, the Republicans' executive dirty trickster, and probably played a role equal to that of Willy Horton and the pollution in Boston Harbor in George (41) Bush's election victory.

The gubernatorial plans of Evelyn Lincoln, our lieutenant governor under Dukakis, probably were scuttled in 1990 when the Herald sent a photographer down to her vacation spot in Florida and came back with pictures of her jogging. Suffice it to say, some women should never allow themselves to be photographed in shorts.

Contrast this to the role of the intrusive camera in the good old days of electioneering.

All the biographies of Calvin Coolidge, probably the most reticent of all our presidents, contain a photograph of Silent Cal in an Indian headdress with an uncomfortable look on his face that says, "If you have to do this to win an election, by God, I'm going to do it!"

Well, Cal, you don't have to do it any more. In fact, you're advised against it.

Animal shelter needs $150K to reach goal

COMMENTARY

VIRGINIA HAYES

In fact, the Animal Control Officers of the other four towns bring their stray dogs to the Scituate shelter, and none of the towns contribute any funds to help with the costs incurred.

Although the volunteers of the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter, located in Scituate, have worked tirelessly over the past year to raise funds for a new, expanded shelter, they still need another $150,000 in order to achieve their goal of $835,000. Currently located on the Driftway in Scituate, the no-kill facility has been serving the towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell since its inception in 1993. Due to the continuing flow of stray and homeless pets, the shelter has outgrown its current location, and an ideal parcel of land has been offered to them at the site of what has been known as the 3A Farm, long owned by the Scarsilloni family

"One of the biggest obstacles we have faced this past year," explained Nancy Testa, Chairman of the board of the shelter, "is the perception that the shelter only serves the town of Scituate, leaving people in other towns to wonder why they should care or contribute. " In fact, the Animal Control Officers of the other four towns bring their stray dogs to the Scituate shelter, and none of the towns contribute any funds to help with the costs incurred. As it stands now, the towns are obligated to a $15 a day boarding fee for the first 10 days, but beyond that, all expenses are the responsibility of the shelter.

As more and more "insurance risk" breeds, such as Pit Bulls, are being carelessly dumped by their owners, they are finding their way in startling numbers to the shelter, often remaining there for six months or more, until a suitable home can be found for them. At the moment, shelter volunteers are fighting to save an emaciated Newfoundland who was brought in by the Hingham Animal Control Officer. At least 50 pounds underweight, he suffers from severe ear infections and loss of hair from a combination of malnutrition and flea infestation. Needless to say, his veterinary bills have already exceeded the $150 the shelter will receive in boarding fees, but regardless, he will be nursed back to health, given plenty of love and care, and will remain there as long as it takes to find him a good home.

Staffed almost exclusively by volunteers, save for one full time and one part time paid position, the shelter holds several fundraising events each year, such as a yard sale, golf tournament and show house, to raise its operating budget. Vet bills alone average $30,000 a year, and the shelter relies on donations of food, litter, bedding and other necessities. In addition to the yearly events, volunteers have hosted informational cocktail parties, a gala Bark and Howl Ball, and a massive mailing campaign to reach potential donors, but despite their devotion to the cause, fundraising does not come easily. As one volunteer laughingly admitted, "We're finding out that we're just a bunch of well meaning middle-aged folks who are a lot better at cleaning cat boxes than we are at asking for money in the middle of four of the most affluent towns on the South Shore."

For donations above a certain amount, naming privileges are available, but any size donation will be most gratefully received. Please open your hearts (and your wallets) and help the volunteers continue to find "forever homes" for our stray, abandoned and homeless pet population. To make a donation to the 3A Farm Fund, please send it to the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter, Box 823, Scituate, Ma 02066, or for more information, please call 781-545-8703.

Gini Hayes is a long-time volunteer at the shelter and has been a member of the Board of Directors since 2003.

Trusting public officials to do the right thing

COMMENTARY

TERRY MCCARTHY

...doing "the right thing" is complex, difficult and requires a system of checks and balances.

In the run-up to last Spring's override vote, Selectman Spofford spoke passionately at the selectmen's meeting at which the warrant article for the school budget was discussed and approved. Mr. Spofford strongly supported the higher override and stated that he trusted the School Superintendent and the School Committee in their agreement that the $1.5 million override was essential. In the July 14 Mariner, School Committee Vice Chair Flynn was quoted as asking: "Collectively should we adopt a position to be micro managers or have faith in the people employed by us?" Thus, both gentlemen and others supporting the override indicated that they trusted that this override was absolutely necessary. In what I perceive to be a vote of no confidence, the town's voters essentially said they did not trust the School Committee nor the School Superintendent on this specific matter.

Since then the town and the School Committee have been "surprised" at the $430,000 surplus that has been reported by the School Department. I have to believe that Mr. Spofford and Mr. Flynn [as well as others] have been embarrassed by this result given their statements were made at a time when it appears the School Department knew there was a surplus.

The problem as I see it is that to say you trust a public official really is only half of what needs to be said. What we should all be saying is that we trust all our public officials to do the right thing. It is the second part of this statement where the problem arises. Why? Because we need to agree on what the right thing is. And the right thing is absolutely critical to sound management and good communication among decision makers. It is an error to just say "I trust you" in public policy matters without a mutual understanding of what the right thing is.

So, what is "the right thing" in the current dialog taking place within the Cohasset School system? I see two specific "right things" that would improve the situation: first, a general review of the roles of the School Committee vis a vis the School Department; and second, a specific action step to provide almost real-time monitoring of school finances.

1. Authority can be delegated, responsibility cannot.

Some members of the School Committee have recognized that confusion exists between the Committee and the Superintendent regarding who has the authority to do certain tasks in the movement of funds between "cost centers" or "line items." In any instance, the School Committee cannot delegate the responsibility for those actions but it can, by setting policy, clarify how the authority can be shared between the School Committee and the Superintendent. But the power for making those changes exist with the Committee and some members have quoted state education law as actually requiring that to be done. The School Committee can, however, split apart the authority by saying, for example, the Superintendent is empowered to make decisions to move funds across cost centers in an amount not to exceed $XYZ. Larger transfers must be approved by the School Committee or a subcommittee thereof. By setting such a policy the School Committee, which is responsible to the town's voters, has decided to ensure that the chances of a financial surprise — good or bad — is minimized. It also sets requirements for the School Committee to be much more aware of what is actually going on within the School Department budget. This is already being discussed and it appears to be moving toward resolution.

2. Trust, but verify!

Ronald Reagan used this phrase in discussing nuclear disarmament with the Russians. It applies as well to any situation where doing "the right thing" is complex, difficult and requires a system of checks and balances. Even in Cohasset this "trust, but verify" attitude can be useful. Physical verification is very important once the School Department's role and School Committee's role have been integrated. The principle of establishing clear roles for each entity can only be maintained by some mutually agreeable method of monitoring the execution of those roles.

Some may say that the Cohasset's schools don't require all this bother. I'd point to the recent amazing revelation that former town manager Haddad apparently gave away private land to the MBTA as his solution to the parking space problem downtown. The prior Board of Selectmen apparently didn't know anything about this action. But the T has claimed Mr. Haddad's letter binds the town. The selectmen trusted their town manager. Apparently the Board didn't clarify its role vis a vis the town manager nor did they have a mechanism to monitor Mr. Haddad's decisions on behalf of the Town.

The issue of trust in the supervisor/employee relationship is a classic conundrum in organizational development and management theory. The Cohasset School Committee should be commended for taking on these challenging management issues. I suspect solving these budgetary problems was not what motivated people to run for seats on the School Committee. I believe, however, that dealing with these issues successfully will go a long way toward meeting the goal of creating and maintaining the best schools possible for our children.

Team Eagle: Ranked 2nd on US Disabled Sailing Team

SAILING FOR BEIJING

MARK LEWIS

Team Eagle had a great time sailing in the Marblehead NOOD, which was the first event anywhere in the world for the SKUD 18. And no, we were not sailing nude; we're trying to make friends here, not enemies.

The overall victory went to Scott Whitman of New Jersey. The last day of races presented shifty winds and a dying breeze. An extreme shift to the left of the course left us without much wind on the right and sealed our fate for this race and the competition overall. The race committee was only able to get one start in for the SKUD 18 before the 2:30 p.m. deadline on Sunday.

Team Eagle placed second overall (only one point behind Whitman) in its first ever SKUD 18 regatta. We clinched three firsts during the regatta. Overall, the three days of racing were filled with adrenaline and excitement.

Team Eagle would like to thank all those that helped us and other SKUD 18 teams at the Marblehead NOOD. Without your support this event could not have happened. We would also like to thank the other teams for making the trek to Marblehead from faraway places such as Seattle and Miami.

Schedules have been very hectic, juggling boat repairs with practice. Owning one of the first boats off the production line is both a blessing and a curse; we are the select few who must pioneer the way through design flaws.

In the wake of the NOOD, we competed in the Thomas R. Clagett Regatta in Newport. The Clagett was the second event for the SKUD 18 and the top three placing US teams joined the US Disabled Sailing Team for 2006. Racing was held on Saturday and Sunday along with several training days before the weekend with US Disabled Sailing coach, Betsy Alison.

Mark Lewis and Maureen McKinnon-Tucker., pose at Clagett Regatta with Maureen's husband, Dan Tucker, who has been coaching Team Eagle.

The Clagett was by far the most competitive event we have sailed thus far. We practiced for five days leading up to the event and the hard work paid off. On Sunday, we finished in second place overall. Additionally, this earned us the second-place spot on the US Disabled Sailing Team.

The US Disabled Sailing Team is comprised of the three Paralympic classes: the 2.4 Metre for the single-person event, the SKUD 18 for the two-person event, and the Sonar for the three-person event. Several races a year are held to determine the team for the following year.

Now that the Clagett is behind us, we will begin to prepare for the Newport International Boat Show held between Sept. 14th and 17th. In addition to displaying our boat and promoting our team, we will be conducting an adaptive sailing seminar on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the show. Please come and join us.

Also, if you or your friends are golf enthusiasts, sign up for our golf tournament in September by going to Stars on Hingham Harbor or by downloading the registration form online at www.teameagle.org. This is a fantastic opportunity to help us out and see the boat before it heads south for the winter.

Team Eagle placed second overall (only one point behind Whitman) in its first ever SKUD 18 regatta. We clinched three firsts during the regatta. Overall, the three days of racing were filled with adrenaline and excitement.

Our next competition will, again, be in Newport, Rhode Island in October. This is the last regatta in the Northeast for 2006. We will continue to train and compete throughout the winter predominantly in St. Petersburg and Miami, Florida.

Absentee ballots for State Primary

Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person.

Absentee ballots for the State Primary on Tuesday, Sept. 19 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 18 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only: absence from the twon during the hours the pools are open; physical disability; religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of eth voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, which ballot is requested, Democrat or Republican, and the signature of the applicant. If a voter is enrolled in a political designation they may not vote in any state or presidential primary.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter, sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate family member to the Town Clerk's Office by Sept. 19 to be counted.

The town will be using the Accu-Vote optical scan system. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check-in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Lack of surplus funds threatens town's bond rating

would charge the town in interest should the town choose to borrow their money. Once the town accepts the bid and sells the bond, the interest rates for payments are locked in.

A town's bond rating is important because it lets potential bond buyers know the risk they are taking in terms of the town's being able to pay back the borrowed money. Director of Finance Michael Buckley said virtually every time the town has issued a bond, it has first contacted either Standard and Poor's or Moody's to be rated. With Cohasset's AA+ rating, it is more likely to receive more bids and better interest rates — which can save the town money — than towns with lower ratings.

Griffin said the town has a policy to keep 5 percent of the general fund operating budget (which excludes the water and sewer budgets) in reserve. Currently, it has $1,228,318, or 4.31 percent in reserves. To have 5 percent set aside, it would need to put away an additional $196,380. "If we can have as good a year this year as last, we'll be in good shape," said Griffin.

Griffin said one of the things he is considering, which would make the town's financial situation look better, is moving $505,143 from a debt service fund, which includes money from the sale of the right-of-way to the MBTA, to the town's regular stabilization fund, which currently has only $42,781. To Standard and Poor's, it would be counted as having $547,924 in reserve funding, which could greatly help the town's rating.

Griffin said the town could also look into taking advantage of a new law that allows towns to have more than one stabilization fund, which each have money set aside for specific purposes. The town currently has a sewer betterment fund and a pension reserve fund, which could be put into their own stabilization funds, which would not change the way they are spent, but would be counted toward the town's reserves where they currently are not. "It might help," said Griffin, but the funding would then require a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting to be spent. "I think it would send a very good message," he said.

Standard and Poor's is also concerned with the town's amount of debt service, but not as much as its lack of reserve funding. The state in one way or another has subsidized most of the town's debt, which is good for the town.

Cohasset's has had a AA+ rating from Standard and Poor's since 2001. The town has also had three upgrades within the past 10 years from Moody's, as it was upgraded to A1 in 1996, to AA3 in 1998, and to AA2 in 2002.

How are bonds rated?

Standard and Poor's uses the following ratings for bonds:

AAA - An obligation rated AAA has the highest rating assigned by Standard & Poor's. The obligor's capacity to meet its financial commitment on the obligation is extremely strong.

AA - differs from the highest-rated obligations only in small degree.

A - somewhat more susceptible to the adverse effects of changes in circumstances and economic conditions than obligations in higher-rated categories. However, the obligor's capacity to meet its financial commitment on the obligation is still strong.

BBB - exhibits adequate protection parameters. However, adverse economic conditions or changing circumstances are more likely to lead to a weakened capacity of the obligor to meet its financial commitment on the obligation.

BB - less vulnerable to nonpayment than other speculative issues. However, it faces major ongoing uncertainties or exposure to adverse business, financial, or economic conditions, which could lead to the obligor's inadequate capacity to meet its financial commitment on the obligation.

B - more vulnerable to nonpayment than obligations rated BB, but the obligor currently has the capacity to meet its financial commitment on the obligation.

CCC - is currently vulnerable to nonpayment and is dependent upon favorable business, financial, and economic conditions for the obligor to meet its financial commitment on the obligation. In the event of adverse business, financial, or economic conditions, the obligor is not likely to have the capacity to meet its financial commitment on the obligation.

CC - An obligation rated CC is currently highly vulnerable to nonpayment.

C - is currently highly vulnerable to nonpayment. The C rating may be used to cover a situation where a bankruptcy petition has been filed or similar action taken, but payments on this obligation are being continued.

D - is in payment default. The D rating category is used when payments on an obligation are not made on the date due even if the applicable grace period has not expired, unless Standard & Poor's believes that such payments will be made during such grace period. The D rating also will be used upon the filing of a bankruptcy petition or the taking of a similar action if payments on an obligation are jeopardized.

Plus (+) or minus (-) - Ratings from AA to CCC may be modified by the addition of a + or – sign, to show relative standing within the major rating categories.

What are the town's reserve funds?

The town has three areas of "surplus" funds in the budget: the reserve fund, the stabilization fund and free cash.

The reserve fund is a recurring budgetary item. Each year, Town Meeting votes to appropriate a sum of money ($125,000 in fiscal 2006) into the reserve fund, which is under the control of the Advisory Committee. Reserve funds are to be used for unexpected and unforeseen expenses during the course of the fiscal year, without having to call a special town meeting. That means if a department needs funding in the summer for something it did not expect, it can ask for a reserve fund transfer and get the money in June, rather than having to wait until the fall for Special Town Meeting approval. The money in the reserve fund gets closed out at the end of the year and turned over to surplus, and a new reserve fund amount is budgeted the following year.

The stabilization fund is an actual trust fund that has money in it and earns its own interest, rather than just a budgeted item. This means funds in the stabilization fund are available from year to year. Town Meeting authorization is required to transfer money from the stabilization fund for any lawful purpose. Usually funds spent from the reserve fund are for one-time expenses. Other than interest being earned, the only way the stabilization fund increases is if Town Meeting votes to put money into it.

Free cash is more complicated than the other two accounts, and is strictly a Massachusetts term. At the end of every fiscal year, the Director of Finance prepares the balance sheet as of June 30, the last day of the fiscal year, essentially taking a snapshot of the town's finances at that date. After the Department of Revenue reviews the balance sheet, it certifies the amount of free cash, or surplus, the town has. Those funds can then be transferred by Town Meeting for any lawful purpose. From year to year, free cash can vary greatly based on how much the town collected in revenue over and above what was predicted, how much money was turned back to surplus from budget appropriations and other Department of Revenue calculations. Free cash is somewhat of a misnomer as it is neither "free" nor "cash" and is essentially an accounting calculation, rather than an actual account with money.

Improving local cell phone reception

The first week of August, Selectman Fred Koed sent a memo to his fellow board members, asking them to discuss the possibilities for increasing cell phone reception in town at some point in the near future. He said the issue should be looked at from a public safety perspective, as there are many homes along the water, which do not have adequate cell phone service. During an emergency when every second counts, having a cell phone readily accessible to call for help doesn't do any good if there isn't any service, he said.

Koed suggested the town look into all its options, including potentially installing a Distributed Antenna System, which a representative from National Grid explained to the board in June. DAS service provides towns with better coverage by allowing wireless carriers to locate their equipment at a "hub" which is essentially a small building similar to a shed. Cohasset would likely connect to a hub already in existence in Hull. The signals are then delivered over fiber to the radio cabinets, which are posted to a telephone pole with an antenna at the top. Cohasset could potentially have trouble installing such a system near the ocean, as there are no telephone poles along the waterfront on Jerusalem Road.

Koed said in his opinion, the town should get involved with investigating its options not only to improve public safety, but as a potential means of generating revenue. He said estimates range between $75,000 and $90,000 in possible revenue if the town were to lease its land to a cellular company to enable it to improve cell coverage in town. "Under these tight fiscal times, the sooner we can tap into additional income, the faster we can work to stabilize budget increases," he said. Koed added if the town does nothing, carriers in the wireless industry might seek private property to build out their systems in the future. "The Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 can be used by these carriers to preempt our local bylaws, allowing cell site towers to be built anywhere in town," he said. The town's bylaws currently prohibit commercial communications towers from being built in any residential area, and allow them in the technology business and light industry zoning districts.

Koed said the board should put out a Request for Proposals to "test the market" and see what the interest is from cell phone providers to work with the town to better its cell phone connections. He suggested the town enlist the services of the Cable Advisory Committee for technical and financial input. He said many citizens in town would also likely have expertise to share. He said if an RFP could be drafted by the end of September, bids would be due the end of October, which would allow any zoning changes (re-zoning issues, long term leases, etc.) to be addressed at the Special Town Meeting in the fall.

BREAST CANCER ALERT

A just-released study* funded by the National Cancer Institute found that women exposed to prenatal DES have a two to three times higher relative risk of Breast Cancer than unexposed women in the 40-50 year old population.

Using data collected as a part of the National Cancer Institutes on-going DES Follow-up Study, a panel of leading DES experts released the new finding.

Women exposed to DES in utero, who have been diagnosed with breast cancer, may now have a legal claim. Cohasset's Zappolo looks to put injury behind him and put together a big senior year

By Mike Spellman

Nick Zappolo is eager to get back to playing football this fall.

We all know what a long, hot summer it's been. No one wants to hear you complain about it, though, least of all Nick Zappolo.

Imagine yourself trapped in a full leg cast for three-and-a-half months during the hottest time of the year. Now imagine you're a super-active 17-year old who wants nothing more than to get in the best shape of your life for your senior year of high school sports.

"Oh, I've been miserable," confessed Cohasset High athletic standout Nick Zappolo. "September just kept getting closer and it seemed like I was never going to get this cast off."

Well, the star football/basketball/baseball player finally got his reprieve three weeks ago, and it's taken a lot of reminders from his parents, coaches and doctors to keep him on the slow and conservative road to full recovery.

"Nick was out there doing some light running for the first time today," reported first year Skippers head football coach Pete Afanasiw on Tuesday. "You could see he's still got a ways to go, but it was good to

Dragon comes to Cohasset

Former Duxbury assistant will guide Skippers football program this fall

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset High School had plenty of football success under former coach Tony Rolfe, and there's no reason to expect anything different now that former Duxbury High assistant Pete Afanasiw has taken over the reins of the program.

The Green Dragons were regular postseason participants during Afanasiw's nine years as an assistant there and brought home a Div. 4 Super Bowl championship last year. Afanasiw hopes he can bring that same kind of success to the Skippers, who have had their share of postseason appearances as well as they have battled the other powerhouses like Norwell and defending champion Abington on fairly even terms and hope to continue to do so.

"It was a dream of mine to be a high school head coach for some time now," said Afanasiw after putting his team through its first two days of practice. "It's nice to be out there with the kids, who have been working hard and show a lot of promise. This is a program which has won its share of games for quite a while now, so we're hoping to keep it going and maybe even be a little better."

Afanasiw acknowledges that there will be some changes in the way the Skippers do some things but expects the players to be able to handle the changes.

"Our defense is actually going to be pretty much the same as they played here last year, but we will be running a different offense, but I think it's an offense that the kids that are here will be able to run effectively," said Afanasiw.

TOSSING BATTING PRACTICE

NICK FRENCH

Now that September and October baseball won't be clouding your minds with delusions of grandeur, and preseason football action in full swing, it's time to start focusing on the positives. While the Patriots have looked good thus far, there is another team that has yet to discern itself as a pretender or a contender, your fantasy football team.

Almost everyone does it, though always "strictly for entertainment purposes" and the time spent preparing for your draft is generally time well spent.

There are variations on drafts in every league, whether it's a straight draft or an auction, or includes keepers, or the ever complicated restricted free agents.

After having already completed one draft, and in line to participate in at least two more, I offer up a few tips on the sleepers and other top-notch options for your team.

Running Backs

Unlike real football quarterbacks and defenses occasionally win games, but running backs win championships.

If you have a top three selection then you're in the clear, as you'll have a choice between Shaun Alexander, Ladanian Tomlinson, or Larry Johnson.

After that it's a bit of a crapshoot. Will Clinton Portis' shoulder hold up? Will Tiki Barber get enough goalline carries? Who is the next best back?

The best bets in my eyes are Steven Jackson, Lamont Jordan, Edgerrin James, and Rudi Johnson. Starting with one of those and getting a higher second tier back such as Willie Parker, Ronnie Brown, or Willis McGahee is a good basis for your team. Reggie Bush will also be highly sought after, but be careful because he may not get the goalline carries fantasy owners covet so much.

Who are the best sleepers in this position? I like Frank Gore from San Francisco, Chester Taylor in Minnesota, and possibly Ladell Betts, Portis' backup in Washington. If you're in a league without any Patriots fans, then grab Laurence Maroney late in the draft, but don't get him too early because it could be a wasted pick.

Wide Receivers

Everybody is going to want a Chad Johnson, Steve Smith, or Torry Holt, but receiver is the best place to find bargain guys that build the basis for a fantasy

see him out there after all the good things I've heard about him. I hear he's got the best hands on the team hands down. The biggest thing now, though, is that he doesn't rush it."

The first year head coach says he'd be happy with a late September return. Not surprisingly, Zappola envisions a somewhat accelerated timetable.

"The doctor says I'm ahead of schedule," reports the well-rounded 5-foot-8, 160-pound athlete. "If things keep going like they are and I stick to my work schedule, I think I've got a good shot at getting back for the first game (of the regular season)."

Looks like those trying to hold Zappolo back are going to have their hands full.

Still, the high energy teen does acknowledge he's a long way from where he needs to be to reclaim his two-way starting role on the gridiron as a split end and defensive back

"I've lost a lot of strength in my legs and really whole body, and that'll probably take a while to get all the way back," conceded Zappolo, who has tried to expedite this process by working out several times a week with the CHS Athletic Trainor.

There is also the matter of protecting the bones he broke, the tibia and fibula. These slender bones that run from the knee to the ankle are notorious for being easy to re-break. Zappola is anxiously awaiting his fitting for a "running brace"

Cohasset shortstop Nick Zappolo gets taken out by an Archbishop Williams base runner during action this past spring. Zappolo broke his leg on the play, but is fully recovered and ready to start his senior season.

Cohasset's Nick Zappolo charges past a would-be Scituate tackler en route to a 50-yard kick-off return during a football game played last fall. Zappolo is healthy and ready to get going in the South Shore League.

with padding in front that will allow him to resume contact sports.

"A few more weeks and I'll be set to start throwing myself around," noted Zappola with a gleam in his eye.

The coaches of the basketball and baseball teams can only hope Zappola makes it through to them relatively intact.

After taking his junior year off from the hardwood, Zappola plans to return this winter.

The spring season, though, is the one he really yearns for. Baseball is clearly Zappola's first sporting love. In fact, he has designs on continuing this career at the college level. He pulled off the remarkable feat as a sophomore of earning the Skippers' starting spot at shortstop, the busiest and arguably most important defensive position on the diamond, and appeared on the verge of bursting into stardom as a junior when he moved into the lead-off spot in the batting order.

That all ended, however, on April 25, the sixth game of the season, a home tilt versus Archbishop Williams, when a seemingly routine grounder back to the mound saw Zappola break hard toward second base looking to turn the double play. The throw from the pitcher sailed, forcing Zapollo to go high for the snare. His momentum carried his right leg just millimeters past the bag, leaving it completely vulnerable to the hard-sliding Archie's baserunner. Zappola's foot was pinned against the inner edge of the immovable bag when contact came above the ankle. The lower leg could bend only so far. Both bones snapped clean.

"I think everyone on the field heard it," recalled Zappolo. "It was a pretty bad moment. I knew right away it was something real serious. I think everyone did. It was really depressing learning that my season was over right there"

As tough a break (pun not intended) as this was for Zappolo, it was almost as tough for veteran head coach Al Gallotta and the entire CHS baseball program.

"I remember thinking how forward I was to seeing Nick just bust out and have a great junior year," said Gallotta, a former longtime head baseball coach at Archbishop Williams. "Losing him when we did was really a huge blow. He was the linchpin to our infield defense, and things just seemed to fall apart after his injury."

With Gallotta forced to juggle several players over the final two-thirds of the season, he saw his team go from averaging just over an error per game to well over three per contest. The team won just five games, falling well short of its goal to qualify for the state tourney.

As much as he hopes and prays for a healthy year from his senior leader-shortstop-lead off hitter, Gallotta is looking as forward as anyone to watching Zapollo on the gridiron this fall.

"Nick is a very fun player to watch," said Gallotta, a regular at every home game. "He's one of those tough little guys who loves to throw what weight he has around. He plays football with a real passion. You just love to watch those kinds of athletes."

Hopefully, the coach will have several chances to do that beyond the fall season.

Zappola lost his chance to show off for college baseball coaches not only in his junior season but also the summer Legion baseball season. He does not believe, though, that it's too late to make a strong impression, even though he'll likely have to choose his college before spring workouts get underway.

"I'm just really looking forward to getting back out there," said Zappola of the baseball diamond. "If I play the way I think I can, I'll just look to build on that."

One step at a time... quite literally.

New Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw gives his players some instruction before starting a drill at pre-season practice Wednesday. Afanasiw joins the Skippers from Duxbury, where he served as an assistant coach for nearly a decade.

"We're not trying to reinvent the wheel here. We are just trying to keep a good thing going."

The returning players believe the new coaching staff can take them where they want to go, which is to wrest the South Shore League title away from Abington and perhaps do what the Green Wave did last year, which was to win the Div. 5 Super Bowl title.

"I think we're going to be more focused this season," said junior fullback-linebacker P.J. McCaw, who expects to see a lot of action on both sides of the ball. "I like the coaching staff because I think they're going to make sure we're as focused as we need to be. Abington won the Super Bowl championship, and that's what we want this year. We need to do a better job of holding on to the ball. That hurt us in a couple of big games last year."

The Skippers finished 5-3-2 last season and fell short of the South Shore League crown that went to Abington, who then went on to take the Div. 5 Super Bowl title with a come-from-behind one-point win over Archbishop Williams.

Afanasiw and his players know the Green Wave is again the team they must defeat since Abington returns many of its top players, and they're hard at work to get ready for the start of the season in two weeks.

"It looks like the league title goes through Abington again this season, but that's what we will be shooting for," said Afanasiw. "The goals of this program will be high. I think that was part of our success at Duxbury, that we set those kinds of goals, and I believe we will do the same thing here and hope to be successful."

Junior tailback-linebacker Kyle Pinkus is one of the players who says the Skippers will be gunning for Abington this season, and believes the new coaching staff will give it the needed boost to take a run at the Wave and the SSL title.

"I like the youth of this staff and the different techniques they're teaching us," said Pinkus. "We need to have good chemistry and be more of a family, and I think we're going to have that. We'll be looking for revenge against Abington. We will have to give it everything we've got and have more heart than them if we want to be successful."

Afanasiw thinks he had many multi-talented players on his team and believes that will be a strength for his team this year.

"There are a lot of good athletes here, kids who play two or three sports, and I think that is a good thing for us," said Afanasiw. "I believe it is a good thing for kids to play more than one sport. I've seen kids who just play one sport the year 'round, and after two or three years, they just get tired of the sport and are burned out.

"I always encourage kids to play as many sports as they can. We have quite a few kids here who play two or three sports and I like that. Athleticism will be one of our strengths."

Afanasiw is watching to see how quickly his team comes together as a unit.

"The kids here have the ability to be good, it's just a matter of how quickly they jell under a new coaching staff," said Afanasiw. "We've got 10 or 11 players returning who started on either offense or defense. We will try not to play too many kids on both sides of the ball, but a few probably will."

championship.

Finding No. 1 receivers on teams is important; because somebody has to catch those passes, even if it's somebody you've never heard of.

If you have a late first round pick, and aren't enamored with any of your running back selections then go for one of the top receivers on the board. However, finding value at receiver in later rounds is the key to a winning season. Last year Steve Smith was not a first rounder and he led the league in receiving yards. Santana Moss had a huge year and likely wasn't drafted in most leagues.

Two of my favorite sleepers are Derrick Mason, and Terry Glenn. Mason is being reunited with Steve McNair in Baltimore, and has looked great in the preseason. Glenn, meanwhile isn't the No. 1 guy in Dallas anymore, but with Terrell Owens (whom I personally feel can poison a fantasy team in much the same way he can a real team) drawing extra attention, Glenn, coupled with his familiarity with Drew Bledsoe should blossom.

Another guy I like is Lee Evans from Buffalo, for the simple fact that I can't even name the other receivers in Buffalo yet. Also keep an eye on Ashley Lelie, who may be on the move from Denver, and heading somewhere like Philadelphia, or Minnesota to be the No. 1 guy. May be worth a late round pick if you have your draft before he goes on the move.

One last mid-round selection poised to have a big year is Plaxico Burress. With the natural maturation of Eli Manning taking place, Burress, is the one set to prosper the most from it. Especially since they established a bit of a rapport last season.

Tight Ends

I hate leagues with tight ends, because they are used so arbitrarily and so few are dominant impact players there is too large a disparity between the best and worst. But since they are common in most leagues my suggestion is this. If you can't get a top tier running back like the top three, or a good two back combo then you need to go after an Antonio Gates or Jeremy Shockey as early as you can reasonably afford to. This insulates you from getting stuck with some guy you've never heard of.

On the flip side however, if you do get a No. 1 back or solid combo, I would also suggest bypassing wide receiver help early and picking up one of those two players. You can afford it since you have a dominant running game, and those two are the closest thing to a sure thing you'll get with your receiving corps with the top wideouts off the board.

Quarterbacks

Generally I have always wanted a quarterback early on and worried about other things later, but this year in my first draft, the last spot on my roster I filled was for a signal caller. While it remains to be seen whether that turns out to be a tactical error, it is what it is.

This position this year is left with a great deal of question marks from Carson Palmer, to Daunte Culpepper all the way to Tom Brady. Getting Peyton Manning is certainly a boon for any team, given his obvious fantasy value but not being able to root for him honestly always makes me hesitant to pick him when other good players are also available.

Without Deion Brach who knows how Brady will fare this year as a fantasy option throwing mostly to tight ends and street free agents. Ditto that statement for Donovan McNabb too. Matt Hasslebeck has Alexander to score most of his team's touchdowns. Marc Bulger may or may not bounce back from an injury-riddled season and without passing "wizard" Mike Martz. There I just ticked off question marks for five of the top eight quarterbacks available.

My favorite, thus far is Eli Manning, who is coming into his own, has a running game to back him up and a solid corps of receivers to throw to.

If he's not available I also like Kurt Warner, because with the receivers he has to throw to he should rack up the points provided he can stay upright.

My sleeper pick though is Jake Delhomme. The Panthers are a run oriented team without any standout backs this year, and as a result with Steve Smith and Keyshawn Johnson split wide, could become a more pass first team.

Other potential sleepers include Steve McNair, Jon Kitna, and Jake Plummer, but first watch their body of work before considering a selection with one of these guys.

Kickers/Defense

Quite frankly these are ones you just get lucky with. Very few people drafted either the Bears, or Neil Rackers last year, and I'm sure whoever gets the top performers in this position will be nothing more than lottery winners.

So there you have it, a brief guide to this year's fantasy football season without spending $6.95 on a magazine that was printed in June, and already outdated.

Art workshops

The South Shore Art Center is offering two separate three-day workshops with painters and Florence, Italy-trained artists Frank Strazzulla Jr. and James Daniel. Strazzulla will offer a landscape painting workshop Monday through Wednesday, Sept. 11 to 13, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The workshop will focus on capturing the subtleties of atmosphere and light directly from nature. The class will be conducted outdoors. There will be a studio visit, a demonstration of pigment grinding and a discussion of gesso techniques. Strazzulla earned his master of fine arts degree from the Villa Schifanoia School of Fine Arts in Florence and trained at the Atelier Cecil/Graves. His work is featured in many galleries throughout the world. Strazzulla is a South Shore native and maintains a painting studio in Scituate.

Daniel's workshop also will meet Monday through Wednesday, Sept. 11 to 13, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The first two days will be devoted to drawing the landscape with pen and ink, and pencil. The third day will include the figure model, developing quick studies with red chalk (conte) and working up finished drawings with charcoal and pencil.

Daniel currently resides in Asheville, N.C., where he teaches at the Fine Arts League. He has studied with artist Ben Long, master Romano Stefanelli in Florence, Italy, and attended the Savannah College of Art and Design. He has learned the art of fresco and recently completed a "Communion of the Saints" fresco at St. Eugene's Catholic Cost of Strazzulla's landscape class is $350. Daniel's landscape and figure class is $295. Registration closes on Sept. 1. For more information, call 781-383-2787 or visit ssac.org.

One of the new crosswalk signs is installed on South Main Street near Depot Court.

Make way for pedestrians

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"I believe they do make it more obvious where motorists must give way to pedestrians."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

Considering "inattentive" driving is the pet peeve of the Cohasset police chief, then it should be no surprise that motorists do not necessarily yield to pedestrians in crosswalks.

Despite new crosswalks in the village, some motor vehicles are not stopping, specifically at the crosswalk nearest the Community Center, town officials say.

Therefore, the town has installed portable, reflective "crosswalk signs" in several of the new crosswalks.

After receiving complaints from Cohasset Elder Affairs, which is housed in the Community Center at 3 N. Main St., Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer proposed installing crosswalk signs there as well as the crossings near Pat's Barbershop and near Cohasset Hardware.

"There are similar signs in downtown Hingham and at the Derby Street Shoppes," Dormitzer said. "I believe they do make it more obvious where motorists must give way to pedestrians."

Dormitzer said the signs serve as reinforcement. "Cohasset Village has traditionally been a place where people are quite courteous to pedestrians."

The Department of Public Works is putting the signs out, he said.

This isn't the first time Cohasset tried crosswalk signs. In the early 1990s, the subject of crosswalk safety throughout town was a hot topic at Special Town Meeting. Portable signs were installed (they were larger than the ones currently in the village) around town.

However, they did not last long; some were hit by vehicles and damaged.

"I can't tell if they will or will not be hit but they are narrow and flexible, so hopefully they will last," Dormitzer said about the new signs.

Pilgrim Bank recently promoted Ralph Ferrera to the position of senior vice president, senior loan officer. As a senior executive at Pilgrim Bank, Ferrera will continue to focus his efforts on product development and sales within commercial markets.

Ferrera's promotion reflects Pilgrim Bank's commitment to providing quality service to its commercial clients. As senior loan officer, Ferrera is the decision maker providing fast turnaround capability.

"I've been working with business owners and developers throughout the South Shore for over 20 years now," said Ferrera. "We understand the needs of our clients and we are able to nurture that into long term relationships. That's what we are all about."

Pilgrim Bank, a full-service community bank based in Cohasset, caters to residential and commercial customers throughout the South Shore.

Pilgrim Bank names new loan officer

Francis E. Campbell, president and CEO of Pilgrim Bank, recently announced that Sandra J. O'Connor has joined Pilgrim Bank's mortgage division as a loan officer. A resident of Norwell, O'Connor is a residential mortgage specialist with more than 10 years of lending experience.

"Sandra has worked hard to earn her excellent reputation within the industry," noted Campbell. "She has built a loyal client base because of her willingness to take the time to understand each customer's specific situation and customize the loan that is right for them."

O'Connor noted, "There are so many new lending products available today, it can be confusing. I take the time to get to know my clients, and I help them understand all of the different loan options available to them. That way we can work together to find the product that best meets their needs."

Sandra J. O'Connor

Based in Cohasset, Pilgrim Bank caters to residential and commercial customers on the South Shore, offering a complete range of deposit and lending products such as jumbo mortgages and commercial real estate loans.

"I am very pleased to be a part of Pilgrim Bank," added O'Connor. "We strive to remain a personalized financing and lending institution. It is wonderful to work in an environment where the first concern is for the customer and the community."

O'Connor is a member of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Women's Club. She is also an active volunteer for Meals on Wheels.

New library schedule announced

The Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have announced that the library will be open to the public on Wednesdays beginning Sept. 5. Due to budget constraints, the library has not added more hours to its operating schedule, but simply shifted hours from the daily schedule to accommodate a Wednesday opening. In 1981, to meet the reduction in the library's operating budget caused by Prop. 2-1/2, the library board decided to close on Wednesdays. Now, at the suggestion of library director Jackie Rafferty, the trustees have decided to rearrange the library's open hours to include being open on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

By opening at 10 a.m. during the week rather than 9 a.m., and closing at 8 p.m. rather than 9 p.m., seven hours could be allocated for a Wednesday opening. "The library is such a busy operation that reducing hours any day is a difficult decision, but after evaluating library usage statistics and patterns we determined that opening a little later and closing a little earlier represented the best use of resources by providing public access to the library on Wednesdays," said Rafferty. "Currently, a few staff work limited hours on Wednesday doing technical work. We always have to explain to the many people who arrive at the door hoping to use the library that it's closed. It is hard to turn people away. We think that it is especially important children be able to use the library after school," Rafferty said.

Trustee chairwoman Stacey Weaver said that both the board and director are grateful to the library staff for supporting the schedule changes to make a Wednesday opening possible. She said, "Since the new larger library opened, usage has doubled, and we want to do our best to meet the needs of all our patrons. More usage also means increased maintenance, and we hope that in the next fiscal year Cohasset's budget will permit the library to be adequately cleaned and maintained."

Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 5, the library's hours will be Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. The library will be closed the Sundays of Memorial Day weekend and Labor Day weekend.

Betsy Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books, showers children's books on Charlie Blackinton, 9, as she has the Cohasset Public Schools over the past 17 years.

Buttonwood keeps school shelves stocked

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Betsy Detwiler has always had her heart in education. A former teacher turned bookstore owner, she understands the importance of exposing children to reading at an early age, and uses her shop, Buttonwood Books and Toys, to partner with local schools to help spread the reading bug.

Recognizing the tough financial situation facing Cohasset's schools, Detwiler said she is happy to provide myriad events to help ensure new books are always in the hands of Cohasset's children. Her store has been instrumental in bringing events such as pro bono author and illustrator talks, book fairs and weekly book groups for students to the schools.

"Education has always been an important part of my life. I believe there's a lot of teaching, if you will, in running a bookstore," she said, adding she taught both middle school English at Thayer Academy in Braintree as well as classes for students with learning disabilities at Hingham High School for many years.

Having the hands-on teaching experience, Detwiler, a Norwell resident, has been able to cater to the needs of South Shore schools. In Cohasset, she has a very good relationship with the teachers and librarians and is therefore able to customize book fairs to what is appropriate for the community. "We also do a 20 percent discount for the books we contribute to the fairs for that week," she said.

There are always plenty of deals for teachers in the school system as well, to ensure when it comes to purchasing reading materials, students and teachers are able to have the latest trends in children's literature available in the classroom.

In a small community like Cohasset, Detwiler said not only is she able to get to know school staff, she is able to work directly with the parents and students in the community. She said her customers seem to prefer shopping in a small, independent neighborhood bookstore where the interaction is one-on-one. For her, "The fun of that is the personal aspect of getting to know our customers."

Even though the store might be independent, that doesn't stop it from bringing nationally and even internationally known authors to town. "Cirque de Freak" writer Darren Shaw, a British writer whose upper elementary to middle school age level children's horror stories have caught on immensely in the United Kingdom as well as the United States, has paid a visit to Buttonwood, as has children's picture book author and Caldecott Award winner Eric Rohmann. Jane Dyer, an author and illustrator who has created many picture books has come to Buttonwood as well. "Buttonwood funds the author/student talks through our connections with the publishers," said Detwiler, which works out very well for Cohasset schools.

When it comes to helping teach the curriculum, Buttonwood doesn't shy away. "When teachers in the Cohasset schools have projects involved with biographies or historical fiction, we gather together and supply the book resources. We also stock books for the schools' summer reading lists," said Detwiler. She added, the schools recently had a very successful Read-A-Thon at the Osgood, Deer Hill and middle schools, for which the class that read the most books was able to choose a new book for its school library. "The schools asked Buttonwood to donate the books, and with the overall success of the event, it will now be an annual thing," said Detwiler.

Program for writers offered at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys and Grub Street, Boston's only independent writing center, will present Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a program for writers. The workshop will take place Tuesday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m. The topic will be characterization, and the instructor is Shellie Leger.

Vivid characters are often what readers recall first about their favorite books. Regardless of plot, setting, voice and the like, if characters don't compel, seduce, astonish or even repulse readers, they likely are not going along for the ride. In this seminar, students will receive an overview of creating characters through the use of detail. They will learn about both direct and indirect methods of characterization, and have an opportunity to practice using both. Writing samples of characterization will be provided as well.

Leger teaches writing at the Germaine Lawrence School in Arlington. She is currently completing a collection of short stories, and revising a novel. She has recently heard from Quick Fiction, a journal that publishes short-shorts, that her story "The Green Swing" is being considered for their August issue.

This is a free event, but reservations are necessary. Call Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665 to register.

Black sees red when it comes to White House

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Lewis Black doesn't have a stage persona. With the bombastic comedian, what you see is what you get. If a recent telephone interview is any indication, the audience for Black's September 1 show at the South Shore Music Circus is likely to hear Black go off on the Bush Administration, the Iraq War and anything else on the front page that day. Fox News devotees need not worry, though - Black's arrows aren't only aimed at their favorite political party.

"I don't find any solace in being a Democrat or a Republican," explains Black. "I've always said that if you need to belong to a team that badly then you should join a bowling league."

When the Republicans hear what he thinks about them, however, they may recommend that the stand-up comic, author and sometimes actor lace up his bowling shoes for the other side.

"The fact that this Administration continues to talk about how secure we are in airports is ridiculous. I'm in airports all the time and nothing has changed. Nothing is better now that it was before. They still have no real idea what to do to make airline travel safe. This White House has the most unbelievable ego in history. They like to puff out their chests and act like they're actually doing something when the truth is that they are not."

Black, 58, says he believes that the divide is clearer than what pundits label the Red and Blue states.

"The country is split. The Bush administration has worn us out. I still find it shocking, with all the talking we do about Iraq, that we went in there without a plan. And it wasn't just the Republicans. Neither party had any real plan. And now, the President has said we will stay in Iraq whether we want to or not. It is amazing. These times aren't just difficult, they are exhausting."

A graduate of the University of North Carolina with a Master's degree from the Yale Drama School and the author of more than 100 one-act plays, Black is thankful to the Bush Administration for one thing.

"I don't even have to write my own material for my act these days. The administration hands me punch lines faster than I can use them. Michael Brown goes from heading the Arabian Horse Association to running the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). What can I possibly add to that? It is already hysterical enough as it is."

Current events have always been featured in Black's comedy material, but in recent years they have begun to dominate it.

"The stories coming out of Washington fuel my live act these days. They used to account for maybe 20-30 percent of my material, but now it is up to 60-70 percent of my act. This has only happened under this president. This time in our history is even worse than the Nixon era. When John Dean comes right out and says that things are worse now than when Nixon was in the White House, people start to realize just how bad things have gotten."

Even if he see things getting better, Black plans to continue the ranting that has made him a regular on Comedy Central where he has his own show currently in development.

"I'm a comic and ultimately my beef is in being treated like an idiot. I look forward to a time when I can once again focus on the little stupid things that bother me and not just this administration."

(Lewis Black will appear at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Friday, Sept. 1. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.)

Move over, Rocky.

Philadelphia, the city of Brotherly Love, may not be big enough for two sports legends.

"Invincible" begs the question: Is it possible to make a "Rocky"-themed sports movie based on someone whose NFL career consisted of one big play?

If you're the makers of "Invincible," this year's Disney sports movie, you can try.

Directed by veteran cinematographer Ericson Core ("Daredevil") and written by newcomer Brad Gann, "Invincible," which has no connection to the 2001 Werner Herzog film of the same name, features Dorchester native Mark Wahlberg as real-life Philadelphia Eagles player Vince Papale, a legend on the mean streets of Philly.

Back in the bad-old recessionary 1970s, Vince was a substitute schoolteacher, bartender and backlot football player who responded to an open call for tryouts for the beleaguered Philadelphia Eagles in 1976 and — Holy Cheese Steak! — made the cut and played a few seasons.

Fledgling player Vince Papale (Mark Wahlberg) is put in his place by the visiting team.

Wahlberg gives Vince genuine street cred, if not substitute teacher cred. He's a loser whose wife (Lola Glaudini) leaves him in opening scenes, taking everything. Vince's hard-pressed old man (Kevin Conway) is a blue-collar worker on strike. "I never liked her," he says when told of his daughter-in-law's departure. Vince's 30-something childhood friends have had their dreams crushed by real life and want to live through his.

His coach Dick Vermeil (Greg Kinnear) has his own problems, beginning with a wife (Paige Turco) who acts as his conscience and appears to have another part of his anatomy in a vise.

"Invincible" is one of those oddly featureless films that uses pop standards to bump up the emotion. But frankly I had hoped I had heard the last of Bachman Turner Overdrive, Grand Funk Railroad, Edgar Winter, Ted Nugent and Elvin Bishop.

The film blandly charts Vince's attempt to make the team, not get cut during grueling summer practice sessions and to be accepted by his fellow players, who consider him with some validity an amateur and a freakish sideshow act.

Between bone-crushing hits on the playing field and slo-mo scenes of other football action, a recurring element in the film is the castrating, farewell note his ex-wife left. Vince masochistically keeps the note under a towel in his locker and re-reads it to get his blood flowing before a practice or game.

At the same time, we see the coach, who stuck his neck out for Vince, try to save his job as the Eagles start the new season with a string of losses. If his canned locker room pep talks are any indication, the coach is in big trouble.

Elizabeth Banks, another Massachusetts native, is quite appealing as a fellow bartender who falls for Vince. But "Invincible" is so generic, it's hardly there. Somehow, I don't think, "Win one for the boys in the neighborhood" is going to replace "Win one for the Gipper" in movie history.

Rated PG. "Invincible" contains sports-related violence and profanity.

New Releases

ACCEPTED (C+)

Hitting the books isn't easy, but the coeds in "Accepted" — a harmless and occasionally funny film — are totally stoked. They're a group of slackers and high school weirdos who, one way or another, kissed their futures goodbye. Denied acceptance elsewhere, they tidy up a mental institution and create South Harmon Institute of Technology, a university of their own. It's been years since the antics of "Animal House" brought cinematic justice to dorm life, and it's going to take more to do it again. Still, "Accepted," for all its faults, earns a passing grade. Rated PG-13 – Chelsea Bain

BOYNTON BEACH CLUB (B)

Susan Seidelman's "Boynton Beach Club," or "Adventures in Geezer Sex," is a niche movie of a different stripe. If not a great film, it is a pioneering work aimed at the growing generation of active retirees. Featuring a veteran ensemble cast, the film takes viewers to Boynton Beach Bereavement Club and answers the question: Is there sex after the death of your spouse of 40 or 50 years? Happily for the pharmaceutical industry, the answer is yes. (Not rated)

HOUSE OF SAND (A-)

In Portuguese with subtitles

Rated R

Grade: A-

An epic depiction of a battle of wills, featuring "trading-places" performances by mother-daughter actors, the Brazilian effort "House of Sand" is unique. It's 1910 and Vasco de Sa (Ruy Guerra), forcibly moves his pregnant, much-younger wife, Aurea (Fernanda Torres), and her aged mother, Donna Maria (Fernanda Montenegro) to the middle of Brazil's northern desert. The film charts Aurea's lifelong struggle to leave the area and seek a better life somewhere, anywhere more settled. "House of Sand" is an example of magical-realism at its most minimalist, an at-times thin tale about the passage of time and the way we lay down roots almost involuntarily. In Portuguese with subtitles. (Rated R)

THE ILLUSIONIST (B)

Eisenheim (Edward Norton) is an early 20th century, Austro-Hungarian mesmerist and magician who seems capable of unbelievable feats of sorcery — including perhaps even raising the dead on a theater stage. While the empire is ablaze with talk about this mysterious magician, Eisenheim is also reunited, on stage, with his childhood love, Duchess Sophie (Jessica Biel), who is now engaged to be married. When Sophie and Eisenheim are discovered meeting illicitly, and Eisenheim is threatened by Chief Inspector Uhl (Paul Giamatti). Shot in sepia tones and beautiful to look at, "The Illusionist" is stylish, often riveting, and its cast is addictively watchable. But it has its flaws: How good is its final "twist" if we've lost interest in the film? (Rated PG-13)

TRUST THE MAN (B+)

In the uneven but frequently raucously funny "Trust the Man," writer-director Bart Freundlich makes a credible bid to be a new Woody Allen. The film follows two New York couples: Rebecca (Julianne Moore) and Tom's (David Duchovny) marriage melts down, caused in part by his out-of-control sexual urges and her unexplained sexual indifference; and Tobey (Billy Crudup) and Elaine's (Maggie Gyllenhaal) relationship suffers due to his obsession with mortality and his — argh — refusal to commit. It's nothing new in terms of romantic comedy plots. The comedy in "Trust the Man" springs as it should from dialogue, characters, situations and performances, and these things work often enough to keep you seated and laughing. (Rated R)

ZOOM (B+)

Rated PG

Similar to last year's "Sky High," "Zoom" unearths superheroes' secret lives. Here, kids grow up on the tales of "Captain Zoom," a comic book about the exploits of teenage superheroes. What they discover is that Zoom, known to mortals as Jack Shepard (Tim Allen), and his team were assembled by the United States government to fight evil. But after an attempt to accelerate the group's powers backfires, Jack's older brother Connor a.k.a Concussion (Kevin Zegers) turns to the dark side and annihilates everyone but Zoom. Now, 30 years later, Concussion embarks on a journey to kill Zoom who now has to train a squad of social outcasts to defeat Concussion. (Rated PG) – Tenley Woodman

Ongoing

THE ANT BULLY (B+)

Undersized preteen Lucas (Zach Tyler) is known by the ants of the colony in his suburban front lawn as "The Destroyer" because of his tendency to lash out at them after he has been bullied by kids at school. But due to a spell cast by ant wizard Zoc (Nicolas Cage), Lucas is reduced to ant size and taught to be less human and more ant. Yes, it's another one of those character-building animated films. "The Ant Bully" aspires to be the "Lion King" version of "Microcosmos," the 1996 documentary with the bug's-eye point of view. (Rated PG)

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

Some of New York's finest stare skyward in disbelief on Sept. 11, 2001 in "World Trade Center."

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

HEADING SOUTH (B+)

Set in late-1970s Haiti, "Heading South" explores the relationships among the middle-aged women who come to a seaside resort each summer to have sex with Haitian beach boys. Wellesley professor Ellen (Charlotte Rampling) reigns as queen bee of this colony, until nervous, sweet Brenda (Karen Young) arrives. Both women are besotted with Legba (Menothy Cesar), one of the young Haitian men. In this place where love is never meant to complicate the arrangements, rivalry and tragedy ensues. In French, Creole and English with subtitles. (Not Rated) - Stephen Schaeffer

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

JOHN TUCKER MUST DIE (D)

LITTLE MISS SUNSHINE (B)

"Little Miss Sunshine" is a dysfunctional-family road picture featuring the Hoovers (Steve Carell, Toni Collette, Greg Kinnear, Alan Arkin and Paul Dano), who trundle into a beat-up yellow VW Microbus for a trip to Los Angeles where preteen daughter Olive (Abigail Breslin) will compete in a Little Miss Sunshine Beauty pageant. Comic hijinks and quirkiness with a capital "Q" ensue. (Rated R)

MIAMI VICE (A-)

In this ultraviolent fever dream, Michael Mann's famous, MTV-bred TV cops Sonny Crockett (Colin Farrell) and Ricardo Tubbs (Jamie Foxx) travel from Miami to Havana, Haiti and South America as they plan to take down Jose Yero (John Ortiz), a drug dealer with a reputation for "killing everything," and the white supremacist thugs he uses to do his dirty work. This film version of the trend-setting 1980s series remains a rock-music-driven celebration of boys' toys. But it's intoxicatingly photographed and among the most ravishing crime thrillers I have seen. (Rated R)

MONSTER HOUSE (B+)

Who could have guessed trick-or-treating could be this much fun in July? This Halloween-set animated film is a haunted-house movie about puberty. DJ (Mitchel Musso) believes he is responsible for the death of his mean, scraggly toothed neighbor, Nebbercracker (Steve Buscemi), who lived in an old, run-down wood-frame house. Soon, Nebbercracker's house itself is calling DJ on the phone, making evil noises and trying to swallow him and his friends. To figure out how to "kill" the house, the boys enlist legendary gamer Skull (Jon Heder), master of "Thou Art Dead." (Rated PG)

NIGHT LISTENER (B)

Set in the 1990s, Gabriel Noone (Robin Williams) uses his life and everyone he knows or meets for his hour-long radio stories on his show "Noone at Night." After hearing from Pete (Rory Culkin), a dying boy with AIDS, Boone travels to Wisconsin to meet him. But once he gets there, Noone can only get as far as Donna (Toni Colette), a social worker who has adopted the lad. Noone soon suspects she impersonates the boy over the phone and has created this fantasy for attention and sympathy. The film is genuinely creepy, thought-provoking and resonant of the recent JT LeRoy and James Frey phony-memoir scandals. (Rated R) -Stephen Schaeffer

'A Million Reasons' to fight for the disabled

Local author shares his story

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Alan Labonte lives a good life. He has a nice home on Border Street, a loving wife, Lora, and a good job as a member of the faculty at Boston University.

But there was a time not too long ago when Labonte found it a struggle to keep a positive outlook on life. After relocating his family to Cohasset from the western part of the state to take on a new job at the law firm of Hutchins & Wheeler, doctors informed him he had contracted multiple sclerosis. He was fired from his job just six months later.

While it took years to come to a resolution, in the end Labonte, now a Scituate resident, says it was worth it, as his case set a new legal precedent, protecting the rights of Americans with disabilities. Today, he is happy to be able to share his story with others, through his newly released book, "A Million Reasons," published by Cohasset-based publishers Hot House Press.

Labonte is able to share his story with others for one reason: he turned down a $3 million settlement offered by Hutchins &

Youth arrest

Teen charged in gun threat

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police have arrested a 14-year-old boy in connection with a threat to bring a gun to school that occurred at the middle-high school last fall.

The incident was reported Sunday, Oct. 16, 2005 after a schoolteacher discovered a threatening note attached to the sign in front of the school. A teacher and students had met at the school that morning to carpool to Boston.

"Residents may not realize that we continue to investigate," Chief James Hussey said about the incident that occurred 10 months ago. "Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Det. Garrett Hunt did a great job in developing this case and bringing closure to this incident."

Hussey explained police received a tip a couple of weeks ago while investigating an unrelated vandalism incident.

"The detectives developed information received which led

School bells ring Sept. 5

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The lazy days of summer are coming to an end and students and staff at Cohasset's three schools are gearing up for their first day back. For students in grades one through 12, the first day back will be Tuesday, Sept. 5, and administrators say there are many exciting things to look forward to this year.

Osgood School — The start time at Osgood will change by five minutes this year and the day will begin at 9:10 a.m. Cohasset's youngest students, which includes kindergarten through grade two, will end their day at 3:10 p.m.

"All students need to do is bring a smile and a little enthusiasm and things should be good."
— Janet Sheehan, Osgood principal

Students new to kindergarten this year will come for orientation either Tuesday, Sept. 5 or Wednesday Sept. 6 with their parents. "They'll go into the classroom and see where their cubbies will be," said Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, and the first day of school on their own will be Thursday, Sept. 7. All other students will have their first day Tuesday, Sept. 5.

Students may purchase lunch for $2.25. On the first day of school, chicken nuggets and a dinner roll or a turkey sub with corn and oven fries will be served along with apple slices. Wednesday, students may purchase pasta with meat sauce

The new police radar trailer shows a car is traveling on Route 3A by Shaw's Plaza at 45 m.p.h. in a 35 m.p.h. zone. Police purchased the device with grant money.

Radar trailer picks up speed

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Motorists who travel northbound on Route 3A this week by Shaw's Plaza have undoubtedly seen how fast they are going.

And if they were exceeding the posted 35 m.p.h. speed limit, they were reminded of that fact by the new state-of-the art, police radar trailer.

Police Chief James Hussey said the new, $8,500 radar trailer was purchased through grant money from two sources, the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, which rewarded the town for participating in various traffic safety initiatives such as the "Click it or Ticket" campaigns, and through a Community Policing grant from the Executive Office of Public Safety.

Hussey said not only does the display on the trailer tell drivers how fast they are going, but if they are speeding a blue light also flashes.

"The device will also record data – the number of cars and the speed they are going," Hussey said.

He explained the trailer would become a familiar sight along 3A and other critical areas of town. "The point is to reduce the number of accidents and citizen complaints about speeding," he said.

Hussey hopes the trailer will make motorists aware they are speeding and get them used to slowing down. He expects the trailer to stay in the same location for a week to 10 days.

The trailer was placed on Route 3A near its intersection with Beechwood Street because that stretch of highway is one of the most accident-prone areas in town. Route 3A at lower King Street is another problematic location, Hussey said. However, the chief said the unit would also be placed on residential streets where traffic issues, like speeding, are

Bikers beware of N. Main crossing

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Last Tuesday (Aug. 22) a woman riding her bike along N. Main Street at about 12:26 p.m. tried to ride across the new grade crossing when the front tire got caught in the tracks causing her to fall off and hit her head.

She was wearing a helmet but still suffered a head injury and was transported to the hospital, Chief James Hussey said.

He explained the new tracks are at an angle to the roadway making accidents like this possible.

The MBTA has installed a temporary, illuminated sign alerting bicyclists to the danger and telling them to get off their bikes and walk them across the tracks.

Hussey, who praised the MBTA for its responsiveness, said permanent signs on both sides of the tracks will need to be installed.

STAFF PHOTO/MARY FORD

The MBTA has installed a temporary sign on North Main Street telling bicyclists to walk their bikes across the tracks.

Credit card fraud

A Holly Lane woman reported receiving credit card bills with charges of upwards of $12,000. Not only did the woman not make the purchases, but she never applied for the credit cards that were used, police said.

Chief James Hussey said the matter is under investigation but he stressed that residents must be extremely careful when disposing of bills that contain personal information. People should also destroy unwanted credit cards that come in the mail.

Hussey said in this case, the woman received credit cards in her maiden name in the mail and did not apply for them. He said there could be as many as seven cards that were being used fraudulently in her name.

In order to prevent identity theft, he said it is also very important that people do not give out their social security numbers to anyone.

Hussey also explained that personal bills and documents should be shredded before they are put into recycling. "Paper no longer goes into the landfill," he noted. "There are lots of scam artists out there looking to create a false identity."

$100 bills stolen

Police responded to a call from a S. Main Street resident at 10:14 p.m. last Monday (Aug. 21) about a car being entered.

Chief James Hussey said the car was left unlocked at the end of the driveway. He said the victim reported two $100 bills were stolen from the glove box.

"Always keep your car locked," Hussey said. "Don't make it easy for someone. Many crimes are crimes of opportunity – if you lock your car, chances are you won't become a victim."

Potential scam

Police are investigating reports of a man — who presents a $50 bill for a purchase, and then claims he received incorrect change — trying to "scam" a local establishment.

Henry's Root Beer on Pleasant Street has reported that the same man comes by about every two weeks and argues about money.

Hussey said the suspect is about 5 ft. 7 ins. tall, has black hair that is balding in the middle. At the most recent incident that was reported last Wednesday (Aug. 23), the suspect was wearing a blue muscle shirt (tank top), and white shorts. He drives a white Ford pickup.

Hussey wants local businesses to be on the alert and report any such incidents to the police. He explained the way the alleged scam works is the suspect pays with the $50 bill and then claims his change is $20 short.

Apparently the same man has appeared at Henry's Root Beer at least twice before this recent incident.

Woods fire

Last Wednesday (Aug. 23) in the woods off Doane Street, priority was given to a fire that kids started so most of the youthful perpetrators were able to escape into the woods.

Police responded to the area at 9:29 p.m. after receiving a call about teens potentially drinking. At the scene police observed a campfire. The fire department was called to put out the fire.

One Rockland youth was apprehended and is being summonsed to court on charges of minor possession of alcohol and for an illegal fire.

Boat bumped

The driver of a vehicle pulling a trailer with a boat on top was cited for having expired trailer plates.

At 12:32 p.m. last Thursday (Aug. 24), several callers reported a boat had fallen off a trailer in the middle of Beach Street. There were no injuries.

Police had the trailer towed and cited the driver.

House egged

Police are not going to press charges against youths who egged a house on Heather Drive at around 10 p.m. last Thursday (Aug. 24). Initially the officers were going to summons one of the kids to court.

But after determining these youths had no prior police involvement, their (and their parents) willingness to pay for the clean up of the house and perform community service work under the guidance of the police department, led the victim and police to handle the matter without court involvement, Chief James Hussey said.

Arrest made in school gun threat

us to a potential suspect," he said. "I cannot say enough about the detectives' continued diligence on this case."

As it turned out the youth — whom police believe is responsible for the threat — was not involved in the recent incident of vandalism. However, police followed up on a tip and developed evidence that pointed to the teenager as a suspect in the gun threat.

"There are no other suspects and this closes that case," Hussey said.

The boy, whose name is not being released because of his age, faces charges of making a "bomb/hijack" threat causing serious public alarm; threatening to commit a crime; and disturbing the peace.

"We will not stand for that type of activity and will pursue every lead," he said. "Those involved will be prosecuted." Hussey added the charges facing the youth are serious.

"I cannot say enough about the detectives' continued diligence on this case."
— Chief James Hussey

Hussey declined to provide details of the evidence or investigation other than to say the note discovered last Oct. 16 contained language that included references about bringing a gun to school.

Hussey confirmed the boy was a student at the middle-high school.

He said arrests have been made in three of the four threatening incidents that occurred at the middle-high school in 2005. A different boy was responsible for two of the other incidents.

"Everyone worked together to help us solve three of these cases," said Hussey, who said he wanted to thank the public and the school administration for their help.

The incident involving the gun threat caused a big commotion, Hussey said. After that incident, Principal Joel Antolini said all backpacks, purses, and lunch bags would be subject to searches.

A 13-year-old student was arrested last fall in connection with bomb threats on Sept. 26, 2005 and Oct. 18, 2005.

The incident that still remains unsolved occurred May 11, 2005 when a member of the school faculty who was opening up the building for the day found a threatening note along with a bullet outside the middle-high school.

a problem.

The unit is rechargeable and does not require a police officer to be present when it is in use.

"We are very excited about the new radar trailer," Hussey said. "From my own experience I have found these devices make me think that I might be going too fast.

"We think it will have a positive effect on people's driving behavior."

Special fall Town Meeting date set

The fall Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13. While selectmen had discussed moving the meeting to a weekend, in the end they agreed to keep the meeting on a Monday night. However, this year the meeting will begin at 7 p.m. instead of 7:30 p.m.

On a related note, Selectman Rob Spofford asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, to draft two articles for the Special Town Meeting Warrant. One would change the town's bylaws to amend the date for the annual Town Election, to allow both the town election, any override elections or other elections which need Town Meeting approval, to be held on the same day. The second would change the start time of the Annual Town Meeting, always held on Saturday mornings, to begin at 9 a.m. rather than 10 a.m.

'Puppies' found in dumpster

Lovers Lane

Lighthouse Lane on Government Island could indeed be Cohasset's own version of Lovers Lane. Police answered a call at 1:06 a.m. last Saturday (Aug. 26) about a couple "fornicating" in the open. When the officer arrived, the officer observed a motor vehicle leaving the area but no one else was around.

Chief Hussey said it is illegal to have sex in public, which would be considered lewd and lascivious behavior, which is an arrestable offense.

Baby 'puppies'

At just after 8 a.m. last Saturday (Aug. 26), a caller reported what appeared to be puppies that were thrown in a dumpster off Diab Lane but were still alive.

The officer at the scene also reported the animals appeared to be young puppies. The Animal Rescue League and the MSPCA were notified.

However, all agencies were cancelled after Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy arrived and determined the puppies were baby raccoons. A plank was put into the dumpster so the little raccoons, who may have tumbled in looking for food, could make their own way out.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY LABOR DAY

Hello Cohasset. Happy Labor Day Weekend to all. Make it a fun weekend, stay safe and get ready to send our kiddos back to school next week with great memories of the summer. I still cannot believe that it is over, I feel like it just began.

We have two new little princesses who have arrived and their families are beside themselves with joy. Congratulations to you all and enjoy these beautiful little girls.

LITTLE ANGEL

On April 11, 2006 a new little angel came into the world, Shannon Grace MacLeod. This beautiful little baby is the daughter of Ross and Liz (Walker) MacLeod, Phoenix, Ariz. Shannon's weight at birth was 7 lbs. 11 oz. Beaming grandparents standing ready to spoil little Shannon with lots and lots of love are "Mac" and Ginny MacLeod, Cohasset and John and Betsy Walker, Holliston. Ross, a Navy pilot, and recently promoted to Major, is a graduate of St. Paul's School, Boston College High School and Boston College. Liz, Ross, and Shannon will be moving back to New England, to Connecticut, in the fall, as Ross becomes a full-time civilian (he plans to stay in the Air Force Reserves). He will be flying for Southwest Airlines.

BABY GIRL

Julia Maeve Bianchi, was born on Monday, Aug. 7, 2006. She was born at 2:29pm. She was 7 lbs., 12 oz. and 20 inches. Her proud parents are Kara and Scott Bianchi. Both sets of excited grandparents live in Scituate: Susan and Richard Pope and Jane and Steve Bianchi.

Congratulations, all!

FALL BASEBALL

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to introduce a 9-, 10-, & 1-year-old fall baseball league for interested players (birthdates between May 1, 1994 and April 30,, 1997). The league will be an in-town program with games being played on Saturday and Sunday afternoons (Saturdays through the first several weeks of September; soccer travel on Saturday afternoons starts in late September, and the program will try and schedule around those games so players interested in both sports can play).

The league may also play a weeknight game as well. The league is still in the process of setting schedules so as to minimize conflicts with other sports during the week. The number of teams, games and exact start times will be determined once an accurate count of registered players is obtained. Registration forms are available at: CYBSA.net. Registrations must be received by Sept. 1st so the league can determine number of teams, order and receive uniforms and set the schedule. The cost of the program will be $75. If you are interested in coaching, please let the league know that as well. Any questions, please contact Liam O'Connell at (781) 383-9538 or via email at liam.oconnell@hklaw.com

HELPING SWIMMERS

The Cohasset High School Swim and Dive Team will be having a Lobster Fest and silent auction fundraiser on Friday, Sept. 8th at Atlantica from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. This Team, which was re-established last year and is a joint team with Scituate High school-- is not yet included in the Cohasset Athletic budget and the Cohasset side of the Team is privately funded. Last year this team came in second in the Patriot League with 18 swimmers qualifying for Sectionals and 10 swimmers qualifying for, and competing, in the State Competition. The Lobster Fest dinner includes clam chowder, lobster, mussels, barbequed chicken, corn on the cob, Caesar salad, rolls and watermelon. A cash bar will be available. Tickets are currently on sale at a cost of $35 for the lobster and $25 for "chicken only" and can be obtained by contacting Mandy Mahoney (383-9812) or Brenda Regan (383-0454). Gather a group of friends to celebrate the arrival of fall and support this team while enjoying a fabulous feast at Atlantica!

JV FOOTBALL SUPPORT

The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to ask all Cohasset Football Alumni for their support to fund Junior Varsity Football. The Cohasset Gridiron Club awards thousands of dollars in scholarships to our outstanding student athletes who plan on attending college. However, this year, the Gridiron Club has been asked by the athletic department to fund Junior Varsity Football. In order for the Gridiron Club to maintain its scholarships, as well as to support the coaching staff in everything that they do, and now to fund Junior Varsity Football, the club has dedicated a page in its Football Program Book that will be coming out in September of this year, to honor those former football players who would like to see their name once again in the spot light.

So, for a $25 contribution to the Cohasset Gridiron Club, your name, the year that you graduated from Cohasset High School and the position that you played, will be showcased in our Gridiron Football Program. A thank you for your consideration in helping the Gridiron in their efforts to keep a winning tradition alive and well in Cohasset Football goes out to all who help. If you would like to help, please send a check for $25 made out to the Cohasset Gridiron Club, P.O. Box 223, Cohasset, MA 02025, along with your date of graduation and the position that you played. If you would like to call, please contact Al Snowdale at 781-383-9131. If anyone would like to advertise in the book this year please call.

With a cast of 39 women's roles ranging in stage age from 20 to 55 plus one younger girl, there are large and small roles alike. With so many roles available, the Dramatic Club is optimistic that many new actors will participate in this production. Auditioners are asked to come with a prepared with a 1-2 minute monologue or to be prepared to read from the script. Show dates are Nov. 10, 11, 12, 17 and 18. For more information please contact Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net.

Wheeler. By accepting, he would have also been agreeing to a non-disclosure clause, which would have prevented him from telling his story. Instead, he chose to take a risk and follow his case through the legal system. "I'm sure they couldn't believe it," said Labonte about turning down the money.

Labonte's story begins in 1991. He was the Executive Director for Hutchins & Wheeler, with more than 100 employees under him. He would ride the commuter boat into the city from Hingham, and on his walk into work, he began to notice he would trip fairly often. "The streets in Boston are pretty hazardous, but I was tripping more than usual," he quipped, adding he began noticing he wasn't moving as fast as he previously had, and was always at the end of the pack when coming off the boat and walking up the street.

Labonte decided he should go to the doctor and asked a partner at the firm whom he would recommend. Labonte soon made an appointment with Dr. James Wepsic at New England Baptist Hospital. During testing, the doctor touched the bottom of Labonte's foot, but his toes did not clench. Instead, one went straight up, which is the first sign of a problem with the central nervous system.

Labonte was then sent to neurologist Dr. Edward Wolpow at Mount Auburn Hospital. After testing confirmed his suspicions, Wolpow gave the news to Labonte in July of 1991 — he did in fact have multiple sclerosis.

According to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, MS, as it is more commonly known, is thought to be an autoimmune disease that affects the central nervous system. The central nervous system consists of the brain, spinal cord and the optic nerves. Surrounding and protecting the nerve fibers of the central nervous system is a fatty tissue called myelin, which helps nerve fibers conduct electrical impulse. In MS, myelin is lost in multiple areas, leaving scar tissue called sclerosis. When myelin or the nerve fiber is destroyed or damaged, the ability of the nerves to conduct electrical impulses to and from the brain is disrupted, and this produces the various symptoms of MS.

"Ironically, they recommended I consult an attorney, so I did."
— Alan Labonte, author

Labonte didn't wait to tell the partners at the law firm about his condition. "I told them the best way to get the information was to talk to my doctor, and I gave Dr. Wolpow permission to answer any questions they had, so they would be advised about my ability to work," he said. After having the discussion with Wolpow, the partners seemed helpful and said they would support him in any way they could, even offering a flexible work schedule. "Those were beautiful words, but they never became a reality," he said.

In the midst of finding out about his illness, Labonte's father passed away in November of 1991. He took some time off work to travel down to Florida for the funeral, and other than that, had not asked to take any other time off nor had he put in for any special accommodations since finding out about his illness. In January of 1992, one random Monday morning, he was called down to one of the partners' offices and told his time at Hutchins & Wheeler had come to an end. He was fired "for cause."

"Ironically, they recommended I consult an attorney, so I did," which is when he met David Rapaport. He brought the severance agreement to Rapaport's office and after Rapaport questioned him about the circumstances surrounding his being fired, realized Labonte had been given no warning, either written or verbally, which meant they had a strong case against the company. "I was so devastated at the time, the last thing I wanted to get into was a legal battle, especially against a large firm of attorneys," said Labonte, but he decided the issue was too important to let go.

Labonte first filed a complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. The representative he spoke with agreed he had a strong case, and Labonte decided he and Rapaport would take the case to Superior Court. They filed on Sept. 11, 1992, "a date that meant nothing to be until recently," he said.

Without a job and collecting disability, Labonte had limited means with which to pay Rapaport. However, the attorney felt strongly enough about the case that he agreed to work for the cost of services only, and receive one-third of the settlement, whatever that might be in the end. "It was a pretty big risk on his part," said Labonte.

The case went before a judge and Rapaport argued they had a right to a jury trial. While it had never been done before with a disability case, a major case came down just in time, which gave them the right. "We got our jury, but it took a year or two to get it scheduled."

The case was tried for the better part of two weeks at Suffolk Superior Court. There were 12 jurors assigned to the case and two alternates, both of which decided to stay on until the end, just to see how things turned out, even though they were not required. It took three days of deliberations, but the jury decided unanimously in his favor. He was awarded back pay and front pay, which was approximately the equivalent of five years pay plus 12 percent interest. He was also awarded funds for emotional distress and punitive damaged. All told, he was awarded roughly $3,250,000. "I think everyone was in shock. It was a tremendous moment," he said.

Hutchins & Wheeler appealed the decision to the Massachusetts Supreme Court and it took another couple of years, but it upheld the decision of the lower court. However, ultimately the case went back to Superior Court where it was decided Labonte should receive less than the $3 million he had first been awarded. In the end he still received a "substantial amount," but to Labonte, it was more about the principal of the matter than the money.

"A Million Reasons" author Alan Labonte stands against a tree outside his Border Street home. After turning down a $3 million settlement from the Boston Law Firm of Hutchins & Wheeler, which fired him "for cause" six months after being diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, Labonte won a legal battle which set precedent for Americans with disabilities.

"A Million Reasons" both chronicles the journey of Labonte's legal battle as well as his personal struggles. While the initial shock of losing his health, his job, and his father hit hard, he turned those negative experiences into positives. He was offered a consulting job with South Shore Hospital, which was followed by his enrolling at Boston University in the school's doctoral program. That led to his being offered a position on the BU faculty. He also spent time traveling to Bosnia during wartime, delivering much-needed antibiotics, all while his legal battle was going on. "When I went over there, everything about my life paled in comparison," he said, which gave him a new perspective. "My problems became like nothing."

It took nine years, but with the help of Brock Bower, Labonte's co-author, "A Million Reasons" came to fruition. If nothing else, he hopes by sharing his story it will both serve as a warning to companies that there are consequences for discrimination, and as an inspiration for those who have been affected by discrimination. "With a pile of manure and a few seeds, you can grow a rose. I certainly was in a pile of manure," he said. But look at him now.

Alan Labonte, author of "A Million Reasons," will be holding book signings in and around the South Shore in the coming weeks. Wednesday, Sept. 20 at 6:30 p.m., he will be at the Scituate Town Library, where he will both give a talk and answer questions as well as sign books. The program is being held in conjunction with the Front Street Book Shop of Scituate. He will also be conducting book signings at dates to be announced at the Barnes and Noble at Derby Street in Hingham and Borders in Braintree. Signed copies of the book are also available at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset. For more information on Hot House Press, please visit its Web site at www.hothousepress.com.

World War II soldier loved Cohasset summers

Road by Common honors William B. Long

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

William B. Long always enjoyed spending his summers in Cohasset. An avid outdoorsman, leaving his "winter residence" on Marlboro Street in Boston to spend time at his 90 Beach St. home was a welcome respite in the country.

His sacrifice is remembered daily as residents drive up the road named in his honor by the Town Common.

But Long, just like many others of his generation, enlisted in the army at an early age and had his life cut short during World War II. At the age of 26, Long was killed in action on Aug. 26, 1944, which was 62 years ago last week.

William B. Long

William B. Long was one of four children born to William Long, who was President of the Boston Stock exchange, and his wife Harriet. Born in 1918, he attended Milton Academy and Harvard College. His brother Ed, a Nichols Road resident, remembers his older brother of two years being an avid outdoorsman, enjoying hunting and fishing. In fact, he said one year during college, Long spent the summer in Montana tagging wild birds for one of the federal government's wildlife projects.

After graduation from Harvard in June of 1941, Long married Dorothy Storrer, whom he had met as a teenager, as she too summered in Cohasset. He worked for the Audubon Society for a time before enlisting in the Army. He became a member of the Headquarters Battalion, 28th Infantry, an element of General George S. Patton's command.

Long's battalion was moved to Brest in northwest France, on the western tip of the Brittany peninsula, where the Germans had a large submarine base. Long was killed in action in the town on Aug. 26, 1944, ironically the same day General Patton had jubilantly informed his superior officer, "Dear Ike: Today I spat in the Seine!"

Long was the fourth Cohasset man to have lost his life up to that point in the war. His sacrifice is remembered daily as residents drive up the road named in his honor by the Town Common.

Fallen servicemen honored around town

William B. Long is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset. The town lost seven other men during World War II, who have all been memorialized with squares, parks, and roads in town including:

- Everett F. Studley: intersection of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street.
- Allen A. Buffum: Square at Beechwood St. & So. Main Street
- Norman Todd: Road intersects with Beechwood St., and a memorial park is located at their intersection.
- Robert E. Jason: Road at the Common
- Howard R. Gleason: Road to Yacht Club from Margin St.
- Perry H. Johnson: Square at Beach St. & Atlantic Ave.
- David H. Parker: Square at King St. & Beechwood St.

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery, including Long's mother, Harriet.

Roughly 498 men and women from Cohasset served during World War II from 1941 until the war was declared over in December 1946. Cohasset has memorialized all of its service men and women from the "Greatest Generation" by listing all of their names at Veterans Park at Cohasset Harbor. A book of Cohasset servicemen's names was presented to the National Monuments Commission at the dedication of the WWII Memorial, on May 29, 2004 in Washington, D.C.

Harbor fee hike shouldn't create waves

But impact on lobstermen is a concern

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town is looking for ways to ensure it can cover the cost of services being provided. To that end, selectmen have been looking at raising fees in various areas and those using the harbor could be the next to see an increase.

"I'm sorry, but if you can afford a 60-foot sailboat, you can afford an extra $180."
— Selectman Rob Spofford

At Monday's meeting, board members agreed fees should be raised at the harbor to cover more of the department's operational costs, and felt an increase should be done all at once, rather than phased in. Selectmen said the next step is for the Harbor Committee to review the harbor's revenue sources and current fees, seek public input, and then make a recommendation.

Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons attended the meeting and said to date, harbor-related revenues for this calendar year total $78,488. However, the full cost of operating the department, including fringe benefits for employees and debt service for fiscal 2007, is $127,260. This means fees would need to be almost doubled to bring in the $50,000 necessary annually to make the department self-supporting.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said a resident with a 60-foot boat currently pays a $360 mooring fee. If mooring fees were upped by 50 percent to $9 per foot, that same resident would then pay a $540 mooring fee (an extra $180).

Selectman Rob Spofford said increasing fees might be a good idea.

"I'm sorry, but if you can afford a 60-foot sailboat, you can afford an extra $180," he said.

However, Spofford noted increasing fees might adversely affect lobstermen, which is something to think about. He questioned whether the fees could have two tiers: one for recreational boat use and another for commercial use.

There are roughly 30 active commercial fishermen out of the 225 boats in the harbor, Gibbons said.

Resident Peter Pratt noted raising fees for commercial fishermen might be something the board wants to think about, because without them, the town would not have received "one penny of federal funding" for its last dredging project, completed in 1999.

"The commercial fishing fleet is 100 percent responsible for getting us funding and we should support the ongoing thriving of those vessels," he said. Gibbons noted the town needs dredging in the harbor again.

Dormitzer said he agreed with Pratt. "People want to recover money to be able to cover the costs associated with running the operation, but we don't want to run the fishermen out," he said.

Gibbons said she has three boats, two of which have engines in the $20,000-$25,000 range, which need to be maintained, as well as the harbormaster's office which needs repairs and a new paint job. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said harbor fees should cover maintenance and repairs. "We should add it all up and take it to the Harbor Committee," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said billing for moorings takes place in January, which means any increases in fees would hit this fiscal year.

Town to meet head of MBTA

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer told the Board of Selectmen Monday, the town will meet with MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas. Dormitzer, along with Town Manager Bill Griffin, and Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan will meet with Grabauskas at his office in Boston Wednesday, Sept. 6.

"We have Senator (Robert) Hedlund and Representative (Garrett) Bradley and to some degree Kerry Healy to thank for this meeting," said Dormitzer.

The town and the MBTA are in the midst of a dispute resolution process. Currently the town and the authority, which is building the new Greenbush commuter rail line, are butting heads about the number of parking spaces to be constructed in the municipal parking lot behind the shops on South Main Street, and have entered into a phase two dispute resolution process.

Both parties would like to work out an agreement, but the MBTA has said it would prefer to have meetings in executive session, which it feels would be more productive without the public and the press present. The Board of Selectmen has not agreed to meeting in executive session. The meeting on Sept. 6 will hopefully bring the town one step closer to coming to a resolution.

Dormitzer said he is not happy to be attending the meeting without other members of the board present, but said the meeting will be exploratory only and not a meeting under the mitigation agreement. He added he has heard that even at the highest level of the MBTA, officials think the town is asking for something it shouldn't have, and he hopes this meeting will help clear up any misconceptions. He said he hopes this meeting will lead to a full meeting with the entire board, as is required under the mitigation agreement. "We will still have to have a full meeting with the board to move anything forward," he said.

Search is on for new fire chief

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln will retire at the end of October and the search for his replacement is well under way. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has received a total of 11 applications for the position, some of which were from current employees of the town.

"In reality, there are roughly six or seven (candidates) you'd really want to talk to," said Griffin.

Griffin is in charge of making the appointment, and said he plans on forming a team to assist him in the interviewing and evaluating of the candidates, just as he did when hiring the new harbormaster and director of elder affairs. He said he would like to have a fellow town manager/administrator and a fire chief from another community serve on the team, as well as Director of Finance Michael Buckley, whom he said he relies on for his historical perspective on the town. He said he would also welcome suggestions from the board.

"We are at a critical stage for the department," Griffin said, adding it will be under a lot of scrutiny in the coming months as every budget is going to be gone through line item by line item. The fire department is the first one on the agenda. He said every candidate that comes in for an interview will be given information from the town's benchmark report to get their view of the situation.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil asked Griffin to provide each member of the board with a copy of all 11 résumés to allow them to provide feedback. Selectman Ted Carr said someone with budgetary experience would be a huge benefit for the town.

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school next week, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news about Greenbush.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., in Hingham Square above the Upper Crust. News items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street: just hand the envelope to whomever is behind the cash register and say it's for the Mariner.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: mford@cnc.com

FAX: 781-741-2931

In person: at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Upper Crust.

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043

Sports news email: mgoodman@cnc.com

Try to have your news to the Mariner by Tuesday afternoon for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better. We accept obituaries and letters to the editor until noon, Wednesday. If letters and obituaries come by email we can stretch that deadline a few hours.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; or staff reporter Samantha Brown, at 781-741-2935.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Well thought out policy on busing needed

To the Editor:

Editor's note the following letter to School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy was also sent to the Mariner for publication.

Our neighborhood has about 20 children from 10 families that are subject to the new busing fee offered as an option to walking to school. With school starting next week, we have yet to hear of any enhanced steps the school and town are taking to keep children and drivers safe as pedestrian traffic increases. Rose Hill and other neighborhoods are located directly off Route 3A, which is a state highway that has been consistently vilified in the Mariner recently for being the most dangerous stretch of roadway in town. Yet, in order to follow pedestrian protocol, kids would have to cross the highway at least twice each day to walk facing traffic, all without sidewalks, crosswalks, or crossing guards. I shudder to think about the devastating impact on families and the town that will result from the first incident involving a child along that highway, never mind the liability the town and the state would face as a recent letter in the Cohasset Mariner articulated.

Financially, the option is available to pay for busing. Of course, for families along the Route 3A corridor, unlike for other neighborhoods within the 2-mile radius, it isn't really an option, but a necessary mandate in order to protect their children's safety. Low-income families can have the fee waived, and for some the fee isn't a problem. But for many, up to $540 in unanticipated and unbudgeted expenses is a significant burden, a circumstance I'm sure the School Committee and town can appreciate.

As an aside, I believe many fees are supposed to be capped at an amount not to exceed the cost of providing a service. Since much of the costs are fixed to provide mandated transportation on the same buses to those outside the 2-mile radius, the only true cost for calculating fees should be the marginal cost of additional stops (fuel) and perhaps some pro-rata share of maintenance costs based on the additional mileage. In addition, it doesn't make much sense to charge additional fees to parents of multiple children when the marginal cost for the second child is zero. I haven't seen the calculations supporting the $180/pupil fee, but I suspect the total cost to parents would be lower using this calculation.

I strongly encourage the School Committee, town safety officer, and state agencies to develop a well thought out policy that is good for the long term and is practically and economically sensible and fair. First and foremost, this means protecting the safety of our children, as well as drivers through and around town. In addition, it should include provisions for obvious problem areas such as the Route 3A corridor and recognize that under the current program, the fees are not truly optional, but a mandated necessity. As development planning continues, the town can also work with the state to encourage the addition of sidewalks and cross walks along 3A and other congested roads.

Vibration mats being installed

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Workers are in the process of installing vibration mats under the rail bed between Smith Place and Pleasant Street.

Important Notice: – Last week we talked about how the rails are welded into long sections and dragged along the right of way on rollers to their final resting place. Today, Friday (Sept. 1), the Beechwood railroad crossing will be closed for most of the day as the rails will be dragged to their final location north of Beechwood Street. During this time traffic will need to use Pond St. as a temporary detour. We have asked the contractor to post appropriate signage to redirect traffic while this work is underway.

Spring / Pond Streets – The crossing at Spring Street (near the Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building) will be reopened on a temporary basis shortly. Even though the tracks have been installed and there will be no permanent crossing here this crossing will be used on a temporary basis when work starts on Spring / Pond Street intersection. The contractor is building a temporary roadway at the crossing that will be used during this time. As we mentioned before, when the work at the end of Pond Street is complete this temporary crossing will be closed forever.

Vibration Mats – This week the contractor is installing vibration mats under the rail bed between Smith Place and Pleasant Street. They will also be installed at other places along the right of way. This week's photo shows this work in process. So what are vibration mats, you ask? That's a great question. To answer it we need to back up quite a bit in time. About 4 or 5 years ago, while the Greenbush line was in its early planning stages the MBTA and their contractor at the time, Sverdrup performed some very interesting tests. The MBTA actually did test borings every 300 feet along the rail line, from one end to the other. The purpose was to find out what type of soils existed under the ground all along the right of way. Some soil types are known to transmit vibration well; some soil types actually reduce vibration transmission. So knowing the soil type is a very important factor.

Once the MBTA knew the type of soil at each point, they could calculate the vibration impact that the train would cause to all abutting buildings. This calculation also includes factors, in addition to soil type, such as distance of each building to the tracks and the speed of the train at each location. Once the vibration impact is determined at each building, it was compared with vibration standards developed by the Federal Rail Administration. Any building with high level train caused vibrations was eligible to have a vibration mat installed under the tracks to attenuate those vibrations. This technology is quite new, but it is the only way to reduce the vibration impacts.

The vibration mats are installed over a layer of asphalt that is laid on the ground. In techno-speak, the idea of the mats is to decouple the train vibrations from the ground. The net result to the building owners, where the mats are applied should be less vibration at their building.

Secrets of my academic success

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I disliked school so much as a kid that I'm hard pressed to explain why going back was so exciting every year. I think it's a little like getting caught up in the hype of a presidential election. The guy always turns out to be an idiot, so during the next campaign the prospect of replacing him with a different guy seems even more exciting, and so on into perpetuity.

For me the new school year brought with it that same deluded optimism. This year I would take lots of notes, and write neatly. I would buy a thick new lined notebook — the one with the colored dividers — to hold all my totally legible notes. Even a born slob like me, whose bedroom looked ransacked on its best day, would salivate every September over these little tabs you could write "Biology" or "Social Studies" on, and the new eraser that wasn't hard as an old cheese, and the gleaming, long pencils that hadn't yet been gnawed or sharpened down to the hilt. It was the clean slate effect. The new start. "This year I'll be smart," I would think. "And popular. Yes, and athletic. Behind my back people will call me 'cool', and 'funny', and everyone will have long forgotten about that incident with the band saw."

Of course by October everything would have gone to heck in a handbag — my notes would be smudgy and few, my reputation as a dweeb and my inane nickname ("LengSmell") would have carried over undisturbed from the previous year. But in spite of the irresistible pull of mediocrity, or perhaps because of it, I savored those cool, dry, crisp September mornings when the adrenaline rushed and all roads ahead looked passable.

There were two notable exceptions. For some reason I objected to first grade from the get-go. Maybe it was the long day. Maybe it was the severe lack of trucks and play-dough. Whatever it was prompted me to lock myself in the bathroom every morning for about the first three months. The only way my poor mother could get me out and onto the bus was to promise me a gerbil when I got home. You should have seen the rodent ecosystem I had going by December. I was eventually bought out by the Stone Zoo. It pains me to think of it now, because I can't imagine myself going to those lengths to placate my own child, but in the end Mom's light touch worked. I went semi-willingly the rest of that year and for the next six years, right up until the point where everyone went insane.

As we know, the vast majority of 13-year-old children are pure evil. Evil to each other. Evil to their teachers. There are marines returning from extended tours in Falluja who wouldn't last two weeks teaching Junior High School. Having been raised to love my neighbor, or at least to not stab him in the back and eat his liver, I was like a marshmallow at a Boy Scout jamboree. Only one thing got me through that ordeal, and that was Loves Baby Soft. To this day I can remember exactly how that perfume smelled, wafting out of all the pink sweaters and feathered hair. Intoxicated every morning by a hormone cocktail that would have put a dead elephant in heat, I can't honestly say what attracted me more, the girls or the fragrance. Had you sprayed Loves Baby Soft on a drinking fountain I probably would have considered asking it out. LBS was the only incentive I had to stay in school that year. To get me into BC High would have taken a thousand very good-smelling hamsters, I can tell you that.

As I write on this clear late summer morning there's a little chill in the air and a flutter in my heart. My doctor says it's the early stages of West Nile Disease, but I prefer to think it's due to back-to-school season, when a new lunch box, a purple velour shirt, and a blend of powdery florals, wood and animal scents are enough to send you off to a place you'd really rather not go to. God speed, young students. May all your notes stay organized, your protractors uncracked, and may your outlook always remain September fresh.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset with three future 13-year-olds. He will pay for calling them evil. Oh yes, he will pay dearly.

HEALTH NOTES

The facts about staph infections

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Staph is medical quick speak for staphylococcus aureus bacteria. This ancient bacterium is common (many people have some living on their skin all the time), but when it enters the human body, usually through an open cut or break in the skin, it can cause infection and trouble anywhere in the body. Staph infections tend to be pus-producing. Common minor (or relatively minor) skin infections caused by staph include:

- Folliculitis — Infections of hair follicles that cause itchy white pus-filled bumps on the skin (often where people shave or have irritations from skin rubbing against clothes)
- Boils — Infections deeper within hair follicles that leave large, frequently red inflammations (often on the face or neck)
- Sties — Infection of the follicle surrounding the eyelashes, causing a sore red bump in the eyelid
- Impetigo — The infection children often get around their mouths and noses that causes blisters and red scabby skin
- Abscesses — Infection characterized by pus and swelling that can occur in the skin and in any other organ.

Staph infection is a leading culprit behind cases of food poisoning, and can be to blame for larger life threatening conditions, such as Toxic Shock Syndrome (TSS), pneumonia, bone infections (osteomyelitis), mastitis in nursing mothers, endocarditis (infection of the inside of the heart), and bacteremia (blood infection). People who are otherwise healthy typically do not usually become severely ill from staph infections, but those at special risk, who have weakened immune systems, include:

- persons with chronic illnesses, such as diabetes, cancer, lung disease, kidney disease, or HIV/AIDS
- people with various skin conditions
- the elderly
- newborns
- people recovering from major surgery
- injection drug users (especially those who reuse needles)
- people whose immune systems are weakened due to steroid use, radiation therapy, cancer treatment, immunosuppressive medications
- women who are breastfeeding

Health care professionals can determine that staph (and not some other bacteria) is the cause of an infection by taking a culture (a swab from the infected site). Once staph has been diagnosed, the provider will prescribe antibiotics that are known to work on that specific strain of the bacteria. These antibiotics (usually either pills or creams applied to the infected body part) typically kill the bacteria and cure the infection within a week or two.

Hospitals are working to stamp out staph infections, in part because the majority of hospital patients fall into at least one "at-risk" category, but also because drug-resistant strains of staph (versions of the bacteria that aren't killed by one or more of the antibiotics that are commonly used to treat staph infections) are becoming an increasingly common threat. Over the past 50 years, some staph bacteria have become resistant to antibiotics, including the commonly used penicillin-related antibiotics. These resistant bacteria are called methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus, or MRSA; resistant (i.e.) to methicillin and other common antibiotics such as oxacillin, penicillin and amoxicillin. Staph infections, including MRSA, occur most frequently among persons in hospitals and healthcare facilities (nursing homes and dialysis centers) who have weakened immune systems. When acquired by otherwise healthy persons who have not been recently hospitalized or had a medical procedure (dialysis, surgery, catheters), they are known as Community Associated-MRSA infections.

These drug-resistant strains of staph do not cause worse or different infections than non-resistant strains, but they can be much harder to treat because the most common (and easiest to use) antibiotics may not be effective. People with resistant staph infections may require hospitalization to receive antibiotics through an IV or by injection.

Because improper use of antibiotics can help produce resistance to drugs, making future infections much harder to treat, the American Medical Association recommends that patients:

- follow the directions for any prescription exactly
- take all of the medicine prescribed (even if one feels better after only a few days)
- never save old, leftover prescriptions for future use
- never take anyone else's prescription antibiotics

Other preventative measures are careful treatment of all skin conditions, including wound care after trauma or surgery, IV drug users taking precautions when injecting, and people with special risk factors being attentive to early symptoms of staph.

The chances are low of your contracting a staph infection from visiting the home of someone with a staph infection. You would need to make direct contact with the infected area via an area of broken skin of your own (wound, insect bite, injury, etc.). Staph is not an airborne disease.

Little League pitching arms

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Maybe it was a reaction to the distressing Yankee five game sweep of the Red Sox. Or maybe it was the failure of Cinemax to offer a Shannon Tweed marathon on cable. Whatever, I wound up last week doing something I vowed I would never do again — watching the Little League World Series on the tube.

I haven't watched the little fellas hit the ball, throw the ball and catch the ball for some time, not since that 14-year-old told everybody he was a 12-year-old and threw a no-hitter for his Bronx team before an investigatory safari penetrated the wilds of the Dominican Republic to find his real birth certificate.

I must admit I was a little doubtful about this year's series, too, particularly when the Saudi Arabian team showed up with a 13-year-old first baseman who was 6-foot-8. But the only time I saw him at the plate he struck out so I guess there was no hanky panky there, unless Al-Qaeda was setting us up.

The Japanese team roused my suspicion, too, when their relief pitcher, a youngster with the delightful name of Go Matsumoto, began throwing the ball at 77 miles an hour, which the announcers assured me would be the equivalent of 100 miles an hour in a Yankee-Red Sox game.

Matsumoto is the poster boy for the latest Little League controversy. It's not the fact that he can throw that hard, it's the fact that he does and does so frequently. What does throwing the equivalent of 100 miles an hour in the big leagues do to a 12-year-old arm?

Little League rules specify that the kid pitchers are limited to six innings a week in the regular season. In the post-season, however, they can throw 18 innings a week. But if they pitch four innings or more in a game, they have to take two days off and cannot pitch in consecutive games.

Last year, Nathan Lewis, 12, pitched six innings for the Vista, Calif., Little League team in the West Regionals when he felt a pop in his left arm. Despite the pain, he went on to pitch a game in the World Series before he was found to have broken and dislocated the growth plate in his left shoulder.

Nathan, now 13, was back playing baseball this summer but he experienced a sore arm after pitching two innings and his father, Jim, thought it necessary to take him to see a doctor. "If I had to do it over again, my kid would not have been a pitcher," said Jim Lewis.

The Lewis' story is told in a new book, "Little League, Big Dreams," by Charles Euchner.

"The statistics all point to the amount of pitches as the number one factor (in arm injuries)," said Glenn Fleisig of the American Sports Medicine Institute. "A lot of arm injuries are showing up in teenagers and 20-years-olds. We're seeing the number of overuses add up to injury down the road."

In the face of this controversy, Little League is experimenting with new rules starting next year under which pitchers will be limited to 85 pitches in one game and a pitcher who throws 61 pitches or more in a game cannot pitch again for at least four days.

Then let him throw 100 miles an hour!

and a dinner roll or a ham and cheese sub. Green beans and peaches will also be served. Taco meat served over chips with lettuce, cheese and tomato is on the menu for Thursday, as is a tuna sub. There will also be mixed vegetables and rice, and pineapples. Friday will of course be pizza day and students may purchase either cheese or pepperoni. There will also be bologna sandwiches available as well as a garden salad and fresh fruit. Each meal offers a choice of milk (whole, low fat white or chocolate) or 100 percent fruit juice.

For parents dropping students off for school, the same procedure will be followed with students being let out at the playground end of the building. Sheehan said there will be a team of staff there to welcome students, with another team ready to welcome those arriving by bus.

On the bus, there will be bus monitors in place, helping ensure everyone is pointed in the right direction. "It helps allay the fears of students and parents on that first day," said Sheehan.

While there are no new programs taking place at the Osgood School this year, Sheehan says they are very excited to be entering into year two of both the integrated preschool and full-day kindergarten programs. This year, there will be 138 children in kindergarten, in eight kindergarten classes. There will be six full-day classes with between 18 and 20 children in each class and two half-day classes with 12 children in each. "We're welcoming an additional 40 kindergarten students, which is our largest class yet," said Sheehan.

The school will also be entering year two of its "Discovering Justice" and "Reading Street" programs. Discovering Justice is for grades one and two and teaches important lessons about democracy and Reading Street teaches reading skills. "We look forward to seeing how the grade one teachers view last year's kindergarteners," in terms of reading skills, she said, as last year's were the first to have full-day kindergarten. "Their level of readiness will be interesting to see."

There will be new staff at Osgood as two retirements left open spaces for one second grade teacher and one speech and language teacher. With the increase in kindergarten students, there will be one additional kindergarten teacher, who will be paid for with the tuition paid by parents for the program. The school will also be hiring a new school nurse. While some positions still needed to be filled at the beginning of this week, "We'll be ready and rearing to go by day one," she said.

Sheehan said as always, she and the staff at Osgood are looking forward to the first day of school and expect things will go just as smoothly this year as they have in years' past. "All students need to do is bring a smile and a little enthusiasm and things should be good."

Deer Hill — The day for Deer Hill students will be the same this year as it was last year. Students may be dropped off between 8:20 a.m. and 8:30 a.m., with the school day beginning at 8:30 a.m. Dismissal will begin at 2:30 p.m. and will be completed by 2:40 p.m.

Parents who drive their students to school may drop off children in the morning at the back door to Deer Hill (as always). "We are assigning additional staff to the drop off and pick up by car area since we figure more parents will be handling transportation this way, given the newly implemented bus fees," said Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley. "We will be providing parents with laminated papers on which their child's name will be printed. We ask that parents hold up this paper in the windshield or passenger's side window as they pick up their child, to expedite the dismissal of students and to prevent cars from backing up onto Sohier Street," he said.

As always, if cars begin backing up into the street, parents are allowed to park in the front parking lot and enter the school to pick up their child. "This will help keep both the parents and the children safe when there is excess traffic," he said. Gauley said it is important to note, if parents choose to pick up their children at the front of the building, they must park their cars in the lot and go into the building to get their child, as students will not be allowed to walk through the parking lot on their own.

Lunch for students at Deer Hill is $2.50. Tuesday's menu includes chicken nuggets and a dinner roll or a turkey sub with corn and oven fries will be served along with apple slices. Wednesday, students may purchase pasta with meat sauce and a dinner roll or a ham and cheese sub. Green beans and peaches will also be served. Taco meat served over chips with lettuce, cheese and tomato is on the menu for Thursday, as is a tuna sub. There will also be mixed vegetables and rice, and pineapples. Friday will be pizza day and students may purchase either cheese or pepperoni. There will also be bologna sandwiches available as well as a garden salad and fresh fruit. Each meal offers a choice of milk (whole, low fat white or chocolate) or 100 percent fruit juice.

Penelope Brindley, a math teacher at the high school, tries to untangle the computer cords while setting up her classroom. Brindley will be teaching trigonometry, pre-calculus, statistics and Algebra I this year.

There will be a lot to look forward to on the first day of school, as it will usher in the start of some new programming. "We are very excited about the expansion of our EMC^3 program during the school day," said Gauley, adding the program allows the school to integrate enrichment opportunities for students during school hours and gain instruction time in the core academic areas. EMC^3 programs include applied engineering, studio art, band, chorus, chamber music, Great Books (a discussion group of high quality literature), Renzulli (the software program designed to meet the learning styles and interests of individual students as these students complete a self-chosen project), math league (math competition), creative writing, reading lab and math lab (additional support for students who need such support in reading and math). Other EMC3 programs will also continue after school such as the school's drama club, possibly Destination Imagination and others, he said.

Middle-High School —The middle-high school will keep the same schedule this year, beginning its day at 7:30 a.m. and ending at 2 p.m. While in the past the newcomers in the sixth grade have come to school earlier than grades seven through 12 on the first day of school this year, High School Principal Joel Antolini said everyone will come to school at the same time.

While all three schools will be affected by the implementation of bus fees this year, students at the high school who are old enough to drive themselves to school must pay to park their vehicles. Antolini said on the first day of school, all students will be given a number for their designated parking spot and it will behoove everyone to make sure they park in that same space every day. "During the second week of school, if someone is parked in the wrong space, the vehicle will be towed," said Antolini. Students will be reminded the first row closest to the steps is reserved for teachers.

Antolini said parents who will be dropping students off should use the main driveway. "It will be crowded," he said, but added the schools have not asked for any help directing traffic from the police department just yet.

There will be 15 new staff members at the middle-high school this year, and at the beginning of this week, Antolini said there were still openings for high school French, middle school Spanish and French, middle school technology and engineering and middle school science teachers.

At the high school John Wands will be the new head of the English department, William Fish will teach English, and Peter Afanasiw and James Willis will teach social studies. At the middle school, Matthew Dunegan and Karen McInnis will teach English, Kate McAlarney will teach grade six math and Katherine McCarthy will teach social studies.

There will be some new school-wide staff as well as Theresa Conroy will come on board as the school's new librarian, Nicole Triolo will be the new school psychologist, Andrea Lampi will serve as the school's behaviorist and Michele Henderson will be the new school adjustment counselor/social worker.

While there will be no new programs at the middle-high school this year, Antolini said he is hopeful through parental support the school will be able to form a new technology and engineering lab. He said the school is also hopeful it will be able to expand its Advanced Placement program. While the school does not have the staff to expand the program, he said he has been looking into online courses.

Antolini said he and the staff at the middle-high school are looking forward to the first day of school. "There is always some nervous anticipation at the beginning of the school year, but it will be great to have the kids back in the building. It's kind of like spring training with the Red Sox, you're always full of high hopes and the excitement is very thick."

The first day of school is Tuesday, Sept. 5. More information on all the schools can be found on the district Web site at www.cohassetk12.org. Links to each individual school can be found on the district's main homepage.

AP scores put Cohasset on top

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The scores are in and Cohasset High School juniors and seniors did very well on this year's Advanced Placement tests.

At the Aug. 23 School Committee meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh reported 23.2 percent of Cohasset's grade 11 students and 22.7 percent of its grade 12 students took AP exams this spring, and 89 percent of those who took the tests received a score of three or higher, which means they are eligible to receive college credit for the course taken.

"This is certainly something we're very pleased with," said Walsh.

Cohasset offers AP courses for juniors and seniors, which prepare them to take the AP tests. However, taking AP courses in school is not a prerequisite to taking the tests, as students also have the option to take an independent study prior to taking the tests. This year, of the 37 exams offered, Cohasset had students taking tests in eight categories.

AP tests are scored on a scale of one through five, with five being a perfect score. Walsh said she was extremely pleased with the scores received in U.S. History. Of the 16 students who took the test, 12 received perfect scores and four received a score of four, which gave Cohasset a 100 percent passing rate in that category. Scores for the biology exam stood out as well, as 10 of the 17 participants received a perfect score.

While the numbers are good, School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said the district should be aiming for more participation. He added the scores being received in Cohasset are comparable to Lexington and Weston — the two highest performing districts in the state — in terms of passing rates.

"Some districts have 90 percent participating," he said, adding he had been told roughly 40 percent of Cohasset's eligible students took the tests this May and he would like to see that number increase.

In order to offer more AP courses, Walsh said the district would need to add more teachers to its staff, not to teach the AP courses, but the courses that lead up to them.

Town welcomes first-class officer

Finished top of academy class

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This has been a dream of mine and I worked hard to get here. I will continue to work hard for the town of Cohasset."
— Officer Regan Steverman

Upon the recommendation of Police Chief James Hussey, Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed Regan Steverman as the department's newest officer.

"This is a great opportunity for us to be able to hire such a good quality officer," said Hussey, who introduced Steverman to selectmen Monday.

Steverman was born and raised in Scituate and Hussey said her family goes back generations in the town. Hussey said he was impressed with Steverman's character from the start. "She put herself through the police academy in 2005 without a job waiting, and she ended up at the top of her class. We've got a real winner here," he said.

Steverman is a 1996 graduate of Scituate High School and a graduate of the University of Vermont, which she attended on a track scholarship. Hussey said she remains active on sports teams and continues to run, meaning she is in top shape for her role on the department.

Hussey said Steverman had previously served on Sciuate's police department as a part-time intermittent officer, then transferred over to Cohasset to become a permanent intermittent officer. She is now a full-time officer, taking the place of officer Rick Grassie, who recently retired.

Steverman thanked the board and the town for the opportunity. "This has been a dream of mine and I worked hard to get here," she said. "I will continue to work hard for the town of Cohasset."

Steverman said had a lot of motivation to become number one in her police academy class because she was the only one out of 52 who did not have a job waiting for her when she finished.

Hussey said is the first time the police department will be fully staffed in his two years as chief, which should reduce overtime.

Steverman and the town's other new officer, Chris Goodman, who came on board this May, will switch off working the 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the 4 p.m. to midnight shifts for the first few months. Hussey said it is likely both will end up on one of those shifts permanently.

Library to be open on Wednesdays

The Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have announced that the library will be open to the public on Wednesdays beginning Sept. 5. Due to budget constraints, the library has not added more hours to its operating schedule, but simply shifted hours from the daily schedule to accommodate a Wednesday opening. In 1981, to meet the reduction in the library's operating budget caused by Prop. 2-1/2, the library board decided to close on Wednesdays. Now, at the suggestion of library director Jackie Rafferty, the trustees have decided to rearrange the library's open hours to include being open on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

By opening at 10 a.m. during the week rather than 9 a.m., and closing at 8 p.m. rather than 9 p.m., seven hours could be allocated for a Wednesday opening. "The library is such a busy operation that reducing hours any day is a difficult decision, but after evaluating library usage statistics and patterns we determined that opening a little later and closing a little earlier represented the best use of resources by providing public access to the library on Wednesdays," said Rafferty. "Currently, a few staff work limited hours on Wednesday doing technical work. We always have to explain to the many people who arrive at the door hoping to use the library that it's closed. It is hard to turn people away. We think that it is especially important children be able to use the library after school."

Trustee chairwoman Stacey Weaver said that both the board and director are grateful to the library staff for supporting the schedule changes to make a Wednesday opening possible. She said, "Since the new larger library opened, usage has doubled, and we want to do our best to meet the needs of all our patrons. More usage also means increased maintenance, and we hope that in the next fiscal year Cohasset's budget will permit the library to be adequately cleaned and maintained."

Beginning Tuesday, Sept. 5, the library's hours will be Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. The library will be closed the Sundays of Memorial Day weekend and Labor Day weekend.

Lunch prices

The School Committee voted at its Wednesday, Aug. 23 meeting to increase the "Type A" lunch at the middle-high school by 25 cents, effective this school year. The increase is an effort to try to make the food services program more self-supporting. Type A lunches consist of meals, which have three of the five food groups, and currently cost $2.50. There will be no change in the cost of the lunches at Deer Hill or Osgood.

Donations accepted

The School Committee accepted $40,000 in donations at its Wednesday, Aug. 23 meeting. The largest donation was given by the PSO in the amount of $33,500. The School Committee thanked the many parents in the community that contributed to the PSO donation through participating in various fund-raisers. An anonymous donation in the amount of $5,000 was donated to the Osgood School with the request it be used for playground equipment. A second anonymous donation was given in the amount of $1,500 to the Deer Hill School.

Are you ready for some soccer?

The CHS girls soccer team scrimmaged Hingham on Wednesday and Rockland the day after to get ready for the upcoming season, which begins next Friday in Holbrook.

Coming off a season in which they were one goal away from qualifying for the state tournament, the Skippers return a majority of their key players and will be aiming to get back to the postseason. Next week, the Mariner will preview the upcoming season.

A first class ride

The Buick era at CHS ends with graduation of Aidan

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

When it comes to the auto industry, Buicks are hardly considered the crème of the crop.

When it comes to Cohasset High, however, it's a different matter entirely.

The 12-year long Buick era, which will be marked by excellence and class both on and off the various fields of athletic pursuits in the minds of virtually all with a longtime connection to Cohasset High, came to a close in grand fashion this past spring when Aidan - the youngest of David and Paula Buick's five sons - led the Skippers to a Division 3 state lacrosse championship.

"I had a tear in one eye that day because we won the championship, and a tear in the other because I knew I was watching the final game by a Buick at Cohasset High," noted Skippers head coach Stu Curran. "That's just a wonderful family. David and Paula are remarkable people, and the apples didn't fall far from the tree with their five boys."

Curran has coached only the younger two Buicks, Conor (Class of '04) and Aidan, but he observed the elder three - Jamie (Class of '98), Devin (Class of '99) and Ronan (Class of '01) - as a longtime referee in the sport.

"All of those kids did in the right way on the field, and they're carrying that on as adults," continued Curran. "They do whatever they can to help, just like their parents. David and Paula have done so many things behind the scenes for the soccer and lacrosse programs. David was out there lining the fields just about every weekend for so many years. They don't talk about it, though. They're all quite humble."

This familial humility, no doubt, is drawn at least somewhat from the modest beginnings of David and Paula. The couple emigrated from war-torn Belfast, Ireland to the mid-west U.S. in 1977. Paula, just 20 at the time, was a nurse; David a social worker.

The couple eventually found their way to Boston, both landing jobs at Mass General Hospital, then finally to Scituate to begin raising their family. David soon started his own carpentry business and Paula became a fulltime homemaker and part-time nurse (working weekends at MGH).

CHS boys soccer looking at roster overhaul in '06

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset High boys soccer head coach Rob Leary said Wednesday there are five or six positions and roster spots set for sure on his team.

After that? It's still anyone's guess, including Leary's.

The Skippers don't begin their regular season until Wednesday, Sept. 6 in Rockland, so there is still time to sort it all out. And this was sure to be expected after the program graduated nine seniors from last year's Division 3 South semifinalist team.

"We're very inexperienced right now; we don't have many returners from last year," Leary said after his team scrimmaged with Hanover and Abington on Wednesday. "I lost nine of my starters, and even though I have some seniors this year, they're inexperienced at the varsity level. There's a lot of teaching to do."

Among the players that Leary knows he can count on this fall are his three captains, senior Chris Donze and juniors Mike Grimm and Sam Roth. Donze, a midfielder until this season, has excelled in the sweeper role during preseason friendlies and will start there this year.

Leary said Grimm, a central midfielder, has significantly improved his footwork. Roth, a forward, will be looked upon to score goals, as he did in Tuesday's 2-1 win over Division 1 side Milton. Senior Tristram Norman scored the other goal against the Wildcats, and is also very much in the picture up front for Cohasset.

Two returning starters from last year are sophomore Danny Brady and junior Evan Deutsch. Brady had a solid freshman campaign at right back last fall, and will be the starter there again this year, Leary said Deutsch, who played well at sweeper last season, will probably move up to the stopper position, although he could also play midfield when needed.

In net, Leary has two options in senior Ryan Kucinski and freshman Will Wise. Kucinski has played JV the last three years and will open the season as the starter. He has been nursing a minor injury during the preseason, though, and Wise has played well in his place. Against Hanover on Wednesday, Wise was aggressive on corner kicks and crosses, and made a couple nice diving saves in what finished as a 0-0 draw after 20 minutes.

The girls from the Cohasset 12-and-under softball team proved strong competition, finishing third out of 12 teams at a recent South Shore tournament in Duxbury. Team members include: Letra Kimla, Caitlin DeAngelis, Hayley Wheelwright, Kayla Orner, Robin Spofford, Christine Chase, Michaela Brophy, Jen Mullin, Michaela Rattenbury, and coaches Mike Mullin and Dusty Wheelwright.

11-year olds repeat as District 8 champs

On a beautiful Saturday night in August, the Cohasset 11-year olds once again rallied around each other and pulled out a 9-8 victory against Weymouth in front of a capacity crowd at Barnes Field to win the District 8 championship.

After winning Game 1 handily on Friday night, 13-5, behind strong pitching from Nick Tangherlini and Colin Gideon-Murphy, Cohasset was poised to finish the series on Saturday night with no plans to return to Weymouth for a Game 3 on Sunday.

After four innings, Cohasset found itself trailing 8-3. The bottom of the fourth began with Cohasset loading the bases and with some clutch hitting from Jamie Timothy and Christian Davis, along with some aggressive base running, Cohasset was able to tie up the game at 8-8 entering the fifth inning.

As he had done all year, Connor Goetz came in and blanked Weymouth for three innings until his teammates could muster a game winning rally in the bottom of the seventh. After the umpires announced that this would be our last at bat due to the impending darkness, Cohasset put together another patented rally.

Trevor Schramn led off the bottom of the seventh with a walk. Conor Dooley laid down a sacrifice bunt to move him to second base. With one out, Davis lined a single to left field but Schramn was held at third. Gideon-Murphy pinch ran for Schramn at third with one out and Davis on first. Davis then stole second uncontested and remained at second as Tangherlini drew a walk to load the bases for Goetz.

Once again, Goetz came through, lining a hit into the left center gap allowing Gideon-Murphy to score the winning run. Cohasset's 11-year olds were once again District 8 champs following their title as 9-year olds in 2004.

Cohasset posted a 6-3-1 regular season record, finishing in second place behind Weymouth. All season long, Cohasset received solid pitching from the likes of Timothy, Shane Haggerty, Tangherlini, Gideon-Murphy, Michael O'Brien and Goetz.

Cohasset's "best defensive" player award went to Jonah Adkins in right field, where he had help from Davis, Connor O'Brien, Kyle Healy, Dooley, Danny Barnes and Michael O'Brien.

Cohasset's gold glove infield consisted of Tangherlini, Haggerty, Timothy, Gideon-Murphy, Michael O'Brien, Schramn, Healy and Goetz. The team was coached by Paul Dave, Kevin Dooley and Pete Timothy.

SPORTS NOTES

Youth baseball and softball signups

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association (CYBSA) is pleased to introduce a 9-, 10- and 11-year old fall baseball league for interested players (birthdates between May 1, 1994 and April 30, 1997).

The league will be an in-town program with games being played on Saturday and Sunday afternoons (Saturdays through the first several weeks of September; soccer travel on Saturday afternoons starts in late September, and we will try and schedule around those games so players interested in both sports can play).

The league may also play a weeknight game as well. We are still in the process of setting schedules so as to minimize conflicts with other sports during the week. The number of teams, games and exact start times will be determined once we get an accurate count of registered players.

Registration forms are available on our website: CYBSA.net. Registrations must be received by Sept. 1 so that we can determine number of teams, order and receive uniforms and set the schedule. The cost of the program will be $75.

If you are interested in coaching, please let us know that as well.

Any questions, please contact Liam O'Connell at (781)383-9538 or via email at liam.oconnell@hklaw.com.

Winter rec basketball

Signups for winter recreation basketball will take place on Saturday, Sept. 16 from 9 to 11 a.m. Signups will be at Town Hall in Cohasset.

Flyers will be distributed at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. Boys and girls in grades 1-8 are eligible to play in our recreation program.

If you have any questions, please call (781)383-9513 or email ellenmaher63@comcast.net.

Senior Hunter Sease, junior Ryan Crough and sophomores Lenny Brown, Chris Wilcox and Ryan Daley are gunning for playing time in the midfield, with senior Mike Corey doing the same in defense. Leary said Daley has the ability to play anywhere in the field, and could see time up front, along with fellow sophomore Ivan Sceery.

Senior Adam Smith and junior Matt Burgess have sat out with injuries so far this preseason, but both will also get their chance to contribute.

Leary said he has had more talented teams in his four years with the Skippers, but added this year's side is the hardest working one.

"The team chemistry is excellent," he said. "I've never had a team as good as this one chemistry-wise, and sometimes that can outweigh skill."

Leary is looking at Carver as the team to beat right now in the South Shore League. The Crusaders return most of their talent from last season, while other frontrunners Harwich, Norwell and Cohasset have all lost some big guns. The Skippers coach said Mashpee should also have a strong squad.

Cohasset as four non-league games this season: Sept. 6 at Rockland, Oct. 14 against Cardinal Spellman, Oct. 26 at Hanover and Nov. 1 against Scituate. Leary said he considers Hanover (the team that knocked Cohasset out of the tournament last year) favorites to repeat as sectional champions, and expects Scituate to be much improved from 2005.

Defending Super Bowl champion Abington opens '06 as SSL favorite

By Mark Goodman and Julie Ann Nevero
MARINER SPORTS STAFF

Ask opposing South Shore League coaches who the team to beat is, and the answer is usually the same: Abington.

And with good reason, too. The defending league and Division 3 Super Bowl champion return a lot of the talent that led them to glory in 2005. Abington will clearly be playing with the proverbial bull's eye on its back.

"Until they're beaten, they're the frontrunners," said Norwell head coach Jim Sullivan earlier this week. "They're starting off with a good group that really learned how to win last year in some tough games."

So how do the Green Wave and their league foes stack up this fall? Here's a look through the lens of the South Shore League's three Marinerland programs: Abington, Cohasset and Norwell.

Cohasset

The Skippers were the marked team last season, as they came in with two straight and three of the last four league championships.

Cohasset fell off a bit in 2005 to the tune of a 5-3-2 record, and will be under new leadership this season under first year head coach Pete Afanasiw, who comes to Cohasset after a successful stint at Duxbury, culminating in a Super Bowl title for the Green Dragons last December.

As is typically the case with the program, the Skippers do not have a lot of depth. There are 48 athletes in the program – 15 of them freshmen – and an injury to even one key player would be a serious blow to Cohasset's league title hopes.

But, if the Skippers can stay healthy, they have the look of a dangerous team, particularly on offense. Senior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo is very good athlete that can hurt opponents with his arm and his legs. DiPaolo has a number of good targets to throw to, including senior Fletcher Smalzel, juniors Pat Doonan and Sam DeGiacomo, and sophomore Andrew DiPaolo (Anthony's younger brother). Senior Nick Zappolo will also likely be in the receiver mix when he fully recovers from a broken leg sustained during baseball season.

Behind DiPaolo in the backfield will be a three-man rotation of junior running backs that will all get their carries: P.J. McCaw, Brian Hill and Kyle Pinkus. McCaw is a bruising runner in between the tackles, Hill will bring some speed around the edges, while Pinkus brings a little of both styles to the table.

Afanasiw has been looking closely at the line in the preseason, as their adjustment to a new offensive scheme is a major key to Coahsset's season.

"If they can pick up the blocking schemes and stay healthy, we can be a very competitive team," said the coach. "At the same time, if they get hurt or have mental blocks, we could be in trouble."

One area of concern is inexperience on defense. Only the linebacking crew of senior Colin Conway, McCaw and Pinkus has significant varsity experience. Musto, Anderson and junior Kenny Muir will rotate at defensive end, with seniors Robert Silvia, Steve Hurlburt and junior Tyler Kelly seeing time at defensive tackle.

Afanasiw says the most likely candidates to start in the secondary are DeGiacomo and sophomore Alec Livingston at cornerback, and juniors David Snowdale and Mark Flibotte at the safeties.

Senior Andrew Clark, a soccer player his first three years at CHS, will be the kicker.

If the Skippers can stay healthy, they have the look of a dangerous team, particularly on offense.

Abington

Everyone knows how the Green Wave's season ended last year, but according to coach Jim Kelliher, that season is in the past.

"Sure people are going to call us the defending champions, but to us, it's just another year," said Kelliher, who's team won South Shore League title (5-1, 8-3 overall) and the Div. 3 Super Bowl. "From the end of last season until the first day of practice this year, we were the defending champs. Now, everyone is in the same water."

Still, with several of this players returning from that Bowl team, it's hard not to get a little excited about the Green Wave's chances in the SSL this fall. Seniors Tim Wells (receiver) and John Creamer (quarterback) return, as do running back Joe Gabriele, linemen Matt MacLean and Ronnie Dunn. After seeing time last season, Matt Bruning will step into a full time role at linebacker and offensive guard.

It is this crop of returning players that Kelliher sees as the strength of the squad this season.

"Our game-time experience will be our strength," he said. "We have a lot of kids who've played a lot of minutes and have experience playing under pressure. Kids that when they make a mistake, don't panic and just go the other way."

If Abington has any weakness, Kelliher said, it's his defensive secondary. The loss of defensive back Dan Carroll and linebackers Steve Golbranson and Matt Jones leave voids to fill.

"That area, and I'm including linebackers in there, is going to be where we're going to need some kids to step up," he said. "We're going to focus on getting guys in there and hopefully, they'll develop from week to week."

Overall, Kelliher said he's anticipating another tough season in the SSL, particularly with the addition of East Bridgewater.

"It's going to be really tight again, this year," said Kelliher, who edged Norwell and Cohasset for top honors last season. "Norwell is a very good football team and East Bridgewater is very competitive. I think we ought to consider ourselves capable of being in the race for the title."

Kelliher sees his own team, Norwell, EB, and Mashpee as the possible heavyweights. Mashpee stunned the Green Wave the second to last game of the season, rallying for a 34-32 win to give Abington its only league loss.

"I think those teams are as good as any team out there," he said. "But for now, we're focused on game one and the other ten games will follow. We can't look ahead."

Abington will start its season on Saturday, Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. against Dover-Sherborn. The Green Wave's first league contest of the fall will be played on Sept. 30 against Carver.

Norwell

One point.

That's all that separated the Clippers from a win over Abington and a share of the South Shore League title last season. With that 15-14 loss in Abington, Norwell finished with a 3-2 league record and a solid 8-3 overall mark.

But that was last year, and this season will see its share of turnover as Norwell will break in a completely new backfield. Senior quarterback Ryan Kane, last year's backup, will be behind center to start the season, though he has been pushed during the preseason by junior Tom Finkenstaedt.

Sullivan says as many as six players will get carries this season, as the Clippers will again focus on the run to beat their opponents. Seniors Doug Farinick, Bill Dooley, Kenton Magown and Liam Feldstein join juniors Kevin Helm and Cam Evans in that group.

The offensive line appears to be a strength for Norwell, with four of the team's six starters returning from last year. Senior center Mike Rapa will be flanked by senior guard Andrew McClendon, junior tackle James Long and senior tight end Brian Donoghue. Five boys – seniors Adam Hoffman and Eric Phippen, and juniors Sean Good, Nick Scott and Eric Chaisson – are competing to fill the other two spots on the line.

Sullivan says this year's numbers are the highest he has had in his 18 years with the NHS program.

"In the past, depth hasn't always been one of our strengths. That's on the good side for us this year," Sullivan said. "At the same time, inexperience, particularly in our backfield, is something we need to work on before the season opener (Sept. 9 against Scituate)."

Defensively, Norwell returns six starters. Rapa, Long and Donoghue help lead what figures to be a strength at defensive line, with Magown and Farinick returning at linebacker and Finkenstaedt at safety. Sullivan is looking at senior Andrew Dawson to step into the starting defensive backfield, and expects the core of running backs to help fill out the rest of the starters on the other side of the ball.

FROM BUICK, PAGE 17

The move to Cohasset came in 1987, and Aidan arrived in 1988, giving the couple five sons under the age of 10.

To this day, Scituate High soccer and lacrosse coaches commiserate over what could have been.

"Without a doubt, the Buicks are one of the greatest families I've ever been around," gushed Ron Ford, a teacher and coach at Cohasset high for 16 years, serving the last seven as the school's athletic director. "As gifted as they all were athletically, they were even better kids. I can't believe it's all over. I've been trying to talk David and Paula into adopting."

Not gonna happen. Of course, Paula claims she hasn't really given much thought to how she's going to be filling her afternoons this fall, the first in some 20 years she won't have to make almost daily trips to local football, soccer or lacrosse fields.

"I really don't know how much I'm going to miss it," said Paula, a hint of the old brogue still in evidence. "I live in the present. I probably won't know how I feel about it for another month or so."

Of course, the couple will still be making regular visits this fall to the Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, New York and Northfield Mt. Hermon Prep School in Northfield, Mass. to watch Conor and Aidan play soccer at those respective institutions.

Both brothers were Mariner All-Scholastics in soccer and lacrosse. Conor, entering his junior year as a math major at RIT, is still playing intramural soccer. Aidan, arguably the top soccer player in the South Shore League last fall, could have made it as a walk-on for just about any Division 2 or 3 college soccer program, but hopes to drum up interest from some Division 1 coaches at Mt. Hermon, just as former CHS lacrosse teammate Crandon Leahy did last year. Leahy is now headed to Quinnipiac University to play Division 1 college lacrosse.

"I hear there are a lot of college coaches coming to those games, so I'm hoping I can show a few what I can do in soccer," said Aidan.

Needless to say, few college scouts find their way to tiny Cohasset High, which competes in Division 3 in both soccer and lacrosse. Aidan might well have lined up a few top collegiate suitors if he'd stuck it out with the Cape Cod Crusaders, one of the elite club soccer programs in New England, but when spring rolled around he chose his CHS lacrosse teammates over the well-attended soccer showcase tourneys.

"And boy was I thankful for that," said Curran.

The CHS lax coach was also thrilled to hire on Ronan as his JV and assistant coach this past season, primarily to work with the attack—an easy call given that Ronan led the CHS laxmen in scoring in his junior and senior seasons, then went on to play Division 1 college lacrosse at Providence University.

Like his two younger brothers, Ronan was also a two-sport Mariner All-Scholastic: lacrosse, obviously, was his favorite, but football was his passion in the fall, and he made quite a name for himself in this sport as well. Ronan followed in Jamie's footsteps, football and lacrosse. Jamie would also play two years of lacrosse at Ohio-Wesleyan before a shoulder injury would short circuit that career.

David no doubt breathed a deep sigh of relief when number two son Devin stuck to the European brand of football.

In his role as mentor to the attack this spring, Ronan had the opportunity to work quite closely with Aidan, and helped him finish his career as CHS's all time leading scorer, his 303 career points moving him past another former teammate, Jake Previte.

This unique experience between the brothers was an overwhelmingly positive one, but it had its spirited moments.

"They argued at times like only brothers can in those car rides home," reported Curran between chuckles.

"It wasn't so bad," countered Aidan. "Ronan helped me out a lot. We had a lot of good talks about the team. It helped me to hear what he thought about things."

The brothers all remain close to this day. The sounds of their soccer games still carry from one end of Highland Ave. to the other on many a summer night. The Buicks are joined out on the street by neighbors Sam Ross, a junior striker for the CHS squad, and the Clark brothers, Chris, a former CHS star (Class of '04) now playing soccer at Emmanuel College, and Andrew, a senior at CHS. When darkness encroaches, the boys simply power up David's high powered contractor light and keep going, often times until Paula has to remind them people are trying to sleep.

Today, Jamie works with David in the carpentry business. Carrying on another family tradition, Jamie coaches in the Cohasset summer recreation lacrosse program.

Devin, the chatty one among the generally laconic Buick men, did his undergraduate work at Syracuse University and is now pursuing his PhD in Paleontology at the University of Cincinnati. He's been on expeditions to South Dakota and China, and is currently exploring changes in the waters off the coast of New Orleans.

Ronan graduated from Providence in 2005, spent the last year working with David, and hopes to pursue his master's degree in computer science or math.

Conor enters his junior year at RIT fresh off a Dean's List sophomore year. He recently purchased a computer and his own college books with money raised through refereeing Cohasset Youth Soccer. He did take five weeks away from that this summer, though, to attend the World Cup in Germany.

"Ah, they're all different, but they all hold their own in our house," noted Paula. "And you have to be pretty quick-witted around here or you won't get far. We're very fortunate. I'm proud of all of them."

In that, it appears, she is far from alone.

Cancer ride service finds new home

Road to Recovery to relocate to Sons of Italy

By Mary Jane Hanron

Road to Recovery coordinator Laurie Berlinquet, second from left, goes over the schedule with some of her volunteers at the Hersey House. The program that operated out of the Hersey House in Hingham has found a new home at the Sons of Italy Hall off Route 3A.

It has been a busy summer for Laurie Berlinguet, coordinator of the Road to Recovery, a service affiliated with the American Cancer Society known originally as the Hingham Cancer Hotline.

Berlinguet and a group of dedicated volunteers have been searching the community for a new locale in anticipation of the upcoming construction project at Hingham's Hersey House, where the present Hotline is situated. Needed for the Road to Recovery to perform its daily duties was space in a business, organization or building with an area large enough to accommodate a desk, small filing space and telephone from which a volunteer could conduct business arranging transportation to treatment appointments for area cancer patients.

This week plans were being made for state Rep. Garrett Bradley's assistant to meet with Berlinguet to give her the keys to his Hingham office located in the Sons of Italy Hall on Route 3A. According to Bradley, he learned of the Hotline's dilemma through friends and constituents and notified officials at the Sons of Italy Lodge where he rents space. Bradley said maintaining office space at the hall was a tradition practiced previously by former long-time state representative, Mary Jeanette Murray. When he assumed the office he thought it was a good idea to continue in order that he would have space available for local office hours and campaign meetings.

Officials at the Sons of Italy OK'ed the arrangement and Bradley informed Berlinguet the Road to Recovery had its new home.

"My space isn't used during the day," said Bradley. "It's really an ideal place for them. It's safe, accessible and has plenty of parking. I know the drivers and patients don't go there; it will be for the office volunteers, but there is still plenty of room."

Bradley said he had been touched by cancer in his own family and understood the tremendous strains and complications involved in driving someone to treatment who was feeling so ill on a daily basis.

"I was in school at BC and my grandfather had cancer," he recalled. "I can remember talking to my mother and how tired she sounded. I didn't know about the program then, but it would have helped my family. I started to help out my mother with the driving. I could jump on the road after classes and drive my grandfather to his treatments.

"I never minded, but when I think about it now and how hard it must have been for my mother, I realize what a great thing it is that these volunteers do. I am honored to help them out. And besides, it's a perfect match. It all started right here in Hingham," Bradley said.

There had been a well known need for many months to find a new location from which the volunteers could work safely. Berlinguet said the Road to Recovery was the only group still operating from Hersey House, now a rundown structure. (A new housing project is slated for the site). Their former neighbors in the building, "Meals on Wheels" had recently moved out having been offered other accommodations.

Berlinguet and her "desk" volunteers penned a letter to the community, which appeared in the Hingham Journal on July 27th explaining the dilemma. Berlinguet received several offers from other towns for which she expressed heartfelt gratitude.

"We are certainly appreciative that places in other communities we serve are willing to help," she said. But Road to Recovery wanted to exhaust every possibility of remaining in Hingham before making a decision out of necessity to move the program's office elsewhere, she said.

Service began in 1973

Breast cancer survivor, Lillian Valorz, established the Hingham Cancer Hotline in 1973 in her own home. With the assistance of Hingham's public health nurse, she recognized the growing need for an organized system for patients to receive help traveling to and from treatment appointments. These schedules often involved daily visits five times per week for six to eight weeks. Chemotherapy appointments were often fewer days per week but for longer periods, often spanning months.

The Road to Recovery serves 13 South Shore towns as 60 drivers, 27 of whom are from Hingham, attempt to fill the average 1200 requests for rides to appointments for cancer treatments that are made each year.

These calls are handled by 13 volunteers who manage the desk during the week for several hours each day. These are usually morning hours but the new schedule will be verified and published in the newspapers once details in the new location are confirmed.

In addition to taking requests for rides, volunteers offer words of hope and encouragement, kindness and compassion and sometimes merely a sympathetic ear to patients or loved ones who call for help. Once requests for rides are made, the scheduling, calling and arranging for drivers begins.

Rosemary Sugrue, a desk volunteer of seven years, spoke of calls she found very rewarding. "It's a wonderful feeling to hear people say they are feeling better and won't need treatment anymore. They are so grateful, so appreciative," Sugrue said.

Sugrue, who praised the volunteer drivers, encourages cancer patients and families that need assistance to call Road to Recovery.

"When they first hear 'cancer' they think they can do everything on their own, be strong, get through it," she said. "Some people think it's asking for charity....'my family will help me.' Well, you probably can do it and you are strong and people will help you. We are here to help a little more and make it a little easier."

Berlinguet realizes much remains to be done, but one hurdle is behind her.

"It is such a relief that the Road to Recovery which had its humble beginnings as the Cancer Hotline thanks to the selflessness and spirit of one Hingham woman 35 years ago will not have to close its doors to this great and crucial service," she said, "It is devastating when anyone is afflicted by this dreadful and overwhelming disease.

"It certainly would have been tragically ironic if this compassionate service which began in this town that prides itself on preserving its history had found it necessary to turn away a cancer stricken resident because there was no location available for our office. We are thrilled that for those who need us, we will be right back at our desk answering our phone in Rep. Bradley's office space in the Sons of Italy Hall."

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

Jim Stanton from the Metro Southwest Regional Employment Board talks about the future of Massachusetts' educated work force as baby boomers retire.

Workers: Missing in action

By Jennifer Lord
DAILY NEWS STAFF

Massachusetts is among the leaders in science, engineering and technology. Its colleges are world-renowned, churning out thousands of graduates in these and other fields annually.

Yet, when it comes time for these graduates to settle down, they're leaving the state in droves – an unseen crisis that could have devastating effect on the state's economy by the year 2020, according to a recent report by the Nellie Mae Education Foundation, "New England 2020: A Forecast of Educational Attainment and Its Implications for the Workforce of New England States."

"We need to take advantage of the influx of young, bright people who come here to attend our colleges," said Blenda Wilson, president of the Nellie Mae Educational Foundation. "We need to make them want to stay here for their careers."

Blenda Wilson, president of the Nellie Mae Education Foundation, says the state must take advantage of the bright, young people brought here by top colleges.

Over the next three decades, the number of young workers with a bachelor's degree in Massachusetts is expected to decline from 43 percent to 40 percent as college graduates move out of state and are replaced by a less-educated immigrant population, the report states.

At a recent panel discussion with MetroWest Daily News editors, local education and business leaders suggested that more effort be put into making schools' science programs interesting and relevant to students.

And, with the state's minority population on the increase – by 2020, 28 percent of the state's workers will be minorities, up from 15 percent in the 2000 census – more effort should be made to make college accessible to these students through financial aid and mentoring.

"There are still serious problems with achievement gaps," said Andre Mayer, a senior vice president of the group Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

Part of that problem is cultural: Mayer said Latino students are more likely to leave school early because they feel they need a job. While the job may solve their short-term financial concerns, they are unable to further advance.

"Just about the dumbest thing you can do in Massachusetts is drop out of school before college," Mayer said. "You're screwed if you do that."

Jim Stanton of the Metro Southwest Regional Employment Board predicted that the shortage of science, technology, engineering and math fields would be felt as early as 2010 as baby boomers retire. Without college graduates in these fields, large companies like EMC and Raytheon will find it difficult to hire qualified employees.

It's a problem that is being addressed in one form at the community college level, said Matthew O'Connor, dean of Community and Corporate Education at Massachusetts Bay Community College. His college frequently works with companies to develop adult programs for their employees and provide them with skills that will allow them to continue their education.

"The community college can adapt," O'Connor said. "We can meet the need. We just need to do it more."

A High degree Of hard work

Perseverance, patience pay off for this unique woman

By Danielle Ameden
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

For Doris Sosa, college has been worth the wait.

Acting out the kind of family values and camaraderie that her Puerto Rican heritage prizes, Sosa knew where her responsibility lay after graduating high school in 1989.

She shelved her dreams of college and went to work to help support her four younger siblings in a single-parent household.

"It was part of just being the eldest in the house – college took second place," Sosa, 34, said. "For financial reasons, we had to work together to keep everything going."

Sosa, who has long dreamed of becoming a teacher, graduated with an associate's degree in liberal arts from Mass. Bay Community College on May 31, and is finally on her way to achieving her goal.

In a few days, she'll begin the Teacher Certification program at Framingham State College, majoring in Modern Languages and minoring in Secondary Education, which will prepare her for the Massachusetts Test for Educator Licensure (MTEL).

Getting this far has been quite the ride, says Sosa, and it's only the beginning.

Born in the Puerto Rican city of Caguas, Sosa first moved to New Jersey as an infant but spent her early years being bounced back and forth between her native land and the Boston area.

After attending first grade in Puerto Rico, the family settled in Jamaica Plain, where 5-year-old Sosa was enrolled as a second-grader at Agassiz Elementary School.

Despite "somehow (getting) in," Sosa said there was a bigger difference between her and her peers than the age gap.

Growing up, Sosa shouldered more responsibility than her classmates.

"Most of the other kids were playing around, goofing off, where I couldn't," said Sosa, who worked part-time after school. She helped raise her siblings and cared for their ailing maternal grandmother, who had arrived from Puerto Rico to join the household.

Sosa said her mother, who struggles with English, was forced to work double shifts at minimum-wage jobs. Still, there wasn't enough income to support the family of seven and send Doris to college.

Sosa remembers learning thriftiness early on, helping her family save money by budgeting and clipping coupons from the Sunday paper.

"It helped," she said.

Sosa, who never knew her biological father, said observing her single mother's dogged determination to give her children a better life was the inspiration that drove her pursuit of higher education.

"My mother brought me here (to America) to basically give me opportunities, but she didn't realize how tough it was going to be to get us where we needed to go," she said.

For Sosa, a college education was always in the cards. It was just a question of time, money and courage.

"A lot of that gap (before going to MBCC) was me knowing I wanted to go back but being afraid to do it," she said.

After graduating from East Boston's Umana Technical High School in 1989 at age 16, Sosa juggled double shifts in retail, working "day and night" everywhere, from Cambridge Dry Goods to CVS, to bring money home.

For eight years, Sosa worked at Bakers Shoe Store in Dedham, ultimately as a manager, and also completed a certification program at New England School of Photography in 1992, which led her to work in a studio.

A native of Puerto Rico, Doris Sosa earned an associate's degree in liberal arts from Massachusetts Bay Community College in May. This fall, she'll attend Framingham State College where she'll work toward a teaching degree.

While she enjoyed her work as a family portrait photographer, Sosa knew her future wasn't there or in stocking shoes.

Sosa wants to be a role model.

"They're very impressionable," she said of high school-aged students.

"That's the age where if you can't find a support system within the household, you find it somewhere else," Sosa said. "I think it's important to have very strong educators within the school system to help these kids become better members of society."

Her eventual goal is to get her master's or Ph.D in psychology or biology, and then teach high school or college-aged kids.

"I'm shooting long term and trying to take it in baby steps so I'm not overwhelmed," Sosa said.

While completing her education, Sosa works as a student loan specialist at Education Resource Center in Boston, working with college students trying to afford their own educations.

"I can totally relate with their (financial) frustrations," said Sosa, who is paying for her tuition through payment plans and private loans.

At her MBCC commencement ceremony, Sosa, a Phi Beta Kappa honor society inductee who graduated with a 3.5/4 grade point average, gave the graduate address, talking about her experience as a native Spanish speaker and first-generation college student who has triumphed over her fair share of obstacles.

"I felt it was very important to let other people know, it doesn't really matter how old or how young you are," said Sosa, recapping the advice from her speech.

"Don't let fear hinder your ability to move forward," she added. "It's never too late to make your dreams come true."

First Parish welcomes Moore as director of religious education

Nan Moore is the new Director of Religious Education of First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset as of this past July.

Moore brings to First Parish nine years as Director of Religious Education in New England Unitarian Universalist churches, as well ample leadership experience in the denomination. For the Youth Office of the Unitarian Universalist Association, based in Boston, she serves as Basic Advisor and Advanced Advisor Trainer and continues to be active as a continental Youth/Adult Leadership Trainer and as a Spiritual Development Trainer. Beyond her denominational work, Moore has served as Youth Program Consultant for the Town of Mashpee. A resident of Marstons Mills, Moore is married and the mother of three children.

At First Parish, Moore will work with a core group of lay leaders and the minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, to design for children and youth a religious education program that affirms diverse learning styles and to shape more opportunities for intergenerational community. "In many communities," she explains, "there is a lack of intergenerational connections. Churches are one of the only places remaining in our American culture where intergenerational community can be realized. It is a cultural call to responsibility and devotion that we honor children, families and extended families as we begin our community connection at First Parish in Cohasset."

Plans are taking shape as First Parish begins its new season on Sept. 10. "In the coming year," reports Moore, "we will explore intergenerational worship services once a month, visit Holly Hill Farm as an intergenerational community experience, participate in a community intergenerational letter writing project, worship together, eat together and be together in beloved community."

Nan Moore, new Director of Religious Education of First Parish

Registration for the religious education program for toddlers, children, and youth begins Sunday morning, Sept. 10, with an all-parish pancake breakfast from 8-9:30 a.m., followed by intergenerational worship at 10 a.m. in the Meeting House. The invitation is open. Says Moore, "Please come and join us for Sunday morning worship and a way cool Sunday School program!"

To learn more, drop by the Parish House at 23 Main Street for a September newsletter, The Common, phone Nan directly at 781-383-1100, or simply come to church on Sept. 10.

Natural history tour

The town of Cohasset believes in the importance its local history. That fact is evidenced by both the strength and activity of the Cohasset Historical Society and the community's continuing support of books written about the town and its people and places.

The first of three Cohasset histories was written in 1898 by E. Victor Bigelow, the standard work off which all others are now based. The Rev. Bigelow traced the history of the community back to its roots – literally – and its rocky foundation – literally, too. Join Mass Audubon educator John Galluzzo on Sunday, Sept. 10, at 1 p.m., for a trip through the natural history of Cohasset as seen through the eyes of E. Victor Bigelow, in a special "Van with a View" tour of Cohasset, partially sponsored by the Cohasset Cultural Council.

Pre-registration for the "Van with a View" tour is required, and costs $8 for Mass Audubon members, and $11 for non-members. All are reminded to dress appropriately for the weather and to bring binoculars.

For directions or more information, call 781-837-9400 or contact southshore@massaudubon.org.

Piano lessons resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while other play just for pleasure.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood, and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

With a cast of 39 women's roles ranging in stage age from 20 to 55 plus one younger girl, there are large and small roles alike. Emmy loss par for the course for 'D-List' Griffin

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Kathy Griffin may have lost the Emmy for Outstanding Reality Program, for her work as star and executive producer on the Bravo cable series "My Life on the D-List," to ABC-TV's "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition," but just being at Sunday's ceremony, her first as a guest, was a victory for the tart-tongued comedienne. Last year, Griffin was fired from her job as an E! Channel red-carpet commentator after joking that child actress Dakota Fanning had checked into drug rehab. Steven Spielberg, who directed Fanning in "The War of the Worlds," said that Griffin owed Fanning an apology. When Griffin refused, the cable channel promptly showed her the door.

At the Emmy telecast, Griffin - whose comedy consists of verbal pot shots at everyone from Tom Cruise and Celine Dion to Star Jones Reynolds and Lindsay Lohan - was likely to rub elbows with more than a few of the Hollywood stars who are fodder for her stand-up act which she brings to the South Shore Music Circus on Saturday. On the telephone from her home in Los Angeles last week, Griffin made it clear she was ready to settle some scores.

"I'm going to my first prime-time Emmy Awards as a guest. I'm going to be drunk with power. Arrivals start at 3 PM, but I'm planning on being there at 2:30. I'm talking to 'Good Morning Israel.' I'm talking to everybody on the red carpet. The best moment, however, will be blowing right by Ryan Seacrest and everyone from E! I can't stand Ryan anyway so I'm really going to enjoy that."

Griffin may have been looking forward to ignoring Seacrest, but she wasn't sure how she would handle other likely encounters.

"I'm nervous, because I will probably run into half the people in my act. Jessica Simpson - whom I make vicious fun of - told me she thinks I'm hilarious, but I'm not sure everyone else feels the same way. I don't think the really big stars even know who I am. It's all their publicists and how concerned they are with what's being said about their clients."

"I'm super-excited about the Haley Joel Osment drunk-driving arrest and, of course, all of Mel Gibson's troubles. How could I not be happy about that?"
Comedienne Kathy Griffin

Her former "Suddenly Susan" co-star Brooke Shields was Griffin's maid-of-honor at her 2001 wedding to computer programmer Matt Moline, which ended in divorce earlier this year, but Griffin had no plans to use Sunday's event to make new show business friends.

"My thing is that I really don't like to hang out with celebrities, because then I don't feel I can really do my work. I'm an observer. I like to see what they're wearing, who they are with and who is drunk."

With her choice of escort for the evening, however, Griffin just may earn her own share of looks from fellow attendees.

"U.S. Army Major Todd Breasseale is going to be the killer ideal Emmy date," explained Griffin who included footage of her 2005 visit to an American military base in Iraq on her reality show. "He's a war hero who just got back from Iraq. I'm going with a hot Army officer, because I don't want to be there with some Hollywood guy who ditches me to get near someone more famous."

Although her current reality show has brought her closer to center stage than ever before, the 44-year-old Chicago-born performer isn't sure that more fame wouldn't actually mean less work.

"I complain all the time about Bravo, but I'm playing the Kennedy Center fall and Carnegie Hall in January. That never would have happened to me before. There are more employment opportunities for me on the D-List, however, than if I were more popular. The same week I'm at the Emmy Awards, I'm also doing a jewelry convention in Phoenix. It's the best of both worlds. I get to have a fancy house, but I don't have people going through my garbage. I like it this way."

The red-haired entertainer also likes it when stars misbehave.

"When I make fun of celebrities, I make fun of behavior not just the way they look. With the nature of the topics I cover, things just fall into my lap. I'm super-excited about the Haley Joel Osment drunk-driving arrest and, of course, all of Mel Gibson's troubles. How could I not be happy about that?"

(Kathy Griffin will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, Saturday, Sept. 2 at 8 p.m. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.)

Movie review

Paul Giamatti and Edward Norton in a scene from "The Illusionist"

Magic and murder

"The Illusionist" (B)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

"The Illusionist" has a rabbit in its hat and a David Mamet filmmaking guide up its sleeve. Based on a short story by Steven Millhauser and featuring one of those hypno-syncopated scores by composer Philip Glass, the film is elaborately plotted, ominously atmospheric and strangely inconsequential.

It does, however, benefit hugely from Edward Norton's physical magnetism in the lead role. Meet Eisenheim (Norton), an early 20th century, Austro-Hungarian mesmerist and magician who seems capable of unbelievable feats of sorcery, including perhaps even raising the dead on a theater stage.

Before he was known as Eisenheim, this son of a humble cabinetmaker was thwarted in an adolescent attempt to court the equally smitten Duchess Sophie (Jessica Biel, in a role someone probably imagined being played by Scarlett Johansson).

Years later, he is reunited with his beloved on a Vienna stage when Sophie is sent by her fiance, Crown Prince Leopold (Rufus Sewell), who is rumored to be a sexual sadist, as a volunteer in one of Eisenheim's magic tricks, although she, rather incredibly, does not recognize him. Eisenheim gets his audience's attention right away. Making his entrance, he removes his gloves, throws them over the heads of the people in the front rows and seemingly transforms them into ravens.

Later, Sophie and Eisenheim are discovered meeting illicitly, and Eisenheim is threatened by Chief Inspector Uhl (Paul Giamatti, whose pronunciation of the word "streudel" suggests a "Young Frankenstein" remake may be in the offing).

Shot in sepia tones, beautiful to look at and featuring old-timey wipes and other early filmmaking techniques, "The Illusionist" entertainingly explores the borderline between reality and the supernatural and, by association, film and life.

The entire empire is ablaze with talk about this mysterious magician. Huge, excitable crowds pack the theater to see him cause diaphanous spirits of the dead appear onstage to take questions. One young man "materializes" only from the waist up from the top of a table, suggesting a television image without the cabinet. Another ghost may hold the key in a shocking murder mystery. Eisenheim is seen to experiment with lenses. But such tricks were impossible in this era. Were they not?

An art-nouveau curio, "The Illusionist" is stylish, often riveting, and its cast is addictively watchable. But it's also ponderous. Biel is not quite up to the emotional demands of her role, and Giamatti's part is bizarrely insignificant.

Director Neil Burger's 2002 debut film, "Interview with the Assassin," had the same problems. A faux documentary telling the "true" story of a Marine who claims to have been a second JFK gunman in Dallas, "Interview" was more concept than movie. "The Illusionist" doesn't play by the rules either.

And how good is its final "twist" if we've lost interest?

Rated PG-13. "The Illusionist" contains sexual situations.

Scituate Arts Association artist, Ivy Frances will exhibit her photographs documenting her experience of the Hurricane Katrina aftermath beginning August 29 at the Front Street Art Gallery in Scituate. The photographs are displayed within the discarded window frames Ms. Frances has been collecting over the last few years. Ms. Frances was part of the Federal Emergency Management (FEMA) recovery team deployed to New Orleans directly after Hurricane Katrina hit. While controversy loudly raged on, the team quietly set up the operation in New Orleans, Baton Rouge and surrounding area evacuation sites. When the assignments were complete they quietly came home and reflected on the experience. This exhibit is a window into the reflection process of Ms. Frances. Ms. Frances will be on-hand at the Reception on Friday, September 1, from 5 to 8 p.m. to speak about her work. The exhibit will continue through Sept. 24, An accompanying Hurricane Preparedness exhibit will also be on display.

EEE scare

Outdoor school activities restricted

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Residents are being asked to take extra precautions when it comes to protecting themselves against mosquitoes. The Board of Health has announced a mosquito trapped in the western part of town near Hingham and Hull tested positive for Eastern Equine Encephalitis, or EEE, a disease that can be deadly.

Fortunately, the infected mosquitoes found in Cohasset were of the species Culiseta Melanura, which typically do not bite humans, said Tara Tradd of the Board of Health office. However, they can spread the disease to birds which can become infected and pass it on to another mosquito which does bite humans.

The town is not taking the information lightly and a ban has been placed on all outdoor activities on school property between the hours of 6:30 p.m. and 7 a.m. (peak mosquito hours) until further notice. In a Connect-ED telephone message sent to the home of every student last Friday, parents were told there are still risks associated with being outdoors during hours not covered by the ban, including those hours children might be outside for recess or physical education classes. Parents may request their children stay indoors at all times.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Health, EEE is a disease caused by a virus. The virus infects birds that live in freshwater

Greenbush footpaths

Rails With Trails project backed

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Biking and walking could soon become a regular part of the day for Cohasset residents commuting into Boston. While the Greenbush commuter rail train will provide transportation to the city, the Board of Selectmen backed an initiative last week that would make it possible for residents to easily get to the station on bike or on foot.

The project, dubbed Rails With Trails, is part of a national initiative, for which federal grant money could be available. It constructs biking and walking paths parallel to train right-of-ways, providing safe access to public transportation. Not only does the program endorse physical activity for a healthy lifestyle, it would help cut down on pollution and encourage connectivity of communities.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt, who is also the town's representative on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's South Shore Coalition, and longtime Health Board member Steve Bobo, presented information on the initiative and explain what was found in a feasibility study for the project at selectmen's Aug. 28 meeting.

The town voted to allocate $25,000 in Community

Town buildings need some TLC

Money, staff are not enough

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Maintaining the town's buildings is no easy job. Between the three schools, Town Hall, the library, the police and fire station and the DPW garage, Facilities Manager Brian Adams has his hands full.

At the request of the Board of Selectmen, Adams came before the board last week to discuss his department, its range of responsibilities and its needs. Adams prepared a summary of each facility he is responsible for, including how custodial services are provided, the backlog of maintenance work needed, and the major facility needs for each site.

Adams has been the Facilities Manager for two years. He said while there is limited funding and not enough staff, and town is currently operating at a level of cleanliness far below what it should be — it has made great strides over the past two years, and even within the past few months.

Auction to help Pratt building

'Backward Glance' is Sept. 16

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Historical Society has dedicated itself to preserving the town's history in many ways. Part of its mission is keeping the historic building it calls home in top condition, which calls for some fund-raising events throughout the year.

On Saturday, Sept. 16 at 6:30 p.m., residents are invited to attend "A Backward Glance," a gala auction and cocktail buffet to be held at the Cohasset Golf Club. Skinner, Inc., will auction off an exceptional collection of family treasures, including everything from furniture to rugs and paintings, china, glass, silver and collectibles. Tickets for the event are $85 per person and include two complimentary drinks per person.

All 41 items to be auctioned off have been donated, and will be on display at Historical Society headquarters until Sept. 15, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Items can also be viewed online at the society's new Web page at www.cohassethistoricalsociety.org. All proceeds from the auction will go directly to the Society, which plans to use the money to continue its ongoing maintenance plan and help adapt the building, which formerly served as the town library, into a Historical Society building with the ability to properly preserve the town's collection.

The driving force behind the event is a group of three Society members and friends who have worked together on fund-raising events before. Since roughly Christmastime of last year, Eleanor Bleakie, Nancy Garrison and Mary Hartshorne

Arrest following alleged drug deal

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Cohasset man is facing drug charges for allegedly selling a large quantity of marijuana to two other men in the parking lot of a local shopping plaza last Saturday afternoon.

Police arrested Kevin Dinsmore, 19, of 60 Hillside Dr., near Tedeschi Plaza following an alleged drug sale that police believe garnered more than $600. In addition to the $612 found on Dinsmore's person, Dinsmore was also found to have more than $7,255 in a backpack that allegedly contained raw marijuana.

According to papers on file at Quincy District Court, at about 1:50 p.m. Saturday (Sept. 2), Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon, who was on patrol in an unmarked police car, became suspicious about a gold Ford Windstar van with faded plates that was parked at the far end of the parking lot at Shaw's Plaza. There were two males in their early 20s in the van. Lennon had the registration checked through the dispatch center and the van came back as registered to a Needham woman.

About five minutes later, Lennon followed the van as it exited Shaw's Plaza and headed to Tedeschi Plaza where he observed the van park to the left of an Oldsmobile Bravada and saw the Oldsmobile's male passenger (who was later determined to be Dinsmore) who was carrying a backpack, climb into the van through its sliding door. Lennon, who is a trained drug officer, made several observations about the actions of the men in the van, court papers stated. Meanwhile another male returned to the Oldsmobile from the shopping plaza and sat in the driver's seat. Lennon also observed Dinsmore, who was still clutching the backpack, return to the Oldsmobile after having spent about a minute in the van.

Loaded gun found following arrest

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Following a 9-1-1 call from a Cedar Street resident that one of the house windows was smashed with a rock — police, who responded to the call, stopped a 2000 Plymouth Neon and placed five males under arrest.

The call came in last Thursday (Aug. 31) at about 2:15 a.m. Hingham and Milton police departments are investigating similar incidents in their towns that had occurred a little earlier that night.

After stopping the Neon, further investigation revealed several fist-sized rocks on the front passenger floor and a loaded, 9 mm handgun with the serial number obliterated in the trunk of the car.

Cohasset police said it was too early to speculate whether the rock incidents were random attacks but will be working with Hingham and Milton police to determine the motive.

Arrested were the driver of the Neon, Derrick Allen Jr., 20, of Dorchester. Allen is charged with possession of a large capacity firearm, possession of a firearm with a defaced serial number, possession of ammunition, vandalism, operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, defective equipment (broken license plate light), and giving a false name to a police officer.

The other four men, Miguel A. Diaz, 18, Jose M. Diaz, Jr., 18, and Jeffrey A. Cirino, 23, all of Dorchester, and Edivict Pimentel, 19, of Jamaica Plain, were all charged with vandalism.

There was another vehicle involved in the incidents but police have not been able to identify the car or the other people, Chief James Hussey said.

Hussey said Officer Ed Bagley, who stopped the Neon, maintained his composure and controlled a serious situation, which not only led to the arrest of five suspects, but also took a high powered, illegal firearm off the street.

"This investigation continues and further crimes may be solved because of this excellent arrest," Hussey said.

The Windstar left the parking lot and headed northbound. Lennon radioed Officer Greg Hartnett who had been at Shaw's Plaza issuing parking violations, to stop the van for a license plate violation. Lennon followed the Oldsmobile as it tried to exit Tedeschi Plaza by going the wrong way through the parking lot at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, court papers state. Lennon activated the blue lights in the unmarked police car and the Oldsmobile stopped.

When Lennon unzipped the backpack he detected a strong odor of raw marijuana. He also found a brown paper bag filled with a large quantity of cash, a digital scale, an open box of clear plastic sandwich bags, a rolled plastic bag believed to contain marijuana, and a glass pipe with residue.

Realizing that a drug deal had allegedly occurred, Lennon radioed Hartnett to search the Windstar in which police found a Burger King bag under the front passenger seat that contained several plastic bags (totaling about 1/4 pound) of what they suspected to be marijuana.

The two occupants of the van, George E. Bumpus, II, 20, of Needham, and Justin S. Bolger, 19, of Halifax, were charged with possession of marijuana and conspiracy to violate drug laws. Bumpus was also charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and number plate violation.

Police charged Dinsmore with distribution of marijuana, possession of marijuana and conspiracy to violate drug laws.

Police did not charge the driver of the Oldsmobile because he was not present during the alleged transaction.

Chief James Hussey praised Lennon and the detective division that also includes Det. Garrett Hunt. "This is indicative of the great work our detectives are doing," Hussey said.

POLICE BRIEFS

Gas leak

A couple of kids alerted a police sergeant about a potential gas leak inside a catch basin at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road at about 9 a.m., last Wednesday (Aug. 30). Sgt. William Quigley said the fire department responded and stood by until Keyspan arrived and fixed the leak. Quigley explained a sleeve apparently slipped and the gas line, which had been previously repaired, started leaking again.

He said two kids on bikes flagged down a cruiser to report hearing the gas leak inside the catch basin.

The fire department checked the surrounding homes to make sure none were affected by the leak, Quigley said.

Another biker hurt

Another bicyclist was hurt trying to cross the tracks on North Main Street by the Cohasset Golf Club. The woman called police Monday (Aug. 28) about the incident, which occurred Aug. 21. The caller stated a friend that was driving by after the mishap picked her up and took her to South Shore Hospital. She said she had to have surgery on her wrist. Police notified Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan about the incident.

The MBTA has temporarily filled the cracks with hot top but will need to come up with a permanent solution, Chief James Hussey said.

MVA at lower King

Police say a motorist, who was changing the station on her car radio while she was traveling northbound on Route 3A, did not realize traffic had come to a stop and rear-ended a Ford truck near 3A and lower King Street at about 11:15 a.m. last Friday (Sept. 1). The driver of the 1995 Nissan was cited for failure to use care in stopping. Her car had to be towed. Police said driver inattention was the cause of the accident.

LoJack alert

Last Thursday (Aug. 31) at about 11 p.m., a cruiser that is equipped with a donated LoJack unit picked up a signal from a stolen car. The unit can detect a stolen car that is equipped with a LoJack radio frequency transceiver within a two-mile radius.

The officer confirmed the car was stolen and tracked the vehicle.

As it turned out the owner of the vehicle had previously reported the car as stolen in Boston but it had been recovered. However, the information that the car was recovered had not been taken out of the LoJack system.

Unwanted guest(s)

Police are still investigating a report from a Rustic Drive homeowner returning from vacation to find someone had used the bathroom and eaten out of the refrigerator.

The incident was reported at 11:48 p.m. Sunday (Sept. 3).

There was no forced entry but the perpetrators could be charged the serious offense of breaking & entering, police said.

Bus towed

A school bus from South Shore Vo-Tech was towed last Thursday afternoon (Aug. 31) when the bus driver, who had parked at Shaw's Plaza, reported a fire. As it turned out the brakes were overheated. There were no students in the bus at the time.

Protective custody

Police placed two men in protective custody last week in separate incidents. Protective custody is not a criminal offense and by law, police can take an individual into custody if they determine the person is under the influence and cannot take care of himself.

Police can take the person to the station (and hold him or her for up to 12 hours); can take the person to a hospital or detox facility, release him to a responsible adult; or take him home.

One of the "PCs" involved a call about a suspicious person wandering around the parking lot at Tedeschi Plaza. Police found the man to be unsteady on his feet.

The other "PC" occurred after a report of an erratic driver. Police found the truck parked and the engine was not running. The officer, however, was not comfortable leaving the man with the means to leave in the vehicle so he placed him in protective custody, police said.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SCHOOL'S IN

I hope that everyone had a great first week back to school and for the younger preschool set, that next week is just as nice. For me, it has been tough as I love the time with my kids but summer does come to an end. Send in any news or information you have to share on summer time memories, first days of school stories or just plain fun news.

LOCKS OF LOVE

Hats off to Zoe Doherty as she shows off her much shorter hairstyle. Zoe donated her long tresses to Locks of Love after growing it out for more than a year so she could help someone else. Zoe's mom and dad, Margo and Mike, are so proud of you Zoe as are the rest of your family and friends.

Locks of Love is a non-profit organization that provides hairpieces to financially disadvantaged children under 18 suffering from long-term medical hair loss.

OH BOY!

If you see Holly and Stephen Hill out shopping for little things in "blue" be sure to congratulate them. The Hills are the proud grandparents of a bouncing baby boy, Nicholas Adam Hill, who arrived July 24, 2006. His lucky parents are, Adam and Jacqueline Hill of Independence Lane in Millis. Also available for extra hugs are his maternal grandparents are Dianne and Thomas Young of Stoughton.

STUDIED IN KENYA

Suzanne M. Lewis of Mohawk Way, studied in Kenya this summer. She participated in the St. Lawrence University course, Challenges in Conservation: National Parks at Risk. The four-week, field-based course addressed the necessity for active management of two of Kenya's national parks. Population growth and encroach ment on the parks threatens loss of biodiversity, deterioration of range-lands, frequent animal population crashes, accelerated human-wildlife conflicts and loss of income from park visitors. After visiting the protected areas and hearing from local practitioners, scientists and other stakeholders, students participated in research and debate, acquiring field techniques and analytical skills that can be the basis of their own future projects. The course emphasized analytical, interactive and solution-oriented work rather than factual learning. A 2005 graduate of Thayer Academy, Suzanne is starting her sophomore year at St. Lawrence. What an interesting summer, Suzanne!

UMASS BOSTON

The following Cohasset students were named to the dean's list for the spring 2006 semester at UMass Boston: Matthew Casey, Kathryn Hines, Peter Kovach, Abby Murphy, and Patrick Reardon. Great work to all of you.

BON VOYAGE

Kathleen Hurley, a Union College Class of 2008 history major, is participating this fall in the college's term abroad program in Rennes, France. Kathleen is a 2004 graduate of Cohasset High School. While abroad, Kathleen will study the French language at the University of Rennes while living with a host family. Enjoy your fall, Kathleen.

Hats off to Cohasset's Zoe Doherty who donated her tresses to Locks of Love! Here Zoe is shown before and after her haircut. Doesn't her new trim look great?

GIFT-WRAP TIME

The Osgood and Deer Hill PSO are happy to announce the launch of its Innisbrook Giftwrap Fundraiser on Friday, Sept. 9. There are two new and completely different catalogs from which to choose this year. They are filled with the quality and stylish giftwrap, which Innisbrook is known for, as well as delicious candy and chocolates, and many, many neat, fun gift ideas. A large assortment of magazine subscriptions is also offered. As always, 50 percent of all sales go directly to the PSO.

Last year's fundraiser had sales of over $39,000 and the monies earned helped fund important programs such as character education, classroom and library grants, curriculum enrichment and teacher appreciation events. The character education programs enhance our children's learning by providing opportunities to teach difficult social skills such as problem solving, conflict resolution and dealing with bullying and peer pressure. The curriculum enrichment programs provide hands-on educational programs specific to each grade to supplement and complement existing curriculum.

New this year for the fundraiser is the PSO's ability to process orders online and have them mailed directly to the student family for distribution. Orders can still be placed with students and at the schools, and there will also be catalogs available for viewing at all the schools, the library, Town Hall, the South Shore Community Center Nursery School and the Carriage House Nursery School. There are various raffles and prizes for participation that are being offered, and the fundraiser will end on Oct. 2nd.

For families receiving the Innisbrook catalogs directly, please make sure that you read the instructions for online processing of your order so that you can take advantage of the speedy and convenient delivery of your order items. If you have any questions about the fundraiser or would like to place an order, please call Mary Jo Blackington, the Fundraiser Coordinator at 781-383-0626. Thank you all in advance for your participation in this beneficial and important PSO fundraiser.

MOO-VING MESSAGE

Here is a very special and mooooving message from Donna Green, local artist and founder of the Magical Moon Foundation. If possible, read this message and see if it is something you would like to take part in. "We are MOOOOOving right along here with the final stages of the Cow Parade fast approaching. Thursday Sept. 21 from 6-10 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Copley Place, 55 cows from the Parade will be auctioned off one by one to benefit the Jimmy Fund," Donna says. "We are trying to come up with a way to get Mooneek, our Magical Moon Cow to come home to the farm and the children battling cancer that she can help on a daily basis. We want to bring her in to all the area hospitals to visit from time to time with a program to empower the children in their fight.

"She represents the incredible courage of children like our Little angel knight, Luca DeLisi and our first knight, Sir River Sage. She's spending her last few days in Christopher Columbus Park in Boston where Luca used to play. Since we are not sponsored by any big institutions or businesses we are going to be amongst everyone else bidding on these cows for various uses. Instead of seeing Mooneek in front of a gas station or in a restaurant someplace we would like to have her spread her beautiful message to sick children. This is our plan."

If you would like to see Mooneek stay with the foundation and at the same time make money for the Jimmy Fund call or email Donna now. Or call the Magical Moon Foundation at 1-800-840-0205. Donna's email address is sage@donnagreen.com. Pledge any amount and on the night of the auction all pledges will be pooled together and so Donna can bid high we to get her back.

"The only way your pledge will be used is if we raise enough money to be the highest bidder for Mooneek", Donna says.

See a picture of Mooneek on the MMF site atwww.themagicalmoonfoundation.org and read about Sir Luca the Loving, Spirit of the Velveteen Rabbit.

Could you use some reliable tools and techniques to help you handle the everyday challenge of raising kids?

Do you feel that fear, force, punishment and threats are not getting the results you want? Would you like new skills to raise your kids in a peaceful, respectful way?

If you're like most people we work with, you want tools you can rely on. And like them, it may be difficult for you to find time and energy to take a parenting course, leaving you stuck, hoping your child's "phase" will end.

The Redirecting Children's Behavior parenting program is a proven approach that works by enhancing communication and understanding between adults and children.

"After the last class I stood in front of my bookcase, the shelves bending under the weight of all my parenting books and said to my husband, "We have no use for these.We now have the only program we will ever need." Thanks!" -Julie, Scituate

Parents and teachers who have made the commitment to take this course say they now have more peace and less fighting among their children. And, they feel more in control.

Historical Society auction to help preserve the past have been meeting weekly as the co-chairs of the event, along with Society President Kathy O'Malley. "We've worked together many times before, we're longtime friends," said Garrison, which made the planning process a very welcome meeting week after week. In addition, there is a group of six Cohasset residents who have served on the Steering Committee including Peter Brown, Julia Jordan Catlin, John Connell, Martha Gjesteby, Jackie Ralston and Phil Smith.

"This building is a treasure, which everyone knows," said Garrison, and those involved in the fund-raiser hope it will be a great success and enable the building's transformation to continue. "Adapting a library to a historical society is a real challenge and it will take a while. We're hoping this will be a big step forward in that process," she said.

The idea of calling the auction "A Backward Glance" was Bleakie's. "She came up with that wonderful title," said Garrison, which then led the group to begin its planning. Through the contacts of the chairs and steering committee members, donations began coming in which got everyone really excited.

Garrison then came up with the idea to put together a tribute book, in which residents can purchase a page and post their own historical pictures of friends and family or their own historical homes. "The business people also came through with flying colors," said Garrison, adding Gjesteby was a champion solicitor when it came to finding commercial advertisers. Once the pages were full, Garrison put her graphic design skills to work and laid out every page.

The Historical Society is very happy to be partnering with the Cohasset Golf Club for its auction, as it not only provides a great venue for the auction, it has allowed them to think outside the box and plan a new, exciting event outside the Historical Society building. She said the Historical Society has worked closely not only with the Golf Club to coordinate the event, but with the South Shore Art Center as well, which has some of its artists contributing paintings to the event. "It is several Cohasset institutions supporting each other and presenting a united front for the benefit of the community," she said.

Most of all, the Historical Society is excited to have Skinner, Inc., auctioning the items off for the Society. "They are renowned in the Boston area," said Garrison. Bleakie added the Golf Club will be setting up one of its rooms in an auditorium-style fashion to accommodate the auction and it will be a very professional event.

The Historical Society encourages anyone interested in attending the auction to visit the Paul Pratt Building beforehand and take a close-up look at the items up for bid prior to the event. "Anyone is welcome, and we hope they will stop by," said Garrison.

"A Backward Glance," gala auction and cocktail buffet will be held Saturday, Sept. 16 at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Golf Club. Tickets are $85 per person and include two complimentary drinks per person. For more information, please contact the Cohasset Historical Society at (781) 383-1434.

"A Backward Glance," co-chairs Nancy Garrison and Eleanor Bleakie, shown here wearing a Norwegian fox coat she donated to the auction, stand in front of a Japanese-style wood screen, which is also up for auction at next Saturday's fund-raising event. Between the ladies stands an oil on canvas painting created and signed by Frank Henry Shapleigh (1842-1906).

Items up for bid at "A Backward Glance"

There will be 41 items up for bid at the Cohasset Historical Society's "A Backward Glance" benefit auction including:

- A pair of wrought iron and cane headboards
- Ten Chippendale-style dining chairs.
- Hamadan Oriental rug, 48 inches by 89 inches.
- Nineteenth century green glass floats.
- Antique hand-carved mahogany settee.
- Early 20th century Noritake "Azalea" china set.
- Two antique Dedham pottery plates in the classic rabbit design.
- Brass and wood ship's clock.
- African celebratory masks
- Numerous paintings created by area artists.

The gala auction and cocktail buffet will be held Saturday, Sept. 16 at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Golf Club. Items will be auctioned by Skinner, Inc. and are currently on display at the Cohasset Historical Society and on the Society's Web site at www.cohassethistoricalsociety.org. Tickets are $85 per person, which includes two complimentary drinks.

Town out from under Judgment

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"What we have now is the good faith of the state."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

The town has finally put the Second Amended Judgment to bed. The Board of Selectmen voted at its Aug. 28 meeting to approve the latest modifications to the Judgment, which will set the wheels in motion to be done with the court order for once and for all.

The Judgment has been a like a cudgel over the town's head for decades and has forced the town to deal with its wastewater woes or face state fines.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis asked selectmen to approve the modifications and authorize him to move forward with the matter.

"If we do this, the town will have fulfilled its obligation and we'll be authorized to file a motion with the court to terminate the judgment," DeRensis said. "This is the result of substantial negotiations and at this point, we are all in harmony."

Those in attendance during negotiations included Town Manager Bill Griffin, Selectmen Gary Vanderweil (formerly a Sewer Commissioner) and Fred Koed, Sewer Commissioner John Beck, and engineer Dan Coughlin.

"Like all agreements, nothing is one-sided. We didn't get 100 percent of what we, or they, wanted, but no one does in negotiations," said DeRensis.

Selectmen had some questions about the wording of the document, which caused them to pause before signing the agreement. One of the major concerns for Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormtizer was the fact the town is being asked to sign an agreement without having a discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection in hand. Selectman Rob Spofford agreed and said it seems more logical to him to receive the permits, which would allow connections to take place to the wastewater treatment plant, then sign the agreement outlining the stipulations.

However, Koed said if the town does not receive permits, the state would understand that is out of the town's control and would not hold it against the town.

Town Manager Griffin added not signing the document gives the town no leverage. "What we have now is the good faith of the state," he said, adding if problems arise with the town's being able to gain permits, the state would be more understanding than if the town chooses to frustrate it further now by not signing the negotiated agreement.

After some more discussion on other minor details of the agreement, the board agreed to authorize DeRensis to move ahead with the finalized document.

The town's most recent round of negotiations with the Department of Environmental Protection has been in process since early 2005. Town Meeting voted in December 2004 to incorporate a schedule for sewering the Little Harbor district into the judgment to solidify for homeowners the town's commitment to the project.

The final Judgment includes plans to connect Little Harbor to the town's municipal sewer system and upgrade the town's wastewater treatment facility to ensure it can handle the increased flow from the Little Harbor area. Work on the project would begin around Oct. 15, 2006 and by 2010, the construction of the sewer system would be complete. Residents would have until July1, 2012 to connect to the new system.

The Judgment also says the town may exempt those homes scheduled to be connected from Title 5 compliance for two years. "This will take the pressure off homeowners who have trouble with their septic system while construction is underway," said DeRensis.

Flashback: The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, which could have cost the town $10,000 per day in fines. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment.*

In 1980, the town and the state agreed on the terms of the Judgment, but it was again amended in 1994 and 1997, when it became the Second Amended Judgment. It was modified again in 1998 and now, in 2006, has undergone its final amendment.

As a result of the Judgment, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility. The town also has a voluntary Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan for those on septic systems.

Cohasset wins Cedarmere suit

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The courts have sided with the Sewer Commission by ruling the Cedarmere development is not entitled to a connection to the town's wastewater treatment plant. The Suffolk Superior Court handed down the ruling on Aug. 21 putting the three-year case to rest.

Former Cedarmere developers, King Taylor, LLC originally filed the suit against the town in the fall of 2003, claiming it had a right to tie in to the town's wastewater treatment plant. Leggat McCall Properties purchased the project before the suit was settled and bought both the rights to build the project and the responsibility of the suit.

When King Taylor filed the suit, it claimed the Sewer Commission had violated state law by denying its sewer application. The lawsuit stated the commission was required to grant Cedarmere a permit to connect its land based on three conditions. First, it abuts a public or private way in which a common sewer has been laid; second, a proper application for the connection had been submitted with the board; and third, the developers believed the development would not pose an immediate risk of overloading the existing sewer system, which the team's engineering consultants at Fay, Spofford & Thorndike said has been determined through much research.

However, engineer Daniel Coughlin, who at that point was the Senior Associate for Tutela Engineering Associates Inc., gave a report to the commission, which contradicted what Cedarmere's engineer found. Coughlin said he was not convinced there would be enough sewer capacity for the project, and recommended a denial until further data could be collected over time.

While the Sewer Commission said it made its decision 50 percent on Coughlin's assessment, the denial was also based on the fact that the project would be located outside the Town Meeting designated Central Wastewater Sewer Service District, and historically, the commission has not granted approval on hook-ups outside the district without a Town Meeting vote.

A court ruling, dubbed the Second Amended Judgment, said the town must sewer certain sewer districts in order to get out from under the judgment. Expansion of the wastewater treatment plant was based on only the proposed hook-ups under the judgment.

While Cedarmere developers contended the project's application could not be denied because the town wanted to reserve capacity for future hookups, ultimately the courts agreed with the town.

JV soccer squad a go

Middle schoolers kick up numbers

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A lack of participants could have led to the demise of this fall's Junior Varsity boys' soccer team. However, the School Committee gave the go-ahead Wednesday to allow the program to be temporarily opened up to eighth grade students, to help boost participation numbers.

When the high school students signed up for boys' soccer this year, only three freshmen tried out, which left the total soccer program with 28 students — 16 Varsity and 12 Junior Varsity. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh explained that is when Athletic Director Ron Ford began sending out the word to the eighth grade there could be openings to fill, and it seemed to generate some interest. Try-outs were held and four eighth grade students came out whom Ford felt were ready to play for the high school team.

By opening the program up to the younger students, the teams will both have 16 players, which allows for full rotation and substitutes should players not be able to attend a game. It will also give the younger players more experience, which will be beneficial when the school graduates six seniors this year. So far things seem to be off to a promising start, as the JV boys beat Rockland in a game held Wednesday afternoon.

This is the second time a JV sport has been opened up to middle schoolers, as last spring the girls softball team was also lacking participation and was able to have a full JV team with the help of five eighth-grade girls. Both the girls' softball and this year's boys' soccer teams are only allowing younger students as part of a pilot program. Other sports, which might wish to recruit middle school students in the future, will need individual approval from the School Committee.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST. . .
YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

ADVERTISEMENT

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we include with our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains at least 12 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 12 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you... you see it everyday. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY 30 SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR.

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES. . .

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS. . .

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 12-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

EDITORIAL

The week that was

Wouldn't it be nice to go back to the week before Sept. 11, 2001 to recapture the innocence of the time?

Here at the Mariner, we pulled out the Sept. 6, 2001 issue to see what made our front-page the week before the world was forever changed.

• We wrote about the town having $1.6 million in "free cash";

• We wrote that the Department of Environmental Protection announced Cohasset was awarded a $16,200 Historic Landscape Preservation Grant for the common;

• Our front-page photos featured a mom giving her kindergartner a hug on the first day of school and a littler girl taking advantage of the last few days of summer vacation by riding rings round the duck pond on her tricycle;

• We had a story about the Community Garden Club putting together a tree advisory committee to help the town select trees to be planted on public property;

• And, yes, in a slow news week we even had a story titled "Like it or not: Winter's coming" in which we talked about predicted snowfalls and miles of roads that would need to be plowed in the months ahead. On the jump page, we ran a file photo of a couple of kids sliding down the hill in front of the high school in a January snowstorm..

• Ironically, considering the winter story, our editorial reflected on the wonderful summer weather enjoyed through that June, July and August.

That Thursday Sept. 6, we had never heard of Mohamed Atta or could we have predicted in just a few days what he and 18 other hijackers would carry out.

The following Tuesday, we were shaken by events that literally unfolded before our eyes. In our Marshfield headquarters, staff stood glued to a television set. At the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square, we tried to hear details over a small transistor radio.

The Mariner editor's sons both called the office that morning just after the plane hit the Pentagon. One phoned her from Ft. Sill, Okla. where he, as a second lieutenant, was going through basic training with the US Army. While in class that morning he said everyone's cell phones started ringing one after the other. The instructors called a break, and he phoned to ask what was going on. Her other son, also a lieutenant in the Army, was stationed in Germany – but on maneuvers in Hungary. He called her on his cell phone within minutes with the same question. Both young men, like so many in the Armed Forces, suddenly faced a different reality.

As with any traumatic and unexpected event— we quickly realized going forward all lives, everywhere, were never going to be the same. While a sense of normalcy would return, it would forever be different.

Back in 1991 on the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, we asked people on the street old enough to remember, where they were and what they thought when they heard the news.

We can remember exactly where we were and what went through our mind when President Kennedy was assassinated that November day in 1963.

This week some of our readers shared their stories and memories of 9/11, a day that will also "live in infamy."

Local aid, health care and other issues

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

I wanted to take this opportunity to update you on several recent developments in the later part of this legislative session.

LOCAL AID — In the past, Lottery Aid was diverted to the general fund. As a result, cities and towns made cuts to local education, public safety and transportation services and raised property taxes to balance local budgets. By ending this diversion, the legislature will send $920 million to cities and towns, an historic amount that exceeds pre-recessionary spending levels. This meant an increase of $332,000 to the town of Cohasset.

Additionally, the House's spending plan begins to address inequities in the formula used to determine Chapter 70 distribution levels and brings total FY'07 education spending to $3.4 billion.

HEALTH CARE REFORM — First in the nation health care reform law makes affordable, quality insurance accessible to 95 percent of the state's 500,000 uninsured residents within three years. This Landmark law is based on the principle of shared responsibility which requires individuals, businesses and the government to participate in this remedy. These reforms promise to significantly lower insurance costs for families and individuals.

MELANIE'S LAW — This law, filed by Governor Romney this spring, was named after a 13-year-old Marshfield girl killed by a repeat drunk driver. I consistently supported the tougher version of this bill, and voted for the strongest amendments until its passage. Specifically, a key provision was the ability to use of certified copies of prior convictions as evidence at trial. In the past, the actual arresting officer was required to appear. These officers could be unavailable depending on the age of the prior conviction and on the timing of the trail.

RETROACTIVE CAP GAINS — Many people in our district received a retroactive capital gains tax bill relating to assets they sold in the early part of 2002. Several affected taxpayers took the issue to the Supreme Judicial Court in a matter know as the Peterson case and won. The Court stated it is illegal to have two tax rates in the same year. The options then were to move the date of the change forward to January 1, 2003 and refund those taxpayers who paid the fixed rate. This would cost the Commonwealth approximately $250 million. Option two was to move the tax rate back to January 1, 2002 and retroactively bill the people who paid the lower rate.

Astonishingly the legislature, over my objection, initially chose the later option. The Department of Revenue was forced to send out bills to people to collect taxes on capital gains sales from three years ago. As a kicker, the bills included INTEREST on money they did not owe until the recent court ruling.

This was by far the most outrageous thing I have witnessed in my time in the legislature. When the issue came up every Republican and some Democrats joined me and voted no. It took the tax bills going out for the leadership to finally sit down with the Governor and work out a reasonable resolution. The Governor had proposed moving the date forward and rebating taxpayers over three years so as not to absorb the entire $250 million in one fiscal year. The agreement allows for the state to rebate taxpayers over four years. Taxing people retroactively is just plain wrong.

GIVING SENIORS GREATER LONG TERM CARE CHOICES — Recently the legislature redirected Medicaid spending to give more seniors and people with disabilities option of receiving care at home. Moving to preferred, cost effective settings will save state taxpayers $134 million in first five years and create greater awareness of community based alternatives.

MERCURY MANAGEMENT BILL — The legislature approved legislation to regulate the sale and disposal of products containing mercury, a well-known environmental contaminant and public health threat. The legislation focuses on the production, disposal, collection and labeling of products that contain mercury. If mercury-added products are sent to landfills and incinerators, the substance is emitted into the air and ends up in lakes, streams, rivers and reservoirs. Most human exposure to mercury comes from eating fish and can lead to brain damage and learning disabilities.

EDWARD G. CONNOLLY VETERANS TAX PACKAGE — This session, the Legislature passed a comprehensive tax relief package to honor the service and bravery of the Commonwealth's military, national guardsmen, and veterans. Named after the bill's chief sponsor, Rep. Ed Connolly, an eight-term Representative and ardent veteran supporter, who died earlier this May, the bill consists mostly of property tax abatements, but also provides relief from the income tax, motor vehicle excise tax, and the sales tax.

Property Tax Abatements – The Connolly Package increases a several existing veterans property tax abatements, which were last updated in 1997. The size of the exemption depends in large part upon the type of discharge, degree of injury, and any medals or honors received.

Gold Star Spouse Exemption – 100 percent property tax abatement is available to the surviving spouse of a veteran, sailor, or member of the National Guard, who died in a combat area or was found to be missing in action. The 100 percent exemption shall remain effective for the first five years following death and be retroactive to September 11, 2001. After the 100 percent exemption expires after five years, the spouse shall receive a $2,500 exemption. Both of these exemptions shall remain effective until either the surviving spouse dies or remarries.

Suspension of Active Duty National Guardsman – A municipality, upon local option, may temporarily suspend the payment of property taxes due by a member of the Nation Guard or their spouse, while on active duty. Once the taxpayer is placed on inactive duty status, all penalties, charges, and interest shall be waived, provided the taxes due are paid within six months.

Give and take at MBTA meeting

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Dispute Resolution – Nothing new officially… However, courtesy of our elected representatives an informal meeting was scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 6th with Daniel Grabauskas, General Manager of the MBTA, and his staff at the Transportation Building in Boston. We had the opportunity to attend that meeting along with the Town Manager and the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, who led the meeting for Cohasset. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss informally, but in depth, the major issues that separate the MBTA and the Town. The meeting was open and honest between both parties. There was a lot of give and take and various posited potential outcomes were reviewed at length. At the conclusion of the meeting, which lasted about an hour and a half, each side agreed to do additional fact finding and research so that when the Town and the MBTA meet again, we might find some middle ground that provides an acceptable compromise for each of us. We will do our homework and eagerly await the next meeting.

Pond Street changes – We have spoken a number of times about the changes that are/will be taking place at the new railroad crossing between Spring and Pond streets. Work now continues in this area at a feverish pace. Sunset Rock has been reduced to a shadow of its former self to allow for a reconfigured Pond Street. The accompanying photo shows the changes in the rock looking up at the new route Pond Street will be taking to cross the train tracks. The reason so much of the rock was removed was to provide a gradual grade down to the tracks and to improve sight lines at the crossing.

Spring Street looking toward Cushing Road where a temporary roadway was constructed across the completed tracks.

On the section of Spring Street just off of South Main Street, there have been a lot of changes. The train tracks have been completely installed across this section of Spring Street. Then, a temporary road way was constructed across the completed tracks. This can be seen in the accompanying photo taken looking toward Cushing Road from the South Main Street side of the tracks. This new road was paved and striped earlier this week. It is possible that before you read this paper, the new road may be opened to traffic. Once this road is opened, the area where Pond and Spring Streets meet can be closed for construction. Detours will use the roads on the hillside to bypass the Pond St. construction. When the Pond street construction is complete, the temporary road across the tracks will be completely removed and this portion of Spring Street next to the skating pond will be permanently closed.

Looking up Pond Street at Sunset Rock. The reason so much of the rock was removed was to provide a gradual grade down to the tracks and to improve sight lines at the crossing.

As a last bit of information, we just found out that while all of this construction is underway, with its attendant detours, the Town will be doing resurfacing work on Norfolk Road, which is also used as a detour route for the Pond Street closure. What fun! It's for times like this that each of us should get a citation for valor.

'Let there be peace on earth'

COMMENTARY

JAN CARLSSON-BULL

Recollections of that morning day still haunt. No, I wasn't "down there." I had just descended the steps from my bus stop at New York City's Port Authority — midway in my daily commute into the city from Montclair, New Jersey — and happened to look up at the CNN monitor, barely glancing since I had an early meeting All Souls, the Unitarian Church I served for seven years as Assistant Minister. My glance turned into a stunned stare. A small aircraft had just flown into one of the towers downtown. "Oh my God," I uttered instinctively. Such response echoed from person to person as a small crowd gathered in front of the monitor. "How," we mused, "could anyone be so off course? What an idiot!" It never occurred to us at that point that it could be a terrorist attack. Head swimming, I quickly realized what time it was and continued my descent to catch the E train.

When I walked into my study on the Upper East Side, my colleagues were huddled in the study of our senior minister, glued to the television. That was when I learned that a second plane had struck the South Tower. This was not an accident. Before all else, I checked on my daughters. One took the subway from Brooklyn to her teaching job in Jersey City. Every morning she surfaced at the World Trade Center to get coffee before catching the PATH for the rest of her commute. I prayed that she was already at work. She was. I checked on my other two daughters; both worked in Manhattan. Both were safe. I called members of the congregation who lived and worked below Canal Street. No cell phone service! No answers!

Fast forward to the following night. The horrific reality was beginning to sink in. The Unitarian Church of All Souls hosted one of the countless candlelight memorials around the city. A line formed from Lexington Avenue halfway down the block on 80th Street. Our sanctuary overflowed with New Yorkers in need of sanctuary, sacred space to pray and cry and light candles and be comforted and comfort one another and wonder, wonder if she or he had made it out. Our choir sang "Shall we gather at the river?" When our First Parish choir in Cohasset offers this soulful anthem this coming Sunday, I know my eyes will fill up once again.

A spare two weeks later I was at Ground Zero, joining fellow clergy as a chaplain, under the auspices of the Mayor's Emergency Management Agency. I spent the night at Ground Zero, mostly listening, often praying, with firefighters still searching for their brothers, with crane operators, digging deeper, with recovery dogs no longer called rescue dogs. It was a night that haunts me, just as that morning haunts so many of us. For the next many months, my ministry at All Souls extended to chaplaincy under the aegis of the Red Cross at the Family Assistance Centers — the expansive space set up impromptu on the Hudson River and the modest space that occupied a bedraggled building in the West Village. As I worked alongside other Unitarian Universalist clergy, alongside priests, rabbis, and imams, story after story poured forth from large-eyed children, from bewildered adults. Each spoken fragment, like the ash still sifting through the air of Lower Manhattan, carried a flash, an image of a loved one lost, a relentless déjà vu of an "almost." On a boat trip between the Center on the Hudson and Ground Zero, when survivors were brought to that site so sacred and so profane, one woman remarked to me, "How could I be so undone? I lost 80 co-workers, but no family!" "You have at least 80 reasons for your grief," I responded. "You lost 80 members of your everyday family."

I could go on. Story after story still moves inside me. Yet, as I stand on this slice of history that we all share, amid this early September day five years later, I am as saddened. What have we done with the grief that we knew then? What have we as Americans done with the good will poured our way from every corner of the earth — although women and men from close to 90 nations died that day as the towers imploded, as the Pentagon shook, as the fourth plane careened into that field in Western Pennsylvania? So many of us still connect a pre-emptive war with what was done on that morning. We've lost almost as many women and men in that war as were lost that morning, not counting the tens of thousands who call Iraq home. As I stood on the edge of "the pit" amid that night I spent at Ground Zero, I prayed, "Please, God, please don't let us respond with revenge. Help us to hold our grief long enough and deep enough so that we never, never visit upon other nations the horror that has been visited upon mine." Do I think God was just stone deaf? No, not really. I believe God is still waiting for us to take seriously that song of the angels: "Peace on earth, good will to all!" No easy song. No easy lyrics. No easy message. No easy life they were announcing.

Come Sunday we will sing together in the beloved Meeting House of First Parish a song that rose from the hopes of teenagers gathering at a workshop high in the mountains of California some 50 years ago. Like the inhabitants of the Towers, they represented all races and religions. Like those who were lost, they had hopes and dreams. Like the angels of that first Christmas, they had a message. Like Moses, they came down from the mountain with a gift for us all. "Let there be peace on earth, and let it begin with me," they sang.

We'll sing it this Sunday. Let's dedicate our song for peace to all who were lost that morning, to all who have been lost in a war that fans the terror of terrorism, to all who are lost amid a misunderstanding of where the responsibility lies when we ask God for peace. May our rememberings and our gatherings be blessed by a dedication to peace, peace that begins with us, peace that begins with me.

HEALTH NOTES

Avoiding exposure to mosquitoes

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Sept. 1, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health announced that EEE virus had been detected in mosquitoes collected from Cohasset. In all, 45 EEE virus positive mosquito samples were identified in 21 Massachusetts towns from six counties. In 2005, Cohasset no EEE virus positive mosquito samples were identified.

EEE is a rare but serious illness spread by Culiseta Melanura mosquitoes. Four human cases, two of whom died from infection were identified in 2005.This year the State has had three cases and one mortality. A 9-year-old boy from Middleborough developed a fever Aug. 18 and was hospitalized two days later. The child died last week. The first case identified this year was in a 52-year-old woman from Lakeville and the second case in a 23-year-old man from Acushnet.

IMPORTANT: Culiseta melanura is a mosquito species that is not attracted to mammals. It does its host seeking in the canopy and feeds almost entirely on birds. The mosquito is responsible for maintaining eastern equine encephalitis virus in bird populations and plays a significant vector role in that regard. Culiseta melanura initiates the infection in bird populations; other mosquito vectors are responsible for equine and human cases.

Middleborough is in the area of the state determined to be at the highest risk for human cases and was sprayed to kill the mosquitoes that transmit EEE during the first aerial application Aug. 8 and then again last week during the second round. The boy's exposure to the virus could have been as early as Aug. 8 but is more likely to have occurred the following week.

While EEE can infect people of all ages, people under 15 years of age or over 50 years of age are at greatest risk for serious illness. The Cohasset Board of Health and the MDPH recommend that you take action now to avoid mosquito bites and reduce mosquito populations around your home and neighborhood by taking the following steps:

- Reduce Risk Around the Home Install or Repair Screens — Some mosquitoes like to come indoors. Keep them outside by having well-fitting screens on all of your windows and doors.
- Drain Standing Water - Mosquitoes lay their eggs in standing water. Limit the number of places around your home for mosquitoes to breed by either draining or getting rid of items that hold water. Check rain gutters and drains. Empty any unused flowerpots and wading pools, and change water in birdbaths frequently.
- Avoid Mosquitoes and Mosquito Bites Avoid Outdoor Activity During Peak Mosquito Hours. The hours from dusk to dawn are peak mosquito biting times for many mosquitoes. Take extra care to use repellent and protective clothing during evening and early morning or consider avoiding outdoor activities during these times. The schools have notified parents and some outside activities and sports practice for some teams has been canceled. Clothing Can Help reduce mosquito bites. When possible, wear long-sleeves, long pants and socks when outdoors. Apply Insect Repellent when you go outdoors. A variety of insect repellent products is available. Always follow the instructions on the product label; repellent products provide guidance on how frequently they may be used and provide precautions on how they should be used. Pay particular attention to restrictions on use for children.
- Help Your Community Report Dead Birds to the DPH. Dead birds may be a sign that West Nile Virus (WNV) is circulating among the birds and mosquitoes in an area. Call 1-866-MASS WNV to report a dead bird. By reporting dead birds, you can play an important role in monitoring WNV.

The most effective repellents contain DEET (N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide), Picardin (KBR 3023) or Permethrin. DEET (avoid concentrations over 30 percent) and Picaridin can be used directly on skin and on clothing. Permethrin can be used only on clothing. Oil of lemon eucalyptus has also demonstrated efficacy against mosquito bites, with protection similar to repellents with low concentrations of DEET.

More information about the mosquito-borne diseases found in Massachusetts, EEE and WNV is available at the following DPH website: www.mass.gov/dph/wnv/wnv1.htm. Information about local mosquito control programs is available by calling your local health department.

For questions about aerial spraying and health effects of pesticides or to report any concerns about adverse reactions to pesticides call the MDPH Center for Environmental Health at (617) 624-5757. Information about WNV is also available by calling the DPH recorded information line at 1-866-MASS-WNV (1-866-627-7968).

Pluto is demoted

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Here we are only a couple of days into the first semester of the academic year and already the kids at New Mexico State University are deep into Protest 101.

No, it's not the quality of the tacos in the college cafeteria that bugs them. It's not the failure of the administration to provide double beds in the dormitories although the protesters wearing T-shirts with the legend, "Size Doesn't Count!"

It's the demotion of the planet Pluto to a "dwarf" planet.

Some 50 students and faculty turned out for the protest, which surprised a lot of people who didn't know that 50 people at New Mexico State University knew there was a planet named Pluto. Most of them thought it was a dog.

Pluto, the ninth planet for 76 years, was discovered in 1930 by an astronomer named Clyde Tombaugh who was following the directions of Percival Lowell who thought he noticed a wobbling of the planet Neptune caused by the pull of Pluto.

It was named for the Roman god of the underworld who reigned in a world of darkness, since the planet was 3.664 billion miles from the sun. Its satellite was called Charon for the boatman who ferried the dead across the River Styx to Hades.

Later it was deduced that Pluto had no pull at all since it was only half the size of the Moon and the only wobbling of Neptune was in Lowell's calculations and the discovery of the ninth planet at the right spot was just a happy accident.

Lowell was also responsible for the "canals" on Mars.

An Italian astronomer, Giovanni Virginio Schiaparelli, was watching Mars on its closest approach to earth one day in 1877 when he thought he saw channels, or "canali," in his native language.

Since Lowell's Italian was rusty at best, the markings on Mars to him became "canals," which had to have been made by man-like creatures of an advanced civilization who weren't subdued until Orson Wells did the job some 60 years later.

Pluto was demoted by vote of members of the International Astronomical Union, which has charge of the naming of comets, asteroids and such space debris. Plutonians among us argue that only 400 of the thousand or so members of the IAU voted.

That will draw Al Gore and John Kerry into the controversy since they had similar problems in Florida and Ohio.

I suppose their next move will be an appeal to Congress. After all, our legislators are advanced enough to where they can rule a stem cell is a human being and they could tell by watching TV that Terry Schiavo was about to come out of her 15-year coma.

After that, it will have to come before the Supreme Court, where conservative Justices Scalia and Thomas probably will lead us back to 1930 and we'll have nine planets again. That could make Pluto an issue in the 2008 election.

How do you feel about Pluto, Senator Rodham Clinton?

Fifth Anniversary of 9-11

'Don't Tread On Us'

" As I watched the 9/11 attack on TV, my feelings were remarkably the same as when I was a very young boy and listened on the radio, as our whole Country did, to the reports of the Dec. 7th, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor. I lost relatives in WW II. My older brother Bob served in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War. My Dad, who had once served on the Battleship Arizona prior to WW II, tried to re-enlist after Pearl Harbor but was turned down — his age, five minor children and his police position in Boston were the reasons. I served in the U.S. Army as a 1st Lt. when it was "my time", voluntarily. It was an incredible, character building experience that I treasure. We were a patriotic Country during those periods of crises and stress. A larger crisis is now well underway.

"My thoughts since 9/11, which I realize probably had their roots during the Vietnam "conflict", is how much patriotism we have lost among large, "younger" segments of our current population. This is not the great America —The United States of America — that I grew up, served, learned from and matured in. We have great trials as a Nation heading our way. This decline in patriotism will not serve us well in meeting and surviving, intact, those challenges. It is truly a major concern now and getting worse. I fear for my America! Having studied Latin and ancient Rome for too many years in my younger days, I sense an analogy?

"My patriotism peaked while serving in the military years ago —which is an experience that brings into perspective, like a sledge hammer, the realities of this world, the sacrifices of those patriots who preceded us and made possible the great standard of living most seem now to take for granted. I have never forgotten the pride and deep sense of patriotism I developed when, for example, standing in the mud and rain at the crack of dawn with fellow troopers saluting the American flag as it was raised. To this day, the hair on my neck still stands up every time the Star Spangled Banner is played and/or our great Flag is raised at any gathering I am at. I have sincere concerns about the direction we are heading. I share similar concerns expressed, for example, by the patriot Dr. Bennett in his recent book "The Death of Outrage".

"The Israelis have it right — every citizen must serve at least 6 months in the military upon reaching age 18. That intention-at awakening of patriotism that has allowed their citizen-based military to courageously prevail over countless assaults since the late 1940s founding of their Nation. Their founders/leaders learned well from the outrages imposed on them for many centuries, its called wisdom, and they will never forget the horrific past nor take survival for granted. Quo vadis the United States of America? God be with us and guide us in this time of great need for restoration of Patriotism. Old fashioned? —No! Wisdom of a lifetime? — you bet! We must stand together—Don't Tread On Us! Emphasis on "US"!

— Richard E. T. Brooks

'Plane sat on tarmac'

"A caller called into a radio talk show originating in New York, describing the sight of an airliner passing his apartment building at unusually low altitude. News reports on the radio and television grew exponentially over the next hour, flooding the airwaves with confused eye witness accounts of the situation...first believed by many to be a malfunctioning jet and then, the second impact left no doubt that this was a coordinated attack.

"At the time of the attack, my best friend sat on a Delta airliner on the tarmac at Logan Airport awaiting taxi and take-off to Bermuda for their wedding anniversary. We speak to each other by cell phone everyday, so it was not unusual for him to call just as the reality of the situation was increasingly coming into focus. But he knew nothing. The Delta flight crew offered no information on the attack.

"I asked if he knew what was going on. 'No, we're just sitting here, 40 minutes now,' he said. 'Why, what's up?'

"As I relayed the latest news of the hijackings to him, I could hear passengers around him asking the same question. 'What's happening?'

"As I spoke, he spoke, filling in his fellow passengers, who huddled around him to be informed. As he tells it, he began to look about the cabin of his plane looking for suspicious individuals. Was the odd gentleman two rows up who wrung his hands over and over and over a clandestine hijacker? He felt immediately at risk, being on the ground rather than in the air offered little solace. 'I have to go,' he said and hung up the phone.

"An hour later my phone rang. 'Can you pick us up at the boat? Look's like we'll be staying put for awhile.' Like many Americans, his wife refused to fly for a year."

— Charles F. Field, Jr

'Explaining to children'

"I was in a meeting when my wife Robin called me about what she thought was an accident involving a plane crashing into one of the WTC towers. Once we realized what really happened we spent the rest of the day tracking the events on CNN and trying to communicate with friends or other Fidelity employees in the New York and New Jersey area. Fortunately most of the people we knew were okay. My closest friend worked at the World Trade Center, but fortunately he was on a business trip to the west coast at the time. The entire day was surreal, like a really bad dream.

"For a while we changed our travel plans and avoided plane travel. We soon realized this is what the terrorists wanted and decided to resume normal travel plans. The single most difficult thing has been explaining these horrible events to our children. Unfortunately this has become a regular event given the recent terror events in London and elsewhere throughout the world.

"These events have forever changed our lives and the way we look at the world, but we need to keep positive and hopeful."

— Steve Fusco

'Native New Yorker'

"As a native New Yorker, I lost my youngest first cousin, N.Y. firefighter Bobby McPadden, and three family friends, all firefighters: Deputy Chief Ray Downey, and firefighters, Terrance McShane and Michael Otten from Deer Park, Long Island, where I grew up.

"We also lost my husband's and my fellow colleague and friend, Bill Weems, who died on the second plane that hit.

"Five years later, I keep remembering when I was 14 and I went to the ribbon cutting of the Twin Towers back in 1973. My father took my hand and said, "Margaret Mary, if these towers come down, we'll be in WW III'."

— Margie Sullivan Kaplan

'Remaining vigilant'

"My daughter Connie's (Connie is a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School) husband, Ray Bartels, was on the 47th floor of Tower Two when the first plane hit Tower One. He was very lucky to make it out.

"As a result, 9/11 is never far from our thoughts; this particularly applies to Ray as he continues to work in Lower Manhattan.

"On the morning of 9/11 I was playing golf in Wayland with a Polaroid group and used a friend's cell phone to call home from the golf course to make sure that Ray had gotten out safely. It was a helpless feeling being so far away and not being able to do anything to help.

"I'm afraid it's inevitable that we cannot avoid another 9/11. All we can do as a nation is to remain vigilant and be smart as we face the threat, without compromising our freedoms."

— Galt Grant

'AJ's dusty wingtips'

"There was nothing unusual about my cousin, A.J. Erickson, being impeccably dressed in a suit and tie on 9-11-01. He took the subway on his routine commute to work in Manhattan. He walked across the plaza at the World Trade Center and arrived at his office a few blocks away, early as usual.

"When the towers came down, the electricity in his building went out, and his cell phone did not work. He and his fellow coworkers walked down the fire escape stairway and into the toxic dust. Outside and unable to discern the usual landmarks, he walked to the train station and took the first one back to his hometown, Foxboro, Mass.

"AJ did not return to his job in Manhattan. He left his dusty wingtip shoes neatly parked next to his bed where they remain, unmoved, today."

— Tom Belyea

'Trying to comprehend'

"I turned 16 on Sept. 6, 2001. As a present, my parents decided they would give me a weekend in New York City with my father. This gift would end up being disturbingly ironic in just five days. In the meantime, I got my learner's permit, started my sophomore year of high school, and began my second season of tennis. My dad and I had just started to plan our trip when it hit.

"I sat with my second period history class that morning as we watched the second plane crash into the towers. Minutes later we stared, big-eyed and silent, as the towers crumbled. And the terror did not end there. Flight 93 crashed not far from the town outside of Pittsburgh where I lived at the time. My father was in Boston on business and flew into Logan right before the hijackings. One of my uncles was a volunteer firefighter on Long Island, not far from the city, and another uncle lived in downtown Washington. D.C. It seemed that everywhere something happened that day, I had a relative far too close by. Even in our tiny town of 5,000 people out in Western Pennsylvania, several people lost friends and family members. When I got home after school, my mom and I curled into ourselves and sat on the couch watching the news without speaking, trying to comprehend what had happened.

"About a month after September 11th, my parents decided to move us back to the Boston area. Although the move was difficult, being so much closer to my extended family is comforting. During 9/11, when most of them were in Massachusetts or New York and we were in Pittsburgh, they all seemed so far away. I had assumed they would always be there, until that gorgeous fall day showed us that nothing is permanent."

— Kathleen O'Donnell

'We were all sad'

"On Sept. 11, 2001 Carriage House School was temporarily over at the Congregational Church while renovations were being done at the Parish House. I remember parents literally running to school to come and get or just be with their children as the tragedy unfolded.

"As the days passed we noticed that children were building towers in the block area and watched as each other knocked them down, but built them up again; parents stayed longer at school and some just hung out during the day.

"School became a safe zone for parents and children. Truly nobody wanted to leave each other. Children of 3 and 4 became aware of the American flag, usually children have little interest in other flags beside their own. Children came to school with stories of losses in their family, every family had a loss somewhere. It was a time that still deeply moves me as an educator.

"We became a very tight school. Kids drew pictures of burning building with eerie smoke coming out of the windows, there was a sadness that penetrated everything. I will never forget so many sad children at one time, we were all sad. I remember the children using and wanting to paint with black paint more, much more than usual..

"These are my memories of the "day the world collapsed" (One of my children I remember, said the world is going to fall down. It moves me to this day thinking of what that 3-year-old observed in his world)."

Georgie Gladdys,
Director Carriage House School

'Preparing for the worst'

"I was the Superintendent-in-Chief in Boston at the time. I was in my office at police headquarters that morning. The media relations office was next to me. An officer from media came and poked his head into my office and said a plane had just crashed into the World Trade Center. I first envisioned a small plane had crashed at the World Trade Center on the waterfront in South Boston, figuring it had just taken off from or was trying to land at Logan Airport. I walked over to media and saw the the jet sticking into the side of one of the twin towers in New York. As the minutes went by and the second jet hit the other tower, we all sprung into action.

"Knowing our country was under attack, we put out notices to all personnel of what was taking place. We worked with city hall, state agencies and our business community to help move people out of our skyscrapers and move people out of the city. This went on all morning and into the afternoon. We were preparing for the worst. As the afternoon moved into the evening, our fears of the city being attacked started to diminish. But I knew our way of life was going to change forever."

'World changed forever'

"9/11 was such a beautiful day... Clear skies, a crisp, early September day with warming sunlight and a light breeze that made you think all was well and right with the world.

"I was working at home when my wife heard on the news that a plane had crashed into the World Trade Center. I raced to the television, saw the news footage, and quickly recognized that that was not an accident.... And then the world as I knew it changed forever.

"I grew up on Long Island and several people I knew personally or by name were killed in the World Trade Center. My hometown, which is on a direct train line to New York City that is home to many people on Wall Street, was emotionally devastated."

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

'Only 8 at the time'

"I don't remember much about 9/11, I was only about 8. I do remember how everybody seemed different around me, a change in emotions is something even a child can notice. There was a frenzy of news and reports happening, but like many kids that were my age I was unaware of many of the tragedies.

"Five years later, I now notice all of the things I didn't know before. Stories of survivors and heroes are displayed in movies, memorials are held yearly, and it shows that everyone was deeply affected by the terrorist attack. I give my sincerest sympathy to those who were hurt or lost someone dear to them and I hope that one day everything will be set right."

— Emily Toomey

'What 9/11 has become'

"On 9/11, I was at a hearing at Plymouth Superior Court first thing that morning. I'm sure everyone remembers how beautiful a day it was. The hearing ended rather abruptly when a clerk came in to tell the judge to come see the television. We could also hear commotion outside. A friend I ran into outside told me that the Trade Center had collapsed and I remember how unbelievable that sounded. While watching the images on television that day and for days later, I admit I shed a tear or two. I had watched those buildings go up as a kid and it was particularly difficult to see them come down like that.

"That November, friends and I were in New York and we went down to the site. General traffic into lower Manhattan was blocked, and it was amazing how quiet New York could be. It was as if someone hit a noise switch at Canal Street. At that time, you still could only view from between buildings a couple of blocks away, but wreckage was still very visible. I was taken by the eerie quiet, the dust still coating shop awnings for blocks around, the smell of fires still burning after two months and later, by the guns and new security at the airport.

"I am still morbidly fascinated with all things 9/11, but still saddened by the pictures and personal stories. These days, however, I am as equally concerned with what 9/11 has become, how it and particularly it's 5th anniversary is being used (as in the news of the President's new PR offensive). Unfortunately, 9/11 has cynically been turned by some into a means by which to question the patriotism of many of us and into a symbol of perpetual fear and uncertainty, purposefully stoked to justify an ill-conceived war, and numbing us to the disturbing assault on democracy from within."

Ready to run

Hopes are high for CHS girls soccer

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Talk to CHS girls soccer head coach Deb Beal about her team for this year, and one thing is for certain.

They'll be ready to run.

Entering her ninth year at the helm of the Skippers program, Beal has always put great emphasis on staying in proper shape for soccer. Looking at her team through that lens for this upcoming season, the coach says she is encouraged by what she sees.

"I am impressed with our overall fitness level," Beal said. "It's obvious, as it is every year, that some people took their training seriously and some did not. I think that this is the fittest team I have had to start any of my past 11 years of coaching high school soccer."

This year's Skippers side features a blend of experience (10 seniors, two juniors) and younger players (six sophomores, most with a season of varsity experience already under their belts). Beal said Thursday one of her team's biggest strengths is its talent down the middle of the pitch.

Junior Anna Haggerty was a South Shore League All-Star last season at the sweeper position, and will start the season at that spot this year. Sarah Coggins saw extensive playing time as a freshman last fall and will bring her considerable all-around skills to the stopperback position.

Beal has high hopes for another sophomore, Maggie McGoldrick, who will play in central midfield. McGoldrick will link up on attacks with sophomore center forward Torey Hart, Cohasset's other returning league All-Star.

Hart will be joined on the starting frontline by Kara Wilcox, one of the team's four senior captains, and sophomore Kristin Monaco. Senior Jamie Genovese and junior Meg Anderson will the Skippers' top striker options off the bench.

The Skippers scored three goals in their preseason friendly against Hingham, giving Beal another reason for optimism.

"A nice thing that I've seen so far is our finishing," said the coach. "In the past, that's always been a problem for us. But against Hingham, it just happened so easily, and not a big deal was made out of it.

"I'm hoping that because the middle of the field is so strong for us, it won't be hard to keep the field wide and create a lot of scoring chances."

In the midfield, McGoldrick will be flanked by senior captains Emily Coggins and Caren Garber. Cohasset's fourth senior captain, Lara Novak, is recovered from knee surgery and will lend another offensive talent to the midfield picture. Fellow senior Alyssa Hinman will also see time at midfielder, although Beal likes her versatility and said Hinman can play anywhere on the pitch.

CHS boys hope to replicate second half of season opener with Rockland

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

ROCKLAND – If the Cohasset High boys soccer team plays the rest of its season like it did in the first half of Wednesday's season opener, this could be a long year.

If the Skippers continue to play like they did in the second half of their 3-1 loss to the Bulldogs, they should be in decent shape.

Cohasset came out flat in the first half, and found themselves down 3-0 at the break. Head coach Rob Leary had a spirited discussion with his team at halftime, and after the game chalked up the slow start to inexperience.

"I challenged them at halftime to show some hustle and show some pride, because there wasn't any in the first 40 minutes," said Leary. "They came out and played a lot better in the second half. We easily could've tied that game.

"I think the first half was just inexperience. We lost nine

TOSSING BATTING PRACTICE

NICK FRENCH

Tossing batting practice, while trying to change my name to something cooler, like Kason Gabbard in the hopes of being claimed off waivers…

It's all the more frustrating what happened to the Red Sox after they win a couple of games, it's just easier when they lose every game remaining, and let the flame of hope burn out quickly.

I'll never begin to understand the volatility of relief pitchers when Julian Tavarez can be putrid all season out of the bullpen and then throw seven innings of superb ball against one of the best offensive teams in the American League.

One cure for the Red Sox blues: take a vacation. After spending a weekend in northeast Alabama devoid of any Red Sox information or news, I came back thoroughly refreshed, and easily able to ignore any and all news.

As a fantasy baseball owner there is nothing more unnerving than reading on the ESPN ticker 1000 miles from home, Papelbon, left game in ninth (shoulder), and then not being able to find out anything else for a couple days.

It's impossible to understand how important football is down south until you actually visit. The two most important stories on the front page of the Decatur Daily Herald last Friday, one was a cancer research breakthrough made in Washington, the other was about parking and tailgating changes for the upcoming season at Alabama football games. For context Decatur is two and a half hours from Tuscaloosa where the Crimson Tide play.

Last Friday night there were five Alabama high school football games on television in my hotel room, even for a high school reporter like myself I found that odd, but I still watched.

Saturday I met the starting tailback for Hoover high school, the number one high school football team in the country, and the subject of an MTV reality show airing right now documenting last season. When I asked what schools were interested in him,

In defense, seniors Colleen Richardson and Haley Haracz are both coming off solid seasons and figure to play the outside back positions. Beal has been impressed so far with the play of sophomore Sammie Lehr, whom the coach says may play at sweeper, allowing Haggerty to move to one of the outside back spots.

The Skippers have a couple reliable keepers in senior Shalea Daly and sophomore Johanna Brophy. Beal said Brophy will play a lot out in the field as well to take advantage of her all-around talents.

Rounding out the Skippers' varsity roster is senior Karoline Holt, an exchange student from Norway whom Beal says has fit in well with the rest of the team and will work her way into the playing rotation.

Beal said there are a few freshmen who are capable of playing at the varsity level, but will start the year at JV to get some experience. The JVs will be coached this season by Jim Willis, who comes to Cohasset after heading the Scituate High boys program for the last several years.

The girls kick off their season today (Sept. 8) in Holbrook, and Saturday will travel to Nantucket to take on the Whalers. Cohasset follows that up with its home opener on Sept. 12 against league newcomer East Bridgewater, and host Abington on the 14th.

The schedule is rather abnormal this season – after beginning the season with two road games, the Skippers will have a three-game homestand, culminating with a Sept. 18 match against Carver. They then go 27 days before their next home game, with seven roadies in between. Cohasset then finishes its season with six straight homers, and Beal says that is fine with her.

"I prefer to play home later in the season anyway," she said. "EEE is going to be an issue, not for practice times but for home night games. Hopefully we'll get an early frost so that in October we can have a nice supportive and excited fan base for some evening games."

But that is still down the road; the coaches and players are focused on starting the season strong.

"We still have a lot to work on and I am eager to get the matches started so we can focus on more tactical stuff and get caught in the competitive aspect of the league," Beal said. "The league is up for grabs and hopefully we can get a little run going with our non-leagues and jump right into EB and Abington next week."

he nonchalantly rattled off USC, Alabama, Auburn, LSU, Florida, and a host of other top 20 schools. Then I asked what his 40 time was, and his response rather humbly was 4.2, or Michael Vick range.

One difference between Boston and everywhere else, in an airport in Cincinnati, Johnny Bench, the hall of fame catcher for the Reds and arguably their greatest player in team history is sitting and waiting for a flight. At no point in the 25 minutes he was there was he even approached for an autograph or a handshake. Everywhere else, superstar athletes are just one of us.

Prediction time. Call me a homer, but I don't see anyone beating Abington in the South Shore League this year. With Cohasset rebuilding, only Norwell is in the way of another Green Wave trip to the postseason. The Clippers have solid depth, but probably not the skill positions to line up with Tim Wells, John Creamer, and Joe Gabriele.

Throw in an offensive line that has a pair of mammoth tackles in Ryan Marston and Ronnie Dunn, and the Green Wave running game will be as solid as ever between the tackles. Not to mention the aerial game.

Another Thanksgiving victory could also be on the horizon, and the first Tuesday after Turkey day should be cleared for an evening football game with Super Bowl aspirations on the line.

As for professional football, I see the Pats winning 11 games and the AFC East, though that could jump to 12 or 13 if Deion Branch finally realizes that $14,000 a day is real money, he'll actually have to pay back if he doesn't sign a deal soon. As long as Tom Brady is upright, and Ben Watson is running wild through the middle of the field like he did against Washington, this passing attack will be fine.

The Patriots did win a Super Bowl without Branch, in which David Patten and Charles Johnson were the two receivers behind Troy Brown, and Jermaine Wiggins was the tight end threat. The difference is that this year there will be a running game with Corey Dillon and Laurence Maroney splitting carries.

The front seven is solid, and they should be deep in the secondary if the cornerbacks actually stay healthy this year.

FROM TWO HALVES, PAGE 15

starters from last year, and some of the new kids don't know the intensity that they have to come out with at the varsity level. We didn't even try hard in the first half, and that's what bothered me."

The second half was a much better picture, as the defense closed the gaps that had been forming in the first half. With that, the Skippers' attack went to work and finally broke through in the 60th minute.

Junior midfielder Mike Grimm, who played an exceptional game in the middle of the pitch for Cohasset, made a nice run down the left wing to start the attack. The Bulldogs defense gave Grimm space, and he took proper advantage of it, working the ball all the way into the penalty area.

Grimm got off a shot that was well saved by Rockland keeper Bobby Christie, but the rebound caromed to an open Adam Smith inside the six-yard box, and the Skippers senior made no mistake with his finish to put Cohasset on the board.

Just four minutes later, sophomore Lenny Brown did some nice work inside the area to set up senior striker Tristram Norman, who rocketed a shot off the crossbar.

"If that shot goes in, I think we wind up tying this game," Leary said.

Norman and junior striker Sam Roth both had quality chances a few minutes later, but both were kept out by Christie, who made seven stops on the afternoon for the Bulldogs.

Unfortunately for Cohasset, the three goals allowed in the first half hour were too big an obstacle to overcome.

Freshman keeper Will Wise made two of his nine saves early on, but could do little in the 11th minute when Rockland freshman Alex Issa beat his mark to the ball in the left side of the Cohasset area and slotted it home past a sliding Wise.

Rockland continued to give Cohasset fits, with senior Eliomar Maciel and sophomore Andy Reed dominating the midfield. The Bulldogs defense – seniors Derek Boughter, Matt Mullen, Tom Anderson and freshman Ryan Boughter – snuffed out just about any attack from Cohasset, particularly imposing their dominance in the air.

It was 2-0 in the 25th minute, as freshman Bruno DaSilva converted a well-struck penalty, given after Cohasset was called for a handball in the area. Senior Dan Erickson made it 3-0 in the 29th, converting a good cross from the left wing by Issa with a nice shot from just inside the edge of the area.

Leary made a tactical switch early in the second half, moving junior Evan Deutsch from stopper to sweeper and senior Chris Donze from sweeper up to the midfield. Donze worked well with Grimm in the middle, and Rockland's scoring chances dried up with Deutsch playing behind senior Luke Genello, junior Adrian Lucas and sophomore Danny Brady in defense. Leary said after the game he would stick with Donze in midfield at Deutsch at sweeper for the foreseeable future.

The boys have a few days to build on the season opener, as they don't play again until Tuesday when they travel to East Bridgewater for their first South Shore League game. The Skippers follow that up with a road game on Thursday (Sept. 14) against Abington.

Tennis initiative seeks applicants for scholarships at Weymouth Club

The costs associate with learning how to play tennis and golf can prove to be a roadblock to many young people who would like to learn how to play (or improve) these games.

Golf is responding to this problem on a national level with its high-profile "First Tee" program that offers youngsters the opportunity to learn and develop golf skills at little to no cost to them.

Tennis, on the other hand, has not yet developed such a program on the national level. However, the South Shore Tennis Initiative has been formed locally in attempt to provide financial assistance to South Shore youngsters looking to learn the game or improve their skills.

Founded as a non-profit, 501c corporation, the Tennis Initiative intends to fund a grass root effort that will help grow the game of tennis by providing youngsters of all backgrounds with an opportunity to play tennis and at the same time participate in al physical activity that will help to stem the growing problem of obesity among adolescents.

The Initiative is currently raising funds through a number of its own initiatives in order to provide scholarships, purchase tennis equipment and supplies, market and promote new and existing tennis programs, supplement professional coaching fees, and launch new services and programs.

"Our goal is to distribute 10 or more $400 scholarships each year to deserving youngsters on the South Shore," says Paul D'Amico, director of tennis at Weymouth Club. "These scholarships can be applied to fees for instructional clinics, private lessons, or court time at South Shore tennis facilities," he says, "or for travel expenses to tournaments, fitness training, or new equipment. Scholarship eligibility is based on a combination of financial need, academic standing, and community service."

Scholarship applications are available at Weymouth Club, 75 Finell Road in South Weymouth, or by calling 781.337.4600.

EEE-infected mosquito found in Cohasset

swamps and is spread from bird to bird by mosquitoes. If a mosquito infected with the virus bites a horse or human, the animal or person can become sick.

The first symptoms of EEE are a high fever, typically from 103 to 106 degrees, a stiff neck, headache and lack of energy. The symptoms typically present themselves three to 10 days after an infected mosquito bites a person. Swelling of the brain, called encephalitis, is the most dangerous symptom. The condition of the patient tends to deteriorate rapidly, and some patients fall into a coma within a week.

According to Plymouth County Mosquito Control, there are roughly 2,700 species of mosquitoes worldwide, of which 50 can be found in Massachusetts. Only female mosquitoes blood feed, as they need the energy from the blood to develop their eggs. Not all mosquitoes feed on human blood, as is the case with the infected mosquito found in Cohasset, as some prefer other hosts such as birds, or reptiles and amphibians.

After the mosquito eats a blood meal, it will find a spot to lay its eggs, usually near water, which can take a few days. The mosquito will continue the cycle of finding a blood meal and laying eggs until it dies. Most females die before their second blood meal, but those which have two or more blood meals are the ones that may spread disease, as they come into contact with more than one blood source.

There are a variety of online sources for information on the EEE virus including the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Web site at www.mass.gov/dph. Information can also be found on the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project Web site at www.plymouthmosquito.com. For more local information, please contact the Board of Health office at (781) 383-4116.

Rails With Trails gets green light from selectmen

The town voted to allocate $25,000 in Community Preservation funds for a Rails With Trails feasibility study at the 2003 Annual Town Meeting.

Preservation funds for a Rails With Trails feasibility study at the 2003 Annual Town Meeting. The town received the report from the Waterfield Design Group in July.

"There is a definite need for the Board of Selectmen to make its position known," said Bobo, as its endorsement will solidify the town's support for the project. Bobo said he has been in contact with Rails With Trails supporters from other towns and the more towns that support the project, the better the chance of receiving federal funding.

Pratt added he has spoken with members of the Massachusetts Area Planning Council, which is encouraging towns to go after federal funds for transportation projects. He said the town has "a federally mandated right," to receive state funding for projects such as this one and it should jump on the opportunity.

The feasibility study outlines three different plans for pedestrian access in the right-of-way, which is typically 66 feet wide. In Waterfield's design, the trails would be roughly 10-feet wide and have a 2-foot shoulder. They would connect the Cohasset station to the North Scituate station with a 10-foot wide multi-use path where feasible, and would connect to residences, businesses and other attractions. Due to the fact the Greenbush line includes some double track sections, in some areas paths would need to be limited to the side containing the second track.

Pratt and Bobo reminded selectmen the feasibility study is only a study and the town is not bound to follow its design. They asked the board to either vote for or against the concept of beginning a Rails With Trails program, but not to endorse the proposed designs.

Selectman Fred Koed, who is the town's representative on the MAPC, said he thinks it would be a great first step for the town in terms of public transportation planning. Pratt said with the trails, the train station would be connected to the town center, as the MBTA did not include sidewalks in its plans to make that possible.

The board said the idea was a great one and agreed to draft a letter of endorsement to be sent to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council for the project.

"A couple of extra hands would make a big difference."
— Brian Adams, facilities manager

"Many preventative maintenance programs have been established in the past year. For example, fire alarm and sprinkler system maintenance and inspection, security/burglar alarm maintenance, water treatment, kitchen hood maintenance, generator maintenance, boiler maintenance and inspection and elevator maintenance," he said in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin. "This year we plan to implement roofing preventative maintenance and inspection along with electrical systems preventative maintenance and inspection. In the future we need to implement a preventative maintenance and inspection program for the bleachers, along with a playground program."

Adams said he currently has a three-man maintenance crew (which includes himself) for the town's buildings and four daytime custodians for the schools. The schools also have an outsourced cleaning crew, which comes into the buildings at night. The daytime custodians take care of things such as spills in the cafeteria, shoveling snow, or other maintenance issues. The crew at night is responsible solely for cleaning.

Adams said one person on his three-man crew is responsible for cleaning Town Hall, the library, the police and fire station and the DPW garage. "That puts a big burden on one guy," he said. He added in terms of maintenance, he and one other person cover all the issues that arise at all the town's buildings. With such limited resources, there is no one available to clean the teen garage, the harbormaster's building or the senior center. "A couple of extra hands would make a big difference," he said.

At Town Hall there are 10 major facility needs, which should be taken care of sooner rather than later. The building needs its air conditioning chiller replaced, a new air-conditioning system for the old section of the building and the basement meeting room, window replacement, electrical upgrades in the old section and restroom upgrades in the old section. It also needs a security system, as it does not currently have one. Window sills need replacing as they are rotting due to moisture and the auditorium needs upgrades including paint, door and floor replacement, and lighting upgrades. The parking lot needs improvements and the building needs a generator, as it does not have one right now.

The library has some significant issues as well, as it has some major roofing and drainage problems. The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, located in the back of the library, has flooded, as has the basement of the library. Adams said he had the independent consulting firm of Gale Associates take a look at the building's roof and it said some of the slate should be replaced. In light of the report, Adams has put out a Request for Proposals to solicit bids for the work. There are also issues with the gutters on the building, as they were taken off during construction and never replaced. There is also no security system at the library.

The police and fire station currently needs a new roof on the police station side as well as its generator replaced to include power for its air conditioning system. The building also needs electrical upgrades. The DPW garage is in need of a security system.

The schools have significant needs as well and the middle-high school needs roofing repairs and building envelope investigation/repair in the library. Adams said during wind-driven rains, there is a leak in the library, and things need to be opened up to figure out where the water is coming from. The building also needs a new building automation system (BAS), which optimizes the start-up and performance of the building's HVAC system. The BAS would be linked with the other buildings. The visitors' bleachers were also taken down on Alumni Field and should be replaced, and the field's track needs to be repaired. The science classrooms also need exhaust fan systems.

The Deer Hill School will need a new BAS system to be linked with the other schools, as will the Osgood School. Osgood also needs a new emergency generator, as it currently has none, and carpet replaced upstairs. The playground equipment needs to be upgraded or replaced, as the school now has a new preschool and runs only through grade two, and some of the equipment at the school is meant for older children. The school used to have students up to grade three. Adams said it has also been requested that pavement be installed at the rear of the building.

Selectman Rob Spofford questioned why the property needed to be paved out back. As the former chairman of the School Building Committee he said the decision was made on purpose to not pave at the rear of the building. Adams said DPW Superintendent Carl Sestito made the request, as it would allow the paved areas to be plowed during the winter and provide another means of emergency access to the school via Old Pasture Road. However, Spofford said not paving behind the school was to ensure the Old Pasture neighborhood would not have undue traffic and the administration at the schools did not want to have cars driving close to the playground.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said in his opinion, the issues which need to be taken care of first are the leaks and drainage problems that are causing water damage. Griffin said the town would do the best to remedy the situation and said he planned to meet with the Capital Budget Committee this week to discuss articles that should be included on the fall Special Town Meeting Warrant.

Parents can help prevent tardiness

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Okay everyone: exhale. The first week of school is in the bag. It's back to the routine of school for Cohasset; with some significant changes. Students now pay to park their cars in the school parking lot, pay a bus fee, or take advantage of Mom and Dad's chauffer service that leaves them in front of the building. The line of cars may be the deciding factor in tardiness, so parents please keep things moving and don't watch to make sure the kids get into the building. The 30-foot trek from the car to the entrance is not by any means treacherous, and precious seconds often separate the on-time student from his tardy counterpart.

The 7:30 start time is 20 minutes earlier, but students are released now at 2 o'clock. As students scramble to finish (or start) their summer reading, bodies fill the hallways and classrooms. The familiar hopeless half-dead stare of students waiting for June hasn't quite set in, and for the time being traces of summer linger in our minds. Even though the students are getting back into the swing of things, there is still myriad school-related news.

• High School Welcome Back Dance Tonight 7:30-10 pm

The 30-foot trek from the car to the entrance is not by any means treacherous, and precious seconds often separate the on-time student from his tardy counterpart.

• Girls Soccer plays at Holbrook today at 3:30 and again at Nantucket Saturday at 11am.

• The Football team is at Nantucket Saturday, kickoff at 1:30pm

• Field Hockey plays at Sturgis Charter School at 9am Saturday

• Boys Soccer opened their season at Rockland on Wednesday.

• Girls Field Hockey played at East Bridgewater Thursday

• Boys Golf had a match at Mashpee High School Thursday

• The PSO met at 8 am Thursday

• Cellphones, iPods and other electronics are no longer allowed in classrooms. They will be confiscated if seen or heard, so just use common sense.

• Each student has been assigned a locker with a built-in lock. The Student Parent Handbook contains the new locker policy.

• Students and Parents should read the Handbook closely, and make sure they agree with its policies before returning any forms. Once you sign an agreement, you accept everything in the Handbook.

• Cohasset's student-run newspaper The Spinnaker has a new staff! Members ran for positions. Election results will be featured in next week's column.

• Interested in advertising in the Spinnaker? Contact Advisor Christine Berman at cberman@cohassetk12.org.

• Student Council elections for school-wide positions are fast approaching.

Welcome back, everybody. Here's to another year of achievement and academic excellence or for the slacker, another 180 days of school. Either way, let's make this year one to remember.!

Video on stuttering

Kids who stutter have a lot to say, and friends can show them how in a "Stuttering: For Kids By Kids," a new DVD starring real kids who stutter now available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Many children who stutter have never met anyone else who struggles with the same disability. But in this new video from the Stuttering Foundation, they meet other kids who recount how they handle challenges such as teasing, speaking out in class, and teaching others about stuttering.

Swish a lively and engaging animated basketball character that was designed by students from the Computer Graphics Technology Department of Purdue University, narrates the video.

The video and DVD are available free of any charges to all public libraries. For information, call the Stuttering Foundation toll-free at 800-992-9392, visit www.stutteringhelp.org or write info@stutteringhelp.org

Music at the Gazebo

"Music at the Gazebo" concerts will take place this year at Veterans' Memorial Park at the intersection of Nantasket and Samoset Avenues across from Lucky Star Restaurant in Hull on Sept. 10, 17, and 24 from 3 to 4:30 pm. Sponsored by the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home of Hingham, the Sunday afternoon concerts will feature big band favorites for the 10th summer in a row.

On Sept. 10, the Gregg Savage Quintet will play tunes from the Big Band era, Swing, and Dixieland. A beautiful rendition of the national anthem will be sung by Yi-Hui Wu, an international student at the Longy School of music in Cambridge. Free t-shirts will be given to the first 150 concert-goers to arrive.

Veterans This provision extends the existing total exemptions on the sales tax (on motor vehicles) and motor vehicle excise to those veterans deemed permanently disabled. Such determination shall be made by the Registry of Motor Vehicle's Medical Advisory Board.

SENIOR "CIRCUIT BREAKER" — Under the Circuit Breaker Program, an elderly owner or renter of property in the Commonwealth with high property taxes may be eligible to claim a refundable credit against his/her state personal income tax. The credit is equal to the amount by which one's property tax payments exceed 10 percent of the taxpayer's income. The credit is capped at $840. Taxpayers must meet certain income and asset criteria in order to qualify for the Circuit Breaker credit.

Under changes made to the Circuit Breaker Credit this session, the Legislature raised the qualifying value of the taxpayer's primary residence from $452,000 to $600,000. This increase allows thousands of more Massachusetts residents to be eligible for the Circuit Breaker Credit.

EXPAND PROPERTY TAX DEFERRAL PROGRAM —In an effort to prevent seniors from being priced out of their homes due to increasing property taxes, many municipalities allow taxpayers to defer payments of property taxes through a Property Tax Deferral Program. In order to qualify, a taxpayer must be 65 or older and have an income of $20,000 or less (by local option, a municipality may adopt a higher income threshold, not to exceed $40,000). The total amount deferred cannot exceed 50 percent of the taxpayer's interest in the home, and any deferred amount is due, along with 8 percent interest, upon the home being sold or the taxpayer's death. While many municipalities currently offer a Property Tax Deferral Program, these programs are often underutilized due to the high rate of interest attached to the deferral.

This session, the Legislature amended the Property Tax Deferral Program, by giving the municipality the flexibility to set its own rate of interest, so long as such rate does not exceed 8 percent. This will enable more elderly, low-income residents to take advantage of the deferral program.

OXYCONTIN COMMISSION — This session I was one of three legislators hand picked by the Speaker to sit on a commission to explore how Massachusetts can combat its prescription drug abuse epidemic. The abuse of prescription drugs now stands only second to marijuana on the list of commonly abused drugs and studies indicate that 1 in 5 teens has tried painkillers such as OxyContin and Vicodin.

According to both epidemiologists and the Massachusetts police, OxyContin is widely available in the Greater Boston Area. OxyContin is very similar to heroin; however at $80 for one 80 milligram pill it is much more expensive. This had led many abusers of OxyContin to turn to heroin instead.

The 12-member commission worked to gather testimony on actions that can be taken to reverse the trend of abuse. The recommendations are lumped into four categories: Prevention and Education, Distribution, Dispensing, Handling and Disposal, Prescribing and Monitoring, and Expanded Access to Treatment. The recommendations will affect state agencies, community organizations, Parent Advisory Councils, teachers, law enforcement, health professionals, manufacturers, pharmacies, and insurers.

Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that consists of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

Movie review

'Factotum' toasts Bukowski

"Factotum" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

How much you enjoy "Factotum," a beer-soaked tale featuring Matt Dillon as a writer on the skids, depends on how seriously you take Charles Bukowski, the philosopher-drunk, romancer of wretchedness and favorite of middle-class hipsters.

"Factotum," which is based on Bukowski's 1975 novel of the same name, is worth watching for Dillon's confident and likable lead performance. Financed with Norwegian money and directed and co-written by Norwegian Bent Hamer ("Kitchen Stories"), this down-and-out story is otherwise familiar.

Dillon plays Hank Chinaski, Bukowski's alter ego and a character formerly brought to life by Mickey Rourke in Barbet Schroeder's more estimable "Barfly" (1987). Hank is one of those stiffs for whom breakfast is a beer with a raw egg in it.

Like the writer Colin Farrell played in this spring's similar "Ask the Dust," Hank's pronouncements make him sound not like a writer but a self-enamored blowhard. Excuse me if I take such musings on the meaning of life lightly from a source with a shot or three of Jack Daniel's in his belly.

Bukowski's work makes me feel like I am trapped in a room with a boring, sodden uncle. In the course of his "Barfly"-like adventures, accompanied by voice-over commentaries, Hank shacks up with wino waitress Jan (Lili Taylor), hooks up with drunken slut Laura (Marisa Tomei) and eventually meets rich alcoholic Pierre (veteran French actor Didier Flamand) and his live-in boozehound hussies (Karen Young and Adrienne Shelly). Hank also teams up with a fellow drunk (Fisher Stevens) to fleece working-class co-workers out of their hard-earned cash.

Writer Hank Chinaski (Matt Dillon) seeks inspiration in a smoke and a drink.

"Factotum" will remind some of the legendary Marco Ferreri's Bukowski-based "Tales of Ordinary Madness" (1981), a film in which Ben Gazzara played the Bukowski stand-in.

Co-written by Jim Jarmusch collaborator Jim Stark ("Mystery Train"), "Factotum" is a vaguely Nordic ghost of American indie films past. Dillon's work passes muster, and his Hank is surprisingly agreeable. But Rourke gave the role a more comic element, a Falstaffian expansiveness, and only Gazzara had the nerve to play the Bukowski figure as a boring narcissist.

Rated R. "Factotum" contains foul language, substance abuse and sexual situations.

Cohasset born actor/playwright performing in 'The Pillowman'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Actor and playwright John Kuntz wins frequent praise for the wide range of roles he plays on Boston-area stages. So when he heard raves about a new play, "The Pillowman," by an internationally renowned young writer, Kuntz wasted no time in seeing what all the fuss was about.

"So many people said such good things about it that I just decided I had to read it," the Cohasset-born Kuntz recalled by telephone last week from Watertown where he opened Wednesday in a New Repertory Theatre production of the play by Irishman Martin McDonagh. "I read it first just as a reader, without the burden of knowing I would be doing the play. I found myself in a daze. It was gripping, hilarious, heartbreaking and very, very scary. I could not put it down. It is a play that sucks you in. I think it is one of the best plays I have ever read in my life."

Audiences in London and New York agreed. It earned an Olivier nomination for Best New Play in 2004 for its mounting at the National Theatre in London, while a 2005 Broadway production, which starred Billy Crudup and Jeff Goldblum, earned two Tony Awards. It was just the most recent success for McDonagh. He spent just eight days writing his first play, "The Beauty Queen of Leenane," in 1996. By the time that play was first produced in London the very next year, McDonagh was 27 and had four plays being staged simultaneously in London, according to his publisher, Bedford Books.

New Rep Artistic Director Rick Lombardo directs the New England premiere of "The Pillowman," which tells the story of a writer (played by Kuntz) living in a totalitarian state whose ghoulish stories suddenly seem to be the inspiration for a series of grisly child murders. As the writer faces questioning from a good cop/bad cop team employing some very unusual interrogation techniques, one main question emerges: is an artist responsible for outcomes when life imitates art?

Kuntz — whose own work as a playwright has earned Elliot Norton, Independent Reviewers of New England and Fringe Festival Awards — has also given thought to that conundrum.

"An artist reflects back what is going on in the world around him and he also allows the audience into his own world. There's a distrust and wariness of artists sometimes, based on what people believe he or she intends with a certain work. When in actuality, a work of art is something that can be seen in a myriad of ways. It is dangerous to blame the artist for the outcome of his work, and yet he or she does have a certain degree of responsibility," explains Kuntz who graduated from Emerson College and earned his Master's in Playwriting from Boston University. "The best play or work of art is bound to be controversial. This play presents several different ideas very well. It is not pedantic or didactic at all. It is a genuine drama with a very gripping story. As you watch the play, you're thinking, 'What are these people going to do?'"

John Kuntz in The Pillowman

If McDonagh's other plays — including "The Beauty Queen of Leenane," "The Cripple of Irishman" and "The Lieutenant of Inishmore" — are any indication, they aren't going to go easy on one another.

"McDonagh creates a vicious and cruel world in his plays. In 'The Pillowman,' however, while there is great cruelty, there is also great kindness. You come to love some of these characters. There is humor, too, although sometimes you laugh out of sheer nervousness. McDonagh has created a very theatrical and imaginative play."

The same might also be said of Kuntz's own plays, including his latest, "Jasper Lake," which won both the Michael Kanin and Paula Vogel National Playwriting awards. As an actor, Kuntz will be back at the New Rep from December 21-31 - as part of that company's new Downstage at the New Rep series — to reprise his role as the wickedly funny Crumpet the Elf in 'The Santaland Diaries," David Sedaris' acerbic account of working as an elf at Macy's at Christmas.

A 1986 graduate of Cohasset High School (CHS) - where his late father, Dennis Kuntz, was a longtime physical education teacher — Kuntz first developed an interest in the theater while a student of former CHS drama and English teacher Ron Emmons.

"I was Snoopy in 'Snoopy: The Musical,' and I did several other shows, too. Ron Emmons really encouraged my interest in acting when I was in high school. He's in Illinois now, working with the Heartland Theatre Company, but we're in touch by email all the time."

Emmons may have moved on, but current Cambridge resident Kuntz, 38, has no similar plans. "I'm so settled here. I have a partner and a home and a family on the Cape. I would never want to live anywhere else but Boston. Everything I love is here."

(John Kuntz stars in the New Repertory Theatre production of "The Pillowman," through October 1, at the Arsenal Center for the Arts, 321 Arsenal Street, Watertown. For tickets and information, call 617-923-8487 or visit www.newrep.org.)

Dana's return to alma mater a laughing matter

When Emerson College alumni Denis Leary and Anthony Clark take the stage at Boston's Cutler Majestic Theatre next Wednesday to celebrate 30 years of comedy at Emerson, as part of the seventh annual Boston Comedy Festival, they will be joined by Quincy-born comedian Bill Dana whose history with the school extends much further back than 1976.

"I started at Emerson College 60 years ago this month and I graduated in 1950. Those of us who started back then were in the unique position of helping to create a college. Emerson had been primarily a school of oratory for young women," explained Dana by telephone from his home in Nashville last week. "After World War II, the GI Bill changed all that."

Dana may have graduated well before the 1970s, but he is pleased to be returning home to co-host, along with Comedy Central President Doug Herzog, the special event, which will help fund a scholarship fund for Emerson students studying comedy. Indeed, the benefit performance is not the only way Dana has offered his hands-on support for comedy at the college. In 2005, the comedian and writer - whose early television career included stints as performer and head writer on "The Steve Allen Show" and 17 guest spots on "The Ed Sullivan Show" - helped form the American Comedy Archives at Emerson.

Comedian Bill Dana

"The whole idea behind the American Comedy Archives (www.emersoncollege.edu/comedy) was to recognize that comedy plays a very important role in society. What we do is interview significant people in comedy about their craft. So far, we've recorded interviews with everyone from Jonathan Winters, Phyllis Diller and Louis Nye to Bea Arthur, Norman Lear, Dick Gregory and many others. The oral histories are then made available for the exclusive use of students and faculty. It was my closeness to Teddy Cutler that gave me the idea to do this project. He and his wife, Joan, are wonderful people and very generous philanthropists."

When it comes to giving, Dana is legendary, too, for giving some comic giants their most memorable bits. One of his earliest clients was Don Adams who would later star in the classic 1960s sitcom "Get Smart."

"My start in New York in the early 1950s came when I was hired to write for Don Adams. Stand-up was just too hard for me. I was so happy to be a writer and not a performer that I just loved every minute of my time with Don. I wrote Don's famous 'Would you believe?' line and he developed just the perfect vocal intonation to make the bit really work for him."

Dana developed a legendary character of his own with the utterance of five little words, "My name is Jose Jiminez." When fellow "Garry Moore Show" comedy writer Neil Simon asked Jose whether he had ever been an astronaut, the bit took off. Dana's Hispanic character became a kind of mascot for the American space program. On May 5, 1961, the first words spoken from the ground to an American entering space were, "OK, Jose, you're on your way."

Dana's own first words were spoken several years earlier and north of Cape Canaveral. Born William Szathmary in Quincy on October 5, 1924, Dana was educated in the Quincy Public Schools before becoming a decorated combat infantry veteran of WWII. It was a Quincy High School classmate who recommended that Dana attend the Back Bay college.

"I heard about Emerson from Eugene Wood who suggested it might be just the place for both us," recalls Dana of Wood, his early comedy partner and later the announcer on the long-running television game show "Family Feud," with Richard Dawson. "Eugene was a good friend of mine and I'm very glad I listened to him back then. I was never too much of student. We were the class clowns, but we never imagined we would become professional comedians. College was very good for us."

Bill Dana will appear at the Cutler Majestic Theatre at Emerson College, 219 Tremont Street, Boston, Sept. 14. For tickets, call 1-800-233-3123. For more information, call 617-782-8100 or visit www.bostoncomedyfestival.com.

Plymouth resident Dick Hilker will exhibit his photographs in a new show titled "Up Close and Personal" at the South Shore Natural Science Center's Vine Hall Gallery from Sept. 7-Oct. 9. Many of the pieces in this collection were made with camera and film, others were the result of scanning the subjects on a large flatbed scanner. In a style frequently referred to as "painterly," he uses state-of-the-art equipment and techniques to transform filmed and scanned images into prints of enduring quality. Such prints are often described as giclée, a French term applied to these high quality reproductions. Meet the artist and learn more about this style of painterly art at an opening reception on Saturday, Sept. 9 from 2-4 p.m. at the Science Center. The event is free and the public is invited to attend.
The South Shore Natural Science Center is located at 48 Jacobs Lane in Norwell. For more information call 781-659-2559 ext. 203.

Democrats likely to vote

But election is yawn for GOP

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The Town Clerk's office shares Secretary of State William Galvin's expectation of a low voter turnout for the Sept. 19 state primary due to the lack of legislative races, especially on the Republican ticket.

The results of the primary will determine whose names will appear on the Nov. 7th election ballot.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Both Precinct 1 and Precinct 2 vote at Town Hall. Absentee ballots for those with physical disabilities or those who will be out of town during polling hours are available until noon Monday at the Town Clerk's office.

"While we always hope for a large turnout, we're expecting about 35 percent," said Assistant Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre.

— Carol St. Pierre, Assistant Town Clerk

The lone Republican race is between Kenneth G. Chase, an educator, and Kevin P. Scott, a former Wakefield Selectman. The winner will challenge U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is running for another term unopposed on the Democratic ticket.

Cohasset has 5,492 registered voters, including 1244 Republicans, 1189 Democrats, and 2744 unenrolled.

Only registered Republicans, Democrats and those who are unenrolled can vote Tuesday. Unenrolled voters can ask for either a Republican or Democrat ballot and do not have to change

Cook Plans

Developer unveils project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After roughly three years of trying, the Cook Estate could be developed after all. Private developers from Abbott Development of Boston came before the Planning Board Wednesday to introduce themselves, give an overview of the plans they have in place for the Sohier Street site, and gain feedback.

The development team, which includes Cohasset resident Robert Durant and his business partner Jim McAuliffe, is getting ready to sign a Purchase and Sale agreement with the trustees of the Cook Estate and plan to begin work within a month to 45 days from the signing. Currently, plans include building a maximum of 27 town-home units, which are age targeted to the 55-plus crowd, spread over the estate's 19-acres.

Abbott Development is currently building a similar development to what it has in mind for the Cook Estate, at the Pinehills in Plymouth. Developers brought pictures of those units to show to the Planning Board for comparison.

International retailer has roots in Cohasset

Lululemon to open at Derby Street Shoppes

By Sara Mason Ader
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset native and former Reebok CEO Robert Meers is bringing his latest venture — a Canadian maker of yoga-inspired athletic apparel called Lululemon Athletica — to the East Coast via Hingham's Derby Street Shoppes.

Lululemon already operates 12 stores in the western half of the United States and a total of at least 40 stores internationally. Its unique clothing and accessories for both women and men include shirts, tank tops, pants and shorts that come in such funky colors as "portapottie" green and "fingerpaint" blue.

Some of these items are currently for sale in downtown Boston and New York City through showrooms with limited staff and hours, but the first major East Coast retail store is scheduled to open Sept. 22 between White's Bakery and Jasmine Sola at Derby Street.

Schools set goals for the future

Slanetz wants Cohasset in top 10 in state

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset school district is charting a course for the future. To that end, a set of district goals has been established by both the administration and members of the School Committee's Strategy and Policies subcommittee, which together will help lead all three schools through the next year. The goals follow what has already been set for the district through all three School Improvement Plans and the district's five-year Strategic Plan.

While the administration had set three goals for this year, which focus mainly on academic achievement, the School Committee has added an additional fourth goal to be carried out. Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz, who co-chairs the Strategy and Policies subcommittee with Jamie Williams, suggested the committee also strive to more effectively communicate with the community.

Slanetz said the School Committee should proactively build up its relations with local media, by perhaps submitting a weekly column to the Mariner. He said the district also needs to have a commitment to accountability and open books. "We

Radar trailer getting requests

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The new police radar trailer is becoming a familiar sight along Route 3A near Shaw's Plaza. Since the new device arrived at the end of August, it has been placed along that stretch of the state highway to monitor speeds. The speed limit between the Scituate line and Beechwood Street is 35 m.p.h.

This week's police log featured the first request for the radar trailer to be placed in a local neighborhood.

Hingham, which has had a similar trailer for a couple of years, regularly gets requests from residents concerned about the speed of traffic on their street.

Police Chief James Hussey said he expects citizens to ask for the trailer, which in itself can act as a deterrent to speeding. Motorists can read their actual speed on the digital display and compare it to the posted speed limit, which is also shown on the trailer.

Hussey said the police will honor requests but their first priority is to use it along Route 3A which is the town's most accident-prone area. "There are many places we want to put it," Hussey said. "But we will leave it there (near Shaw's) another week before moving it to other locations along 3A." The chief mentioned lower King Street and King Street by Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza as problematic areas where speeding and driver inattention are issues.

He explained that the speed limit along much of 3A, which also runs through Scituate and Hingham, is 50 m.p.h. He said police are urging MassHighway to take another look at speed limits along the 3A corridor and especially in light of increasing development and the Greenbush train station.

"The numerous curb-cuts along 3A coupled with speeding can provide a recipe for disaster."
— Police Chief James Hussey

"The issue of traffic lights at the train station and possibly at lower King is being raised," Hussey said. "This provides a good opportunity for MassHighway to take a hard look at 3A in Cohasset and determine what the speed limits should be.

"The numerous curb-cuts along 3A coupled with speeding can provide a recipe for disaster," he said.

School traffic

The first week of school was a trying one at the middle-high school as parents dropping their kids off got used to the new routine. Compounding the problem is the closure of Pond Street at Spring Street for Greenbush grade-crossing work.

One entry in the police log described the situation as a "traffic disaster."

Chief James Hussey urged all motorists to be patient and allow more time. He said traffic issues the first week or so of school are to be expected.

Hit and run

At about 4 a.m., Monday (Sept. 4) a motorist who was traveling along Nichols Road reported a red car came toward her in her lane, striking her VW Jetta, police said. The woman was able to provide a partial plate (Massachusetts registration) "H25."

The woman driving the Jetta said the accident caused her to slam on her brakes and she ended up going off the road and into a tree.

Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to area towns. The incident is under investigation and anyone with information should call the police at 781-383-1055 and ask for the detective division.

The woman was not injured, police said.

MV stop

A Brockton man is facing a slew of charges following a traffic stop on Hull Street at about 2:07 a.m. last Thursday (Sept. 7). Police said Mark A. Santos, 22, was traveling 15 m.p.h. over the speed limit. A police officer followed the vehicle and observed he was swerving over the double yellow lines and pulled Santos over. He was charged with speeding in violation of special regulation, marked lanes violation, and operating on a suspended license. There was also a warrant out for Santos from the Brockton Police Department.

Brake trouble

A garbage truck careening along without brakes created a few hairy moments at about 3 p.m. last Wednesday (Sept. 6). A caller reported a large blue garbage truck traveling down 3A going through red lights. The caller reported the driver yelled something out the window that sounded like "brakes."

The truck went into Hingham and was pulled over on East Street. As it turned out the truck driver's registration had expired and he was also cited for driving a vehicle with defective equipment.

Goose hunting

The Canada goose hunting season opened last Tuesday (Sept. 5) and runs until Sept. 25. Hunting hours are from 1/2 hour before sunrise to sunset daily except Sunday. Hunting license and waterfowl stamps are required. No shooting is allowed within 500 feet of a dwelling or 150 feet of a roadway.

Boston Magazine posts incorrect SAT scores

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The annual education edition of Boston Magazine is somewhat anticipated by many area schools, as it provides rankings for all the public and private schools in the state. However, this year, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh was not excited to see Cohasset's numbers as the SAT scores printed were not what the school had submitted.

While the print version of the magazine did not include any of Cohasset's figures — as only the top 25 public and private schools had their information included — the magazine's Web site had incorrect SAT scores for Cohasset as well as many other area schools. Walsh said she called the magazine and spoke to a fact finder who said he had no idea how it happened.

"They said thanks for calling attention to the problem and that they regretted the error," said Walsh, to which she replied, "Not nearly as much as I do."

The first set of SAT scores published were 348 for the average verbal score and a 345 average for math. Those scores were drastically different from the scores submitted, which were 562 average verbal, 569 average math and 581 average writing. The tests administered in 2006 were the first to include writing scores.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said looking at the numbers, there were a number of "shocking errors." He said the Lexington High School figures were not included in the list at all, and should have been as it is one of the best performing high schools in the state, and the numbers for Boston Latin, which was in the list of top 25 schools in the state, was listed online at 374 for verbal and 308 for math. Boston Latin's SAT scores were really 620 for the average verbal and 644 for the average math score. The correct figures were published in the print version of the magazine, and have since been corrected online.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said looking at the numbers, there were a number of "shocking errors."

This is the second time in the last three issues of the magazine in which Walsh has noticed an error in Cohasset's figures. In September 2004, she noticed the magazine had ranked Cohasset High School as 69th out of roughly 150 schools in the state, based on figures which were not correct. The magazine also incorrectly printed data, which indicated Cohasset, does not send any students on to private four-year colleges.

Walsh said the mistakes in Boston Magazine, "proves the point about what we use for resources," as what is printed cannot always be trusted, she said.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Stores pass tobacco test

The Board of Health would like to congratulate all merchants who sell tobacco products on the recent "sales to minors compliance check." The check was held July 31, 2006 and no sales to minors occurred. The merchants are: CVS, Stop and Shop, Walgreens, Shaws, Cohasset Mobil, Leo's Exxon, Curtis Liquor, Cohasset Plaza Liquors, Village Wine, Cohasset Food Mart and Cohasset News.

Schools accept another grant

A grant accepted at the Aug. 23 School Committee meeting triggered a matching grant offer by Dr. Paul Schubert of Sohier Street. Schubert had donated $1,500 to be divided between all three Cohasset schools, and said he would match any private or corporate donations of cash, goods, or services up to an additional $500.

"This is in direct response to the failure of the voters to consider even level funding as a viable option to secure this town's future," he stated in a letter sent to Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh.

On Aug. 23, the School Committee accepted an anonymous grant in the amount of $1,500 and Schubert made good on his word, sending in an additional $500. "I am delighted that local families have generously contributed to the Cohasset Schools," his letter states.

In a related note, the School Committee also accepted a donation of 400 gyroscope wonder globes for the Osgood School from a Cohasset family.

Technical difficulties for School Committee

The School Committee meetings have not been properly broadcasting on cable television. The Sept. 6 meeting was not televised at all and a resident came to the high school during the Tuesday, Sept. 12 meeting to inform the committee the picture was coming through, but sound could not be heard. The committee said the problem would be fixed before its next meeting, Sept. 20.

Integrated preschool Openings at Osgood

The Cohasset Integrated Preschool currently has a few openings in both the morning and afternoon classes. Children must be 3 years old prior to Sept. 1, 2006 to be eligible for the morning class and 4 years old prior to Sept. 1, 2006 to be eligible for the afternoon class. If you are interested in having your child participate, please contact the Student Services Office at (781) 383-6104 for an application and details regarding tuition.

Orders being taken for spring bulbs

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is currently taking orders for a selection of spring flowering bulbs that will fill gardens with color from April to June. The assortment includes a violet-rose peony, flowering tulip, double narcissi with huge creamy yellow flowers, parrot tulips, deer- and rodent-resistant alliums, as well as petite muscari and scilla. Bulbs ordered now will become available at the end of September, and each order will be accompanied with directions for planting. Dutch organic bulb food is also available and recommended to enhance a garden's performance.

To order now for the best selection, call 781-383-0838. The bulbs will also be sold at the Cohasset Farmer's Market on Cohasset Common on Thursdays from 2:30 to 5 p.m., beginning Sept. 28. All purchases help fund club programs and community services.

Schools set goals for the future

need to develop a trust with the community that will lead to a common understanding of the needs of the district," he said.

The School Committee has set its next meeting date for Sept. 20 at 7 p.m., at which time it will formally vote on implementing the district goals. However, there could be discussion about the goals prior to the vote as some committee members feel a combination of the recommendations of the Strategy and Policies sub-committee and the district's recommendations should be formed.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh set the district's top three goals, and the School Committee will vote on the language of the fourth goal at its Sept. 20 meeting. Currently, the three goals set by school administrators include: Challenge all students to proficiency and beyond; close achievement gaps where they exist; and function as a professional learning community. The goals were originally presented at the board's Aug. 23 meeting, and at that meeting, Slanetz said he would like to see quantitative measures put in place to enable the board to see exactly where progress is being made.

Slanetz said he would personally like to see Cohasset become a top 10 school in the state and one of the top 100 schools in the nation. "Our vision is to in three to five years, achieve that goal by pretty much any measure you can throw at us," he said. He included a list of quantifiable measures by which the district can assess whether the goals set are being met. To help assess whether achievement gaps are being closed, he suggested monitoring whether the following are taking place:

- More than 65 percent acceptance into most competitive/highly competitive colleges and 15 percent acceptance in Ivy League Colleges.
- More than 85 percent of students and more than 90 percent of students passing Advanced Placement tests.
- The mean SAT and SAT II subject test scores near 700.
- Zero percent in the failing/needs improvement categories and more than 50 percent in the advanced category on all MCAS tests at all grade levels.
- A percentage of Cohasset students placing in academic co-curricular competitions including: International Public Speaking and Debating Competition, MFA Student Rhetoric Competition, Model UN Competitions, MIT Engineering Competitions, Junior Engineering Technical Society (JETS) Competitions, Math Team Competitions, U.S. Math Olympiad, USA Biology Olympiad, MA Envirothon Competition, Siemens Westinghouse Competition, Intel Science Talent Search, Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards, National High School Choral Arts Society Competition, Carnegie Hall National High School Choral Festival, National High School Orchestral Society Competition, MA Drama Guild Competition, and the Certamen Competitions.

When it came to the administration's measurement of achievement and closing the gap between student performance, the MCAS test scores played a bigger role than Slanetz thought was necessary. Slanetz also thought with the emphasis being placed on testing, the administration should have set its goals higher, as it said it would like to see mean SAT scores of 550 or higher for the verbal portion and 554 for math. Slanetz noted the mean scores are currently 562 and 569, and he did not understand why the administration would not set its goal on achieving higher scores.

One of the administration's plans for the future which should provide the information Slanetz and the School Committee is looking for are the new assessment tests which will be given to students in pre-kindergarten through grade 12. While there are tests currently being given, there will be new assessment tools added to the mix. While some of the money to purchase testing materials has been built into this year's budget, Curriculum Coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod has been able to secure a substantial amount of grant funding to make the testing possible.

Discussion will continue on the school district's goals for the future at its Sept. 20 meeting.

District goals discussed

The School Committee met this week to discuss district goals as a result of its Aug. 23 meeting. At that meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh presented a brochure to members of the committee, complete with all three goals, for its approval. Walsh had intended on passing them out to teachers on their first day of school, Wednesday, Aug. 30.

However, members of the School Committee did not want to give blind approval of the goals without having had time to make comments and/or suggestions. Member Steve Fusco said he wanted the School Committee to think about and decide what is important to the town and come back to the next meeting with feedback and suggestions for the superintendent. Once the School Committee has decided which route it would like to take, the superintendent would then be responsible for indicating whether the goals are attainable, and provide solutions for meeting the goals.

"What is the purpose of reviewing if we can't provide feedback?" asked Fusco, adding while he did not feel the report was poorly done, the board might want to make changes. School Committee member Rick Flynn added, "Maybe we should have seen this three weeks ago."

Fusco said he would prefer if Walsh did not pass out the handout to teachers on the first day of school, and the committee agreed to discuss the goals in more depth at a special meeting held only for that purpose on Monday, Aug. 28. Fusco asked all members to do their homework and submit suggestions for what they would like the goals to look like.

The Aug. 28 meeting was cancelled due to a lack of a quorum, and the board's Sept. 6 meeting agenda was full with other business, so the meeting was rescheduled to Sept. 12. Slanetz, who had worked with fellow Standards and Policies subcommittee co-chair Jamie Williams to come up with suggestions, handed out his thoughts for goals at the Sept. 6 meeting to allow board members and the public the opportunity to review his thoughts prior to the meeting held this Tuesday.

Hot governor's race should draw Democrats their party affiliation to do so.

The last day to register to vote or change party affiliation was Aug. 30.

State Senator Robert L.Hedlund, a Republican, is running unopposed in the primary. However, Democrats Matthias J. Mulvey and Stephen A. Lynch are vying to get on the Nov. 7 ballot to seek Hedlund's seat.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Democrat, is unopposed in the primary. But Hingham resident Bob Green, a Republican, has launched a sticker campaign in hopes of getting his name on the Nov. 7th state election ballot. If successful, he would challenge Bradley for the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in Scituate. Green needs 150 voters to either put his sticker on the Republican Primary ballot or to write in his name and address so he name can appear along with Bradley's on the State Election ballot.

Turnout among Democrats is expected to be robust due in large part to the high-profile race for the Democratic Governor nomination.

The three candidates are Christopher F. Gabrieli, Deval L. Patrick, and current Massachusetts Attorney General Thomas F. Reilly.

The winner will go up against Republican Kerry Healey, independent Christy Mihos, and Green-Rainbow candidate Grace Ross on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Deborah B. Goldberg, Timothy P. Murray, and Andrea C. Silbert are running to be the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor. The Republican candidate is Reed V. Hillman.

While Democrats have more contests than the Republicans, a number of high-profile incumbents are unchallenged, including Sen. Edward Kennedy, State Treasurer Timothy P. Cahill, and Congressman William D. Delahunt, along with Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci, Councilor Christopher A. Iannella Jr., Norfolk County DA William Keating, Clerk of Courts Walter F. Timilty Jr., Registrar of Deeds William P. O'Donnell, and county commissioner Peter H. Collins.

Republican Jeffrey K. Beatty will go up against Delahunt in the November election.

In addition, Middlesex County District Attorney Martha Coakley is running unopposed for Attorney General in the primary but will face Republican Larry Frisoli, a former assistant district attorney in the state election. There are no Republican candidates for Auditor or Councilor.

There are a few other races on the Democratic side. Election reform advocate John Bonifaz is challenging Secretary of State Galvin. There is no Republican candidate for Secretary of State.

"Ambassador" Cindia Norton models new Lululemon athletic apparel by the duck pond on Cohasset Common. A Lululemon ambassador is an athlete or yogi from the community who tests the clothes and gives the company feedback.

good," Meers explains. "I've lived on the South Shore. I know just how committed people are there."

The Derby Street Shoppes draws an upscale clientele from throughout the South Shore and provided a location that meshed perfectly with the company's wish list. "Hingham nailed it on all fronts," he says.

Vancouver-based Lululemon was founded by Chip Wilson, whose first company — Morrow Snowboards — produced snowboarding, surfing and skating equipment and clothing. After selling Morrow, Wilson began yoga classes to heal his snowboarding injuries. He realized that interest in yoga was escalating and that a need existed for appropriate garb.

Lululemon's expansion strategy has involved looking for special retail locations, where the population is serious about fitness, health and feeling good.

Wilson seems to be onto something. More than 20 yoga and pilates studios have bubbled up on the South Shore alone. Meanwhile, the Sporting Goods Manufacturing Associations reports that sportswear has mushroomed into a $27 billion business in the United States. A general trend toward active lifestyles and relaxed attitudes about clothing may be fueling that demand. Brands such as Teva and Keen sandals and retailers such as EMS in Hingham and REI (located at Derby Street Shoppes) have found niches in a culture that seeks out comfortable and practical apparel for sporting needs as well as daily living.

Against that backdrop, the San Francisco Chronicle reported earlier this year that Lululemon's products have "become all the rage among the hyper-fit clothes-conscious set in San Francisco, who may not drop major dimes for Saturday night dinner wear, but will go to the upper limit of their budgets to look chicly sporting at the grocery store."

Wilson's desire to raise capital to grow Lululemon led him to sell a minority stake to private equity firms Highland Capital and Boston's Advent International. A contact at Advent International approached Meers about using his Reebok experience to help Vancouver-based Lululemon expand internationally.

At Reebok, Meers was President and CEO from 1996 to 1999. Before serving as CEO, Meers led the Specialty Business Group, where he converted champion golfer Greg Norman from a Reebok endorser to a $100-million sportswear brand. Earlier, as president of Reebok's Rockport subsidiary, Meers expanded the walking-shoe company into an international brand with $355 million in sales and record profits. The National Sporting Goods Association has named him one of the top 10 most influential people in the world of sporting goods and he has been inducted into the University of Massachusetts' Sports Hall of Fame.

In late 2005, Meers left Cohasset for Vancouver and joined Lululemon as CEO. Since that time, he has been instrumental in helping the company expand into the United States, Japan and Australia.

"I knew how challenging it would be for the company to enter the United States from Canada," Meers said. "The best way for me to scratch my passion was to engage full time, not just as an advisor."

Meers compares Lululemon to Reebok in several respects. For one thing, he says, "the product is innovative in terms of both materials and design." Lululemon incorporates into its fabrics such elements as seaweed and silver for their wicking and antimicrobial properties.

Moreover, Lululemon's marketing strategy is similar to Reebok's focus on getting involved with local fitness communities. Reebok became entrenched in the aerobics world in the 1980s through pioneering new equipment and training instructors. Similarly, Lululemon is reaching out to yoga and pilates instructors in its areas by giving them discounts and maintaining bulletin boards in the stores with local class schedules.

"We do very little local advertising," says Jen Malone, Lululemon's regional coordinator for New England. Instead, she explains, the company is focusing on grassroots efforts, which include hosting "design meetings" in homes throughout the area. Attendees are treated to sushi and a $100 gift certificate to the store in exchange for viewing the clothing and listening to a presentation about the company's philosophy.

"They seem very committed to the community," says Alison Rabschnuk. As president of the Hingham Newcomers Club, Rabschnuk was contacted by Malone about hosting a design meeting for 12 women at her home.

After the meeting in late August, Rabschnuk described the products as "multiuse clothing that wicks sweat but looks stylish." As for cost, she says: "They had built it up to be very upscale. Yes, it was expensive, but not so much as I had thought it might be."

In addition to its Hingham store, Meers says Lululemon is scouting out locations in Boston, Cambridge, Wellesley and on the North Shore. His ambitious goal is to open 200-plus stores throughout the United States within the next five years.

As for Meers, he practices what he preaches. In addition to his usual exercise program of walking, kayaking, boating, he says, "I do yoga. It's not pretty, but I do it."

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, through our All Kids Can™ program that helps disabled children learn, play, and succeed. Hope, in the form of nearly $8 million raised for ALS research. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live.

This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

CVS/community. Working in it. Working for it.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Groundswell of unenrolled

Neither Democrats nor Republicans – which are considered the two, major political parties — are doing a very good job of attracting voters to their ranks.

That is the case statewide and right here in Cohasset where unenrolled voters outnumber both Republicans and Democrats, more than 2 to 1. Cohasset has 5492 registered voters including 1244 Republicans, 1189 Democrats and a whopping 2744 unenrolled.

The number of registered voters in Cohasset that has a total population of about 7,200 is impressive. In fact considering the town's population includes those not old enough to vote – nearly all Cohasset adults are registered to vote.

Statewide there are 3.9 million registered voters, with 49.5 percent unenrolled, according to the State House News Service.

We think "unenrolled" is a misnomer because the word sounds kind of like uninterested or uninvolved. It's clear that is not the case. Why would a resident register to vote if he or she did not care about issues or participation in the democratic process?

Clearly most of those registered with a particular political party are party loyalists sharing the same philosophy.

It is difficult to know where unenrolled voters stand or whether they are "leaning" Democrat or Republican.

However, we think registered Democrats will go to the polls Tuesday because there is an interesting primary for their party's nomination for governor, among state Attorney General Tom Reilly, Chris Gabrieli and Deval Patrick. The winner of the primary will face Republican Lt. Governor Kerry Healey, unenrolled candidate Christy Mihos and Green-Rainbow candidate Grace Ross for the keys to the state's top office.

On the Democratic side, there is also a three-way race for lieutenant governor.; Secretary of State William Galvin is facing a challenge; and two local men Stephen A. Lynch of Marshfield and Matt Mulvey of Weymouth are facing off for the right to run against Republican State Sen. Robert Hedlund on Nov. 7. There are also primary races for Clerk of Courts and County Commissioner.

On the Republican ballot, the lone race is between Kenneth Chase and Kevin P. Scott. The winner will challenge Democrat, US Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in November. Bob Green of Hingham, a Republican, is running a write-in campaign and hopes to get 150 votes, enough to put him on the Nov. 7 ballot where he would run against state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham.

What we hope the sea of unenrolled voters understands they can also vote Tuesday. Unenrolled voters can choose a Republican or Democrat ballot and their party affiliation does not change. In other words, they will still be unenrolled when they leave the polls.

The governor's race that will be decided Nov. 7 is likely to be a heated one. Unenrolled voters "leaning Democrat" need to realize they could play an important role Tuesday in deciding which Democrat candidate will be in the running. Unenrolled voters "leaning Republican" can help decide who will challenge Sen. Kennedy and if Bob Green can face Rep. Bradley in the state election.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fees are making waves

To the Editor:

Open letter to all those who will be effecting changes in Cohasset Harbor: mooring fees, user fees, and skiff tie-up fees.

One Cohasset Mariner headline (30 August edition) reads "harbor fee hikes shouldn't create waves."

I submit that the current unfair practice of assigning a fee for a skiff tie-up at a town float does indeed create a considerable "wave." Some skiff owners are charged while others are not, depending on the owner's profession. I submit that all craft tied to town floats should be subject to the same fee structure.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Last Friday, the MBTA told us they were planning to close Beechwood Street at the rail crossing for the next day, Saturday, Sept. 9. So, that's why you couldn't drive down Beechwood Street while doing your routine Saturday errands. We have asked the contractor for a bit more notice, but in this case that didn't happen. It would be especially nice if they could let us know what will be open or closed for the coming week by Wednesday, the weekly deadline for this column. Otherwise there is just no easy way to communicate the happenings to such a wide number of residents. About all we can do is to notify the emergency services and the schools so that they can reroute their necessary emergency and bus runs. The folks at CBB have said that they will work to accommodate our notification request.

Speaking of closures, as of Monday, Sept. 11, Pond Street is closed at Cushing for a protracted period so that the new street intersection and the railroad crossing can be constructed. We expect this closure to be measured in months rather than weeks.

So, why was Beechwood Street closed? The rails are welded into very long strings in Scituate. Then they must be transported to the site where they will be needed next. As you can imagine, moving those rails is an interesting process. In our area, rails are being laid from Scituate northward to Cohasset and then on to Hingham. The more rail they lay, the further north they must move the next batch to be laid. Last Saturday was one of those rail-moving days. (It does make sense to do this work on Saturday, with schools now open.)

We thought you might be interested it what happens when the contractor moves rail and how they move it. Fortunately, your noble scribe stopped by and documented some of the happenings. The first photo shows the rails loaded on transport dollies. These dollies are nothing more than railroad wheels with racks mounted on top that hold multiple long strands of welded rail. Note in the photo that the rails stretch about as far as you can see. These rails were sitting just south of the Beechwood crossing waiting to be pulled across the railroad crossing.

The second photo was taken looking to the North from the Beechwood Street rail crossing. The rails have just been laid on the ties (also called "sleepers"). It is a bit hard to see, but perhaps you can notice from this small photo how wavy the tracks are. Clearly, this is not conducive to smooth and reliable railroad operation. After the rails are mounted, a very specialized piece of computer controlled equipment rides on the rails and levels the rails by "fluffing" ballast under the sleepers until the rails are true and level. The small track mounted vehicle in the distance is used to move the rails during their initial installation.

Rails, rails and more rails, as far as the eye can see. These rails were sitting just south of the Beechwood crossing waiting to be pulled across the railroad crossing.

It is a bit hard to see, but perhaps you can notice from this small photo how wavy the tracks are? After the rails are mounted, a very specialized piece of computer controlled equipment levels the rails.

Pond Street is closed at Cushing for a protracted period so that the new street intersection and the railroad crossing can be constructed.

Greeting the new anchor

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I know it'll come as a shock to you young folks out there, but there was a time before television.

I can attest to that, having never seen a boob tube until I was preparing to cast my first vote for Harry Truman, a Democrat. Yes, there was one of those, too.

We of that poor benighted generation had to be satisfied with listening weekly to the "Lux Radio Theater" or daily to "Our Gal Sunday" to see whether "this girl from a mining town in the West can find happiness as the wife of a wealthy and titled Englishman."

If we wanted the latest news, we could tune into WBZ in Boston and WBZA in Springfield for a quick 15 minutes at 6 o'clock, or we could go down to Louis Vallas' News in the Landing and get the Boston Record, which came out in the early evening dated tomorrow.

Quite a contrast to the debut last week of Katie Couric, the new anchor of CBS, television's first solo woman newsteller...

That's the way it was when Cornelius T. Scanlan, "the Shawmut Nightly Newsteller," Boston's first television anchorman, came on the scene.

I can still see him, standing in front of a microphone in a bare studio, reading the news from a sheaf of papers in his hand.

Quite a contrast to the debut last week of Katie Couric, the new anchor of CBS, television's first solo woman newsteller, who sat behind a desk the size of a basketball court amid several million dollars worth of graphic arts and delivered what passed for the news.

The opening night of "The CBS Evening News with Katie Couric" was reviewed like the opening night of a Broadway play or a Steven Spielberg movie, with one critic noting that she was "chic in a white jacket and dark skirt" and displayed a shapely leg.

Katie's first newscast contained stories on the Taliban in Afghanistan, an interview with New York Times columnist Tom Friedman, and exclusive pictures of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes and their new baby, Suri, which could have been saved for Entertainment Tonight.

"Pre-packaged non-news," snarled one critic.

All this after it was discovered to the glee of the Boston Herald, which devoted most of page three to the story, that someone from CBS had altered digitally a photo of Katie to make her look some 20 pounds lighter. She is actually, as a friend of mine would say, "a full-figured woman."

Katie, whose best work was done as the co-host of an early morning variety show, is getting a reported $15 million for filling the shoes of Douglas Edwarda, Walter Cronkite, and Dan Rather (pre-2004) in a job that is becoming increasingly irrelevant in the face of all-news channels.

Which leads to the obvious question: is it news that CBS is delivering, or is it entertainment?

Did Edward R. Murrow, the icon of TV news, have it right when he said, "If television (is) to be used for the entertainment of all the people all the time, we have come perilously close to discovering the real opiate of the people."

A breath, a break, a little sportsmanship

COMMENTARY

MARY JANE HANRON

It has been a difficult summer and now it's time to take a breath.... or so I thought. Situations have been challenging and despite the promise of autumn, many appear weary. The days approaching the fifth anniversary of September 11th have been heart wrenching. Though it is completely worthy of honor and reflection, this time remains difficult for all Americans. Also we have relived via the media the first anniversary of Hurricane Katrina. The summer began with the tensions created as North Korea played battle games with its unauthorized missile launches. War was rearing its ugly head once again in the Mid East. Of course, this sparked more unrest in Israel, another little corner of the planet that possesses an understanding of civility, and standing for that which is right and good. Meanwhile battles rage around us in the world where terrorists lurk plotting the potential annihilation of their targets.

It's hard to know how to get around Hingham, drive through the Square or walk by the beach!

Who would have thought in 1997 that the anniversary of the horrific death of Princess Diana as it had been observed for years would barely be mentioned except in small articles on back pages of newspapers? But maybe the world has changed forever.

Of course sports, the great American pastime are wonderful diversions. In good times, they are just plain fun! But they can perform other meaningful social functions. They can be a vast source of healing and unity. The thoughts that drew me to my keyboard, though originally lighthearted, are also sadly cynical. This weekend marked the official opening of the Patriots' season. In the scheme of things, anyone truly upset about the late evening news report I heard should be grateful for such a level of dismay. May it be the worst we ever experience! Apparently, the Patriots had a touchdown scored against them in the first 12 seconds of the game. Then they were booed off the field at half time! What is this world coming to?

Then they were booed off the field at half time! _What_ is this world coming to?

At first, this seemed so inane it didn't deserve comment. Real fans are not offended most likely as the ultimate result of the day was a "win." But a bit later on, it did bring my Dad to mind and what would have been said to us as kids if we had "booed" at a sporting event. I wondered if some of the lessons we learned from him as very little children about sportsmanship might have more significance than we realize in our world today. We are training another generation now. We need to get it right! Sportsmanship teaches many lessons. Among the gifts it can give us are priceless memories, happy recollections, unexpected chuckles and respect.

I was raised in a "hockey" family. My father had played hockey as a little boy, then for his school and was a true student of the game. He had held season tickets to the Boston Bruins since the 1940s and the days of Milt Schmidt (as a player!) Daddy went when they won. He went when they lost. True fans don't jump on the bandwagon during the frenzy of playoff excitement. You take the bad with good. That was part of his "Sportsmanship 101" course. I know he would be proud I am writing this, but he would be saddened there is a need for it to be defined. Sportsmanship to him was part of good living, being a gentleman, having fun and being respectful. He would have thought this should have been "instinct" for everyone by the age of six.

My parents' first date was a Bruins' game. It was Thanksgiving weekend in the mid 1950s. I think it was culture shock for my mother but it was heaven for Daddy. Boston, hockey and a beautiful lady; life was good!

Needless to say, years later as soon as we were old enough, my brother and I loved hockey! One of my childhood "claims to fame" was that I was present at the 1970 overtime playoff game when the Bruins won the Stanley Cup. Many remember it as the game when the moment was captured forever in the famous photo of Bobby Orr flying through the air.

I was still a very little girl that year but the envy of all the boys I knew when my Dad said I could go to the game with him that Sunday. It was Mother's Day and very, very hot. He never said it in so many words but I had been chosen for this honor because I had learned how to behave properly at a sporting event. I guess life was much simpler then; there were still rewards for doing what was right.

In my Dad's world, you went to games to support your team. You clapped for good plays and for behavior that exhibited "class" like shaking hands or helping an injured player. Never did you clap if the other team made a mistake or a bad play. Calling names and booing anyone in the game was unacceptable to him. That was being a bad sport.

This was "sports etiquette" according to John Hanron. For some reason, today, in this era of senseless violence and hateful actions be they on the world stage or the local sports field, its meaning becomes quite profound. Maybe a refresher course in "Sportsmanship 101" wouldn't be bad for the world after all. It would be another precious gift about a great American pasttime that teaches a simple but special lesson about life. I think Daddy would be proud.

For those of us who remember the Boston Bruins of the 1970's and learned our lessons about "sportsmanship" as fervent fans of those champs, it was sad and shocking news to learn that Garnet "Ace" Bailey who wore number "14" was aboard Flight 175 when it crashed into the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001. Bailey perished on that horrific day but, his indomitable spirit lives on at "Ace's Place," a newly renovated playroom for children at Floating Hospital in Boston.

Photography exhibit a work of art

COMMENTARY

MARY SCHIESS

Every three years the South Shore Art Center sponsors an exhibit called Photography Now. This year's show, open until Oct. 22, provides the South Shore audience an opportunity to view a caliber and depth of photography rarely available in this region.

Well known photographer, textbook author, and professor at the Rhode Island School of Design, Henry Horenstein juried the show. He selected from over a thousand entries from across the country.

The exhibit includes almost 90 photographs, about half black and white and half color. For some artistic reason, the black and whites dominate in a quick overview of the gallery. Local artist Cindy Vallino won first place with her 45x45 image of a spider mum. This image sets the exhibit's tone: simple, direct, graphic.

A final glance around the gallery left this viewer feeling a bit jolted, moved beyond a comfort zone.

Generally, Photography Now leans more towards the realistic than the abstract. Jerry, a weathered man, sits framed by American flags and red, white and blue bunting. "Clothes Dryer" by Deborah Grady, juxtaposes the towel-draped clothesline with bathing suits spread on a car roof. A barbershop, empty and too clean, awaits another day's customers. A decaying motel sign from Route One offers a metaphor of society.

From a technical perspective, whether by design or by chance, the exhibit is a textbook of methodology. This includes scanned photographs (including Cindy's First Place winner), photograms, composites, large format Polaroids, a "photographic assemblage", scanning electron microscope images, pinhole camera prints, a contact print, and even a cell phone image (a rather good one). Digital photography is the mainstay, but this exhibit assures that the silver gelatin print is enduring.

What you won't see here: no buoys, no kittens (one dog – two moods), no "perfect birds" (although one photo of birds flying off the frame), no lighthouses. This is not meant to dismiss these subjects. Pretty is out; beauty is in. Portraits confront and communicate. The cell phone image is, ironically, a pastoral scene. Strong graphics convey a sense of immediacy.

A final glance around the gallery left this viewer feeling a bit jolted, moved beyond a comfort zone. The collection, eclectic as it is, makes a statement. Right now, photography is alive and well and living in Cohasset.

Cohasset residents on the front lines

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This week, the nation has been reflecting on the events of Sept. 11, and noticing the way the country has changed over the past five years. America is a nation at war, and Cohasset is well represented on the battlefields, as there are currently 10 men deployed and fighting the War on Terror.

For every 1,000 residents in Cohasset, one man is sacrificing his job, his home, his family, and in some cases will miss the birth of a child.

These current and former Cohasset residents currently serving overseas in harm's way are between the ages of 20 and 41.

As Cohasset remembers all those who were lost during the Sept. 11 attacks, it is a good time to recognize those who are serving in the all-volunteer U.S. Armed Forces.

The Mariner thanks Glenn Pratt, Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee and father of 1st Lt. Christopher E. Pratt who is currently serving in Iraq, for providing the photos and information on the Cohasset men who are currently deployed.

US Air Force 1st Lt. Peter D. Minnar, 24, is stationed in Turkey. He is a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High School, and graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 2004. He received his commission in 2004. Minnar is assigned to the 10th Airlift Command and is stationed at Incirlik, Turkey. He is a C-17 cargo transport pilot.

US Marine Corps Lt. Cpl. Harold "Jamie" Litchfield, 20, is deployed in Iraq. He graduated from Cohasset High School in 2004 and after a summer of working around town with his grandfather, he joined the Marines. Litchfield is assigned to the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines Company B in Iraq.

US Air Force Maj. William E. Baird Jr., 33, a 1991 Cohasset High School, is deployed in Iraq. He received his commission in 1995 when he graduated from the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. Baird has previously served two tours in Afghanistan. He is a search and rescue pilot flying H60 Blackhawks. Baird currently lives in Las Vegas, Nev., with his wife Angela and their three children Tyler, Mason and Chloe.

US Army Spc. Justin H. Maitland, 26, a 1991 Cohasset High graduate, is deployed in Afghanistan. He earned a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Maine, Farmington. Maitland has also earned a Ski Industries Certification at UFM. Maitland joined the Army in 2004 and was assigned to the 10th Mountain Division. Currently, he is an infantryman as part of "Task Force Warrior" in southern Afghanistan.

US Army 1st Lt. Christopher E. Pratt, 24, a 2000 graduate of Cohasset High, is deployed in Iraq. Pratt graduated from Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I. in 2004 with a Bachelor of Arts in Business Management. Pratt received his Army commission in May 2004 and was assigned to the 18th Airborne Corps Base at Fort Bragg, N.C. He has been attached to the 181st Transportation Battalion in Iraq since November 2005.

US Marine Corps Sgt. Grant L. Emde, 28, a 1997 Cohasset High graduate, is deployed in Iraq. He attended the University of Massachusetts, Boston before joining the Marines after the attacks of Sept. 11. Emde served with the Marines in the Philippines and then worked as a lobster fisherman prior to rejoining the Marine Reserve in 2004. He is currently serving with the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines in Iraq.

US Marine Corps Sgt. Michael R. Kennedy, 26, is deployed in Iraq. He attended Cohasset High School and is a 1999 graduate of Roxbury High School. He was at basic training on Sept. 11, 2001 when the attacks on the World Trade Center took place. He is serving his second tour of duty in Iraq since July 4, 2006. He is assigned to the 1st Intel Battalion, MTT Team 5 3/3.

US Marine Corps 1st Lt. Andrew J. Hamilton, 27, a 1998 Cohasset High graduate, is deployed in Iraq. He graduated from Westfield State College in 2003. He received his commission in 2003. Hamilton lives with his wife Lauryn and their daughter Addie in Pensacola, Fla. He recently arrived in Iraq and is a CH-46 helicopter pilot.

US Marine Corps Lt. Cpl. Brendan SK Anti, 26, is deployed in Iraq. He grew up in Plympton, Mass., and moved to Cohasset in 2004. He owns a fence construction company in his civilian life. Anti is a member of the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines Weapons Company, serving in Iraq.

US Marine Corps Lt. Col. Christopher J. Mahoney, 41, is deployed in Iraq. He graduated from Cohasset High in 1983 and Holy Cross College in 1987. He is currently deployed for his second tour in Iraq, and is Squadron Commander of VFMA 242. He lives in Valley Center, Calif., with his wife Mary. Their first child will be born during his deployment.

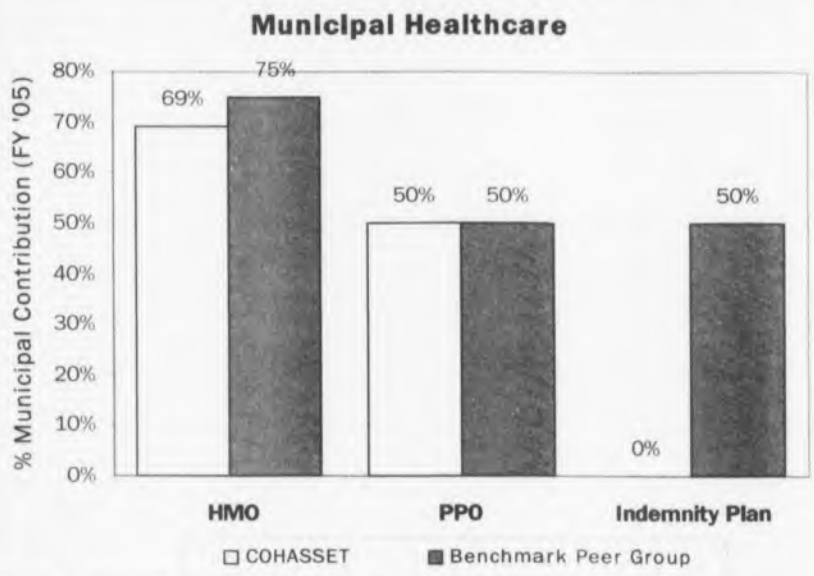
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Results of zero indicate that either the municipality did not offer that type of plan or that the data was not available. If a community covers a different portion of healthcare costs for an individual and family, the reported number is the average of the two. Note that employee groups covered by collective bargaining agreements (i.e. police, fire, etc.) may get a different, negotiated amount of coverage.

This chart shows the portion of healthcare benefit costs that Cohasset pays for its municipal employees by the type of plan. Communities can provide healthcare through an HMO, PPO or indemnity plan. This chart also provides the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Special fall Town Meeting slated for Nov. 13

There is a time change that will take effect this year as the meeting will begin at 7 p.m. instead of 7:30 p.m.

The Board of Selectmen voted to set Monday, Nov. 13 as the date for this year's fall Special Town Meeting. While the board had discussed moving the meeting to a weekend, in the end it agreed to keep the meeting the way it is. However, there is a time change that will take effect this year as the meeting will begin at 7 p.m. instead of 7:30 p.m.

On a related note, Selectman Rob Spofford asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, who was at the meeting for another matter, if it would be possible for him to draft two articles for the Special Town Meeting Warrant. One would change the town's bylaws to amend the date for the annual Town Election, to allow both the town election, any override elections or other elections which need Town Meeting approval, to be held together. The second would change the start time of the Annual Town Meeting, always held on Saturday mornings, to begin at 9 a.m. rather than 10 a.m.

Plans unveiled to develop Cook Estate

"What we see here is maybe what we all wanted in the first place," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, adding in his opinion, building 27 units on the Cook Estate, "seems like a reasonable use of land."

The late Jane Bancroft Cook owned the Cook Estate. The town had been working with the heirs of her estate since 2003 to build senior housing on the site. Voters at the November 2003 fall Special Town Meeting authorized the town to spend $4.5 million for the purchase of the Cook property with the intention of combining the Cook land with adjacent town-owned land, and making a profit when the town sold both pieces of property together to a developer.

The project was put out to bid and Abbott Developers was one of the original bidders on the project. However, the contract was awarded to Northland Residential, which began making plans for building roughly 95 homes on the site. Wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project, which caused Northland to lose the contract as it became necessary to put out a second Request for Proposals for a smaller project. Two subsequent developers planned roughly 65 units on the site, but both pulled out due to tight permitting deadlines. The Weathervane Construction Corporation was the fourth developer to try to work with the town to develop the property, but it too pulled out from the project, which in turn led the town to back out of the deal. The heirs of the estate are no longer working with the town, and the property is now in their hands. The trustees put out a Request for Proposals at the beginning of the summer, and Abbott Development answered the call.

"What we see here is maybe what we all wanted in the first place."
— Al Moore, Planning Board

Durant and McAuliffe said they would be filing the development under the town's cluster zoning bylaw. Previous developers had filed the development under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District Bylaw, which was sunsetted at the Annual Town Meeting.

Developers anticipate the units built in Cohasset would have a similar floor plan to the Plymouth units, which are roughly 2,000 to 2,400 square feet on average and are very open. The Plymouth development is called Seton Highlands and will have 123 homes upon completion. Currently, there are 20 units in different stages of development and 16 have been purchased. They said the master bedrooms would most likely be on the first floor with a spare bedroom upstairs. Homes in Cohasset may be built as singles, duplexes, or triplexes, and those decisions will be made after the signing of the papers. "Right now, we're looking at a bunch of different designs," said Durant.

Members of the Planning Board asked whether developers intend to keep the residence currently located on the property and incorporate it into their design. Durant explained his company is working with a land planner and the house does not look as if it is in good enough shape to be saved. The board also asked whether the developers planned on building on the Cook-owned land, which is located across Sohier Street next to the Fairoaks Lane neighborhood. Durant said he envisions the development as being a neighborhood environment and he does not plan on having a home or two across the street, as it would take away from that community feeling. "I would applaud that," said Vice Chairman Peter Pratt about keeping the property across the street untouched.

Member Stuart Ivimey said he hopes when developers begin nailing down plans for the site, they will take the environment into consideration. "I'm not talking just about maximizing open space," he said, but added there are ways to be energy efficient, which can really make a difference, such as the building materials used and the way the homes face to maximize sunlight. "Jim Shipsky made a great presentation to us a while back," said Ivimey, and suggested developers get in touch with the local environmentalist to hear his thoughts.

"I think that's a great idea. Of course Massachusetts building code has a lot of energy conservation requirements, but we can always do more," said McAuliffe. "Everyone is concerned with energy savings."

Moore said he thinks from the preliminary presentation, the development will be a good addition to Cohasset. While purchase prices have not yet been settled upon for the development, Durant said they would be "reasonable." Moore said he feels the units would provide a level of housing, which is lacking in Cohasset, and fulfill a definite need.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST. . .
YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we include with our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains at least 12 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 12 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you... you see it everyday. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY 30 SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR.

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES. . .

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS. . .

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 12-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING... BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will also receive a FREE consultation with one of our attorneys. During this consultation we will specifically identify the areas of vulnerability your estate has because of the lack of protection your estate plan offers you.

Shipwrecks talk is Wednesday

The Cohasset Historical Society will offer a fall lecture series beginning on Wednesday, Sept. 20, with a program titled, "Shipwrecks of the Stellwagen Bank." Deborah Marx, a maritime archeologist with the Stellwagen Bank National Maritime Sanctuary, will present the findings of numerous investigations into some of the shipwrecks that have been found in waters around the Stellwagen Bank.

All Wednesday evening programs will be held at the Pratt Building, 106 S. Main St., beginning at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge for these programs and light refreshment will be served. Other events planned for the fall season include the Annual Meeting and Fall Dinner on Oct. 22, at The Cohasset Harbor Resort from 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. and the annual Wassail Party on Sunday, Dec. 3, at the Pratt Building from 2 to 4 p.m.

Cedarmere buckles down for the winter

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Due to marketing and technical issues, Leggat McCall said it has had to take a step back and think of another strategy for approaching its build out and sales campaign.

There has been some activity on the Cedarmere site recently, but the work being done is not construction. Leggat McCall Properties, which is developing the site, has been stabilizing the property for the winter, as construction is paused on the project until further notice.

Principal for Leggat McCall Mahmood Malihi came before the Planning Board Wednesday to update the board on what has taken place on the site. Developers had attended a meeting in August to discuss the project with the board, as it was concerned with the lack of activity on the site all summer long, and said it would appreciate an update in the coming weeks.

Due to marketing and technical issues, Leggat McCall said it has had to take a step back and think of another strategy for approaching its build out and sales campaign. Principal for Leggat McCall, Mahmood Malihi, said the housing market is much slower than anticipated; buyers feel restricted by the town's bylaw which dictates children may not stay for more than two weeks on the property; and getting enough units up and running to provide adequate flow for the on-site wastewater treatment plant when units aren't selling, are all challenges to overcome. In addition, the Planning Board expressed its concerns for the site.

Malihi explained the issues the board had in terms of public safety are being addressed. The roads on the site have been compacted to enable rescue vehicles to access the two model homes, which have been built on the property, in an emergency.

He said the company will soon be conducting a flow test on its water main to be sure there is enough water pressure to effectively fight a fire on the site. If the water can flow at a rate of 500 gallons per minute or more, a hydrant would be able to provide enough water to fight a fire. However, a flow of less than 500 gallons per minute means the fire department would need to access its water from the hydrant on Beechwood Street, which Fire Captain Mark Trask explained is a big problem. He said for every minute a fire is left burning, it becomes more and more hot and becomes harder to put out.

"The buildings are not yet alarmed either, which also increases the risk," said Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt. Malihi noted the two buildings, which have been built, are not occupied and would not be without proper fire safety measures in place.

However, Pratt noted if the development needs to use the Beechwood fire hydrant, it would take between 500 and 600 feet of hose to bring water to the site. "That is not what we do in Cohasset. We need a water system built up there. This sets a horrible precedent and I don't like the position we're in. Water for fire suppression is a requirement and we need it up there soon," he said.

The board had also asked the company to clean things up in the buffer areas, as developers were given permission to come closer to abutters' property than the zoning bylaws allow and had left debris in those areas. Now that construction has stopped and that area is no longer necessary for construction purposes, the company said it has moved its materials to a less visible area and plans to re-vegetate those buffer areas.

Malihi said the issues with the Water Department are also being solved, as it had expected developers to pay the application fee for the water connection permit, based on all 104-units slated to be built on the 41-acre site. "We're trying to resolve the fee," said Malihi, and the Water Department has agreed to a phased payment plan, as paying for everything up-front will be a hefty expense, especially as there is no revenue coming in from the sale of units right now.

The Planning Board is also considering bringing an article forward to Town Meeting in the fall which would slightly change the language in the Senior Multi-family Overlay District Bylaw, which the project has filed under, to allow residents to have visitors, such as a grandchild or college student, stay for more than two weeks either during the summer or school vacations. While nothing has been decided upon as of yet, developers are going to bring sample language to the board in the next two weeks to be looked at by Town Counsel.

There are also issues with wastewater disposal that have not yet been settled. Without units selling, there will not be enough flow generated to run the on-site wastewater treatment plant, and temporary septic systems might need to be installed. Malihi said he will continue working with his team to remedy that situation and will keep the board updated.

The board said it felt comfortable with the company's work to date and feels the requests it has made are being met. "It's good to hear the ball is moving forward," said member Stuart Ivimey.

Cedarmere developers will be on an upcoming Planning Board agenda. For more information, please call the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Lady Skippers flying high

Outscore opponents 18-0 through first 3 games

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Through three matches, Cohasset High girls soccer coach Deb Beal could not have asked for a better start.

The Skippers defeated Holbrook, Nantucket and East Bridgewater within the last week – with the first two coming on the road – by an 18-0 aggregate.

And one of the most encouraging things from those 18 goals is that they came from 10 different players. Sophomore striker Torey Hart leads the Skippers with five, including a hat trick in last Friday's season opening 5-0 win at Holbrook, but there has been plenty of quality finishing all around.

"Offensively, we are on fire and many people are scoring," Beal said. "I don't think, a few years ago, we even scored 10 goals in five games. I love their selfishness when going to goal."

Sophomore midfielder Maggie McGoldrick is second on the team with three goals, having scored one each in the Skippers' first three matches. Senior captain Kara Wilcox and freshman Mackenzie Hart both scored twice in Saturday's 8-0 whitewashing of Nantucket, with seniors Caren Garber (captain),

Next up: Archies

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High football started its 2006 season the same way it did in '05: a double-digit win over Nantucket.

The Skippers hope the similarities continue Saturday (Sept. 16) when they travel to Braintree to take on last year's Div. 3 Super Bowl runner-up, Archbishop Williams.

In their second game last season, Cohasset played one of its most exciting games of the year, ending with a 14-14 tie against the Bishops on Alumni Field.

Archies opened its season with a 2-0 loss (yes, 2-0) to Millis of the Tri-Valley League, but Skippers head coach Pete Afanasiw is expecting this game to present a major test for his team.

"We're planning on facing a Super Bowl-caliber team, and we will do our preparation accordingly," Afanasiw said Tuesday.

Against Nantucket, Cohasset was powered by its running game, which went for a remarkable 259 yards on 41 carries. Junior Brian Hill led the effort with 171 yards on 20 rushes, including a 16-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter to cap the game's scoring.

Senior quarterback Anthony DiPaolo scored two touchdowns on the ground, and junior fullbacks Kyle Pinkus and P.J. McCaw both had solid days to round out the Skippers' running attack.

Afanasiw was quick to give credit to the offensive line, which continues to be one of the program's major strengths.

"The line opened up gigantic holes all day," said the first-year coach. "When you average over six yards a carry like we did, it's not all because of the backs. Something is being done up front."

Skippers on even field with EB

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Imagine the following coaching nightmare.

You walk into game one of the season having lost 16 good players to graduation. Then, you square off against last year's Patriot League champions, East Bridgewater, on their home turf.

To put icing on the cake, your opponent includes an All-American field hockey player in the name of Jessica Roberts. That's what Cohasset head coach Deborah Bostwick and her 19 varsity field hockey players faced on Sept. 7 in East Bridgewater.

With 18 years of coaching and more than 100 victories under her belt, Bostwick went to work. Bottom line? The Skippers walked away with a very respectable 3-3 tie.

This outcome is a good omen for the Cohasset field hockey team. Last year the Skippers lost four out of their first five games.

"The girls didn't get discouraged by their mistakes. They communicated well. The players trusted that their teammates would perform their jobs in their positions."
Field hockey coach Deb Bostwick

Then they turned the season around. This year they come out of the preseason, to quote Bostwick, as "the best conditioned team at the beginning of the season I have ever coached." She added, "They clearly worked in the offseason and this will pay off."

So here is how the story unfolded on the Vikings' playing field. Within the first 10 minutes of the game, Roberts justified her title as an All-American when she launched a rocket into the back of the Skippers' goal.

Still stunned by the quickness of the score, Cohasset almost immediately faced another Viking attack, leading to another East Bridgewater goal on the scoreboard.

Just before the halftime whistle, senior captain Sheelah Scott fired over to junior May McCarthy for the Skippers' first goal of the season. This score gave Cohasset a glimmer of hope.

Shortly after the start of the second half the Vikings put a damper on things with a third goal. At this point Bostwick knew she had to shake up the direction of the game. She called a timeout.

This tactical move proved the turning point in the game. With 12 minutes remaining in the game, senior captain Caitlin Hurley assisted Scott to score the second Cohasset goal. About 5 minutes later, senior Michelle Madge passed to junior Corinna Durham, who popped the ball into the net. Durham's score proved to be the final and tying tally of the game.

The Skippers controlled the field for much of the second half. Unfortunately, they could not get the extra point to beat the Vikings.

"The girls didn't get discouraged by their mistakes," said Bostwick. "They communicated well. The players trusted that their teammates would perform their jobs in their positions."

Senior Virginia Spofford also seemed content about the tie with a top notch team.

"After we saw Roberts score that first goal, our defense shut her down," she said. "Without

Cohasset White wins Junior League championship

Cohasset White won the Cohasset-Norwell 2006 Junior League baseball championship. Coached by Bob McCunney, the team won two straight games in the playoffs to capture the first ever Cohasset championship in the league.

The Junior League is the 13-14 year old baseball division that operates under the auspices of the Williamsport Little League. The league offers players a transition from the Little League to High School baseball with field dimensions being the same as regulation baseball.

Of the eight teams in the Cohasset-Norwell division, Cohasset entered three teams: Red, White and Blue; Norwell fielded five teams.

Cohasset White completed the regular season with a 9-2 record then defeated Norwell's AC Fine 11-3 in the semifinals. Cohasset was led by the pitching of Robby McCunney and Jeff Cavanaro and the hitting of center fielder Todd Emanuello.

In the finals, Cohasset met Norwell's Good Brothers Ford team that had raced through the regular season with an undefeated record at 12-0. Cavanaro took the mound and pitched the first three innings and was followed by Robby McCunney, who closed off the game to enable Cohasset to win the first ever Cohasset championship in the Junior League, 6-3.

The game was close throughout and reached its most tense moment in the bottom of the sixth. Cohasset began the inning with a 3-1 lead, but a walk followed by a Norwell double and fielding error allowed Norwell to close the gap to 3-2 with a runner on third base with no outs. With the tying runner on third, McCunney pitched himself out of jam with the aid of a great catch of fly ball by third baseman Sebastian Braga, a strikeout and a pop up to the pitcher to end the inning.

Cohasset added three insurance runs in the top of the seventh on the strength of McCunney's second double of the game and singles by Cavanaro and Jodi Rosano, who went 3-for-4 in the finals.

In the bottom of the seventh, McCunney finished the game in grand fashion by striking out all three Norwell batters to seal the championship for Cohasset. Excellent catching and hitting (double and single) by John Kearney and superb fielding by Emanuello added to the well-balanced team effort.

Cohasset was led throughout the season by a well-balanced team that also included first baseman Kevin O'Connell and outfielders Eric Bartucca and Harry Cippola.

Skippers sophomore Jonny Wade tees off during Cohasset's match against Norwell on Tuesday. Wade shot a 42 to win his match, but Norwell took home the overall team victory. The Skippers golf team opened its season with wins over Mashpee and Harwich, and have a rematch with Norwell on Tuesday (Sept. 19) at Cohasset Country Club.

Seadogs finish high in nationals

The 14-year old South Shore Seadogs came in fifth place out of 68 Division 1 baseball teams at the recent AAU national tournament in Sarasota, Fla.

Based in Hingham, the Seadogs consisted of 14 players from towns in the South Shore, including Robby McCunney from Cohasset. McCunney pitched and played infield, while batting .395 with two doubles and a triple.

The Seadogs knocked off teams from Maryland, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Illinois before succumbing to a scrappy Ohio team 5-3 in the quarterfinals.

Highlights for the players included playing and winning two games in Ed Smith stadium, the spring training home field of the Cincinnati Reds.

her in the picture, we were able to get the ball up the field and produce offensively - very impressive for our first game."

Sophomore Alyssa Mullin showed good composure in the net. Defensively speaking, senior captain Alida Tangherlini and junior Sally Meehan contained the aggressive Vikings. Senior captain Laura Campadelli controlled the midfield while Scott offensively moved things along very well.

Two days later, the Skippers boarded the bus for Mashpee where they faced an inexperienced Sturgis Charter School team. After the showdown in East Bridgewater, this next game seemed like a summer walk down Sandy Beach.

Cohasset wasted no time. Scott scored two unassisted goals. Before the half ended Hurley assisted Spofford in a third goal.

The second half brought more of the same with two unassisted Spofford goals (hat trick!). Hurley racked up another assist when she found Junior Olivia Kimla who finished the pass. As the clock wound down to zero the Skippers walked away with s a confidence-boosting 6-0 win.

On the defensive end, Madge, along with juniors Sondra Hart and Paige Strecker, kept the ball out of Cohasset territory. Hurley, Campadelli, senior Molly Gallagher and junior Meghan Coakely all ran well at the halfback slots. Scott, Spofford, and Kimla hammered away up front.

"This game was definitely less intense than our struggle with East Bridgewater," admitted Tangherlini. "Still, we communicated well and allowed each person to play their own position. This is definitely a strongpoint that will help us out as the season goes on."

The Skippers will certainly need to build on this trust this season. The graduation departures of several athletes - like Katie James, Remy Lee, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Brooke Allen, and Aaron Bigley to name a few - have certainly left big shoes to fill.

Even Bostwick admits that 2006 will involve much rebuilding. But don't get the wrong idea.

"Last year's JV players really know what their doing," said an enthusiastic Bostwick. "They have all played together. So there is even better chemistry this year than last."

Indeed, many of the '06 Skippers, at least at this point in the season, have filled in the gaps quite well. Campadelli and Hurley have taken over from James and Lieb-Lappen at the halfback posts.

Tangherlini picked up where Lee left off at fullback. Spofford has produced as well as Allen did up front. Mullin will protect the net in place of Bigley. She should feel good about walking away with a shut out in the second game.

Bostwick has not acted alone in her effort to improve on last year's performance. Assistant coaches Meg Wiley and Abby Coakley give the athletes plenty of advice and personal attention.

The biggest challenges in the South Shore League will likely come from East Bridgewater, Harwich, and Mashpee. Cohasset faces these teams frequently in the early part of the season.

The big wild card remains East Bridgewater, the new team on the block. Cohasset can't wait for the Vikings to show up on Pond Street. The home opener occurs Tuesday (Sept. 19) against Mashpee.

and Jake Cuneo, guards Paul St. Pierre and Cliff Musto, and center Nick Cambi all had strong games on Saturday. Hill's scoring run came on a counter to the left side of the line with Lynner, making his first varsity start, leading the way.

Hill also had 50-yard run on the Skippers' first possession helped set up Cohasset's first touchdown, a two-yard sneak by DiPaolo.

The drive of the game came in the third quarter, with the Skippers marching 80 yards on 11 plays and eating up most of the frame's 10 minutes. DiPaolo finished the drive with a 16-yard run to the right side, electing to keep the ball on an option.

Afanasiw said he was very impressed by the effort from his defense. Pinkus, an outside linebacker, made some unbelievable hits that the coach said could be heard from the sidelines. Cuneo and senior linebacker Colin Conway each recorded a sack, while Musto, playing defensive end, helped contain the Whalers' quarterback in the pocket and allow his teammates to get pressure up the middle.

The secondary also played an excellent game, led by junior cornerback Sam DeGiacomo and junior safety Mark Flibotte. DeGiacomo forced a fumble and had a few big hits of his own.

Cohasset also seems to have figured out its kicking game, as junior Pat Doonan made two extra points, with the third failing due to a bad snap. Afanasiw said the kicking decision wasn't made until the middle of last week when Doonan, who had been doing the long snapping on kicks, decided to give kicking a shot.

"He just started drilling extra points like he'd been doing it his whole life," Afanasiw said. "He has a pretty decent leg from 30 yards in, so we might be kicking some field goals from around there. He's got a good enough leg

Colleen Richardson and Karoline Holt each adding one apiece in that game.

Senior captains Lara Novak and Emily Coggins, as well as sophomore midfielder Kristin Monaco, all have a goal each.

Many players on the roster play club soccer, and Beal says playing against the caliber of competition at the club level has instilled a lot of confidence in those players, with that confidence also rubbing off on the girls who don't play for a club.

Beal says another key to her team's early success has been its communication on the pitch.

"I believe that the manner in which we have communicated in the past was part of our problem," said the coach. "I have been stressing since day one that you need to understand that when someone on the field either yells to or at you or seems to criticize your actions, you need to realize that you are playing a game and not to take the comments personally. It isn't always going to come out pretty. When something is said, it is said because someone saw something that needed fixing. I have been impressed with our attitudes and how we handle each other."

One player that continues to impress is sophomore keeper Johanna Brophy, who made a couple great saves against East Bridgewater for her third clean sheet in as many games. "Awesome" and "fearless" are two words Beal uses to describe Brophy, who will see time in the field as well when senior keeper Shalea Daly is ready to play.

The midfield has so far demonstrated a nice blend of toughness and skill. Beal praised McGoldrick, Sarah Coggins, Emily Coggins and Garber for "doing an outstanding job controlling and creating plays." Monaco and seniors Alyssa Hinman and Haley Haracz are right behind them, waiting their turn to create offensive attacks.

Ultimately, Beal believes Cohasset's biggest strength may be its defense. Sophomore Sammie Lehr, junior Anna Haggerty, Richardson and Sarah Coggins have all played smart soccer to help keep opponents off the board.

In the season opener, the Skippers were prepared for Holbrook's infamous offside trap. Cohasset still got caught off several times, but were still able to create plays with good positioning. Beal said the offside calls in the second half may have actually benefited the girls, who were able to catch their breath a bit with each whistle.

Saturday's trip to Nantucket was all an all-around success, according to Beal.

"The weather was awesome and the day was full of traveling and fun," she said. "We left the high school at six in the morning and returned at 6 that night, so we put in a full day's work. Nantucket is a young team that played us tough, but our goal scorers kept them at bay.

The girls felt pretty good going into their home opener against East Bridgewater on Tuesday. The Vikings play a very physical brand of soccer, and a few Skippers got a little banged up. Beal attributed that win to her team's exceptional fitness level and ability to stand up to EB's aggressive style.

"They definitely stood right up to it," Beal said of her players. "They are a group that's really confident in their individual skills. You don't often get 11 kids on the field that are all confident in their skills like that. It's nice to see and nice to coach.

Cohasset figured to get its first true test of the season Thursday (Sept. 14) when it hosted Abington, whom the Skippers haven't beaten since 2003. The Skippers will then host Carver on Monday, and then travel to Harwich on the 20th to kick off a stretch of seven straight road games.

to get it done."

Afanasiw said he will be looking for improvement in the team's passing game, which gained just 43 yards on nine attempts on Saturday.

"We had two interceptions and a fumble in our passing game, and it's not just on Anthony. It's on everyone," said the coach. "If we can't do better than that, that will be a big thorn on our side."

Overall, though, Afanasiw liked what he saw in his first game at the helm.

"After a long trip, I was concerned about the energy level," he said. "But that wasn't an issue; they went at it the whole game."

Annual SIDS Road Race to be run this Sunday

On Sunday, Sept. 17, the 25th annual SIDS Road Race will be taking place in Hingham to raise funds for the Massachusetts Center for SIDS. The 10K Walk-a-thon, which follows the same course as the run, attracts both dedicated walkers as well as those participants who wish to gather pledges and support the event. The two-mile Fun Run is an event for all ages, where everyone is a winner. The course is flat and easy and welcomes runners and walkers from the youngest to the oldest. It is a true family event.

Pre-registration is $15 for all races. Post-registration is $20 for all races. Registration opens at 8 a.m. on Sept. 17, with race times starting at 9:30 a.m. (10K Walk-a-thon and two-mile Fun Run) and 10:30 a.m. (10K Road Race).

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Getting back in full swing at school isn't easy

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Hang in there guys, there's a half day coming up, and a 4-day weekend in October.

Things are back in full swing; and students are still adjusting to the school schedule. It seems like everyone has a case of the "Mondays." Between the college process, jobs sports, homework and extracurricular activities students scramble to get everything done and squeeze in a few hours of sleep. The butter is being spread awfully thin — and this is only the second week of school. Hang in there guys, there's a half day coming up, and a 4-day weekend in October.

Freshmen further acclimated themselves to the high school with the help of an orientation breakfast this Thursday. On a side note, here's a personal thank you to the teachers who put in the extra effort to captivate pupils. A 90-minute lecture is one of the most powerful sedatives. Before this column starts to cause drowsiness, here is the news.

Good luck making this weekend count, because another Monday is coming, along with all the assignments from today. That's right, summer is long gone. Seniors, get going on those college essays, those applications won't complete themselves. But — if someone discovers a self-completing college application, call me.

Pitfalls of overachieving

The Hingham High School PTO and Buttonwood Books & Toys will host New York Times best-selling author, Alexandra Robbins, on Tuesday, Oct. 3, 7 p.m., at Hingham High School, 17 Union St., Robbins will discuss her new book, " The Overachievers: The Secret Lives of Driven Kids, " which questions how to prepare the next generation for their role in society

Robbins followed several top high students from her alma mater, Walt Whitman High, in Washington, D.C. over an academic year. "The Overachievers" is about what she learned and observed during this time. The need to be perfect is at the core of her characters and Robbins writes about their drive and grueling schedules. The author questions the current process of SAT testing and the college application procedure and reviews the flaws, offering suggestions for changing the process.
